CHRISTMAS IN THE HOLY LAND — 1972

As Christmas 1972 comes to the Holy Land, the changes wrought in the nearly 2,000 years since Jesus walked there obscure some of the paths He trod. Yet there remains many of the landmarks — like the Mount of Olives viewed from above the walled city of old Jerusalem — that still evoke memories of His words and works.

Safe Apollo Landing Ends Moon Program

Scientists Believe Cargo Most Valuable Returned

ABOARD USS TICONDEROGA (UPI) — The last men of Apollo landed safely in the South Pacific today with the moon prize they sought and a treasure of souvenirs marking the end of an era in which man conquered the moon.

Three orange and white striped parachutes lowered Apollo 17's command module into the gentle seas at 2:25 p.m. EST in full view of television cameras aboard the recovery ship.

The bullseye landing was a fitting finale to the last Apollo moonflight.

"America is stable one," exclaimed Cernan after the spacecraft hit the water. That meant the capsule did not overturn as many previous Apollos have.

"The crew is go," Cernan said.

The aircraft carrier Ticonderoga stood by to retrieve the astronauts and start them on the way home to Houston Thursday to join their families and friends for the Christmas holidays.

The moon explorers slashed into upper fringes of earth's atmosphere traveling 6.8 miles a second and decelerated quickly to a gentle parachute landing in just 13 minutes. It may be decades before men fly that fast again.

As the last Apollo mission neared earth, the space agency announced that the moon explorers had on board their spaceship 50 Apollo-17 silver medallions, 24 moon flag pins, 10 sets of wings, 25 American flag lapel pins, more than 2,000 flags, 440 Apollo patches and other assorted memorabilia, in addition to a dozen personal mementoes each. The agency said the distribution of the souvenirs would be announced after the explorers' return.

The astronauts will be back home in Houston Thursday, in time to spend the Christmas holidays with their families.

Shelter, Clothing Sought By Lagunitas Fire Victims

By MARY LEYDECKER

While most Marin residents bustled about, finishing up Christmas shopping today, one little family from Lagunitas was desperately trying to find such necessities as shelter and clothing.

Patricia Evansco, young mother of three children, lost virtually everything she owned Saturday in a fire which destroyed the old building next to the Lagunitas post office, in which she rented an apartment.

"We have nothing," she said yesterday.

Like many people who have gone through a tragedy, Mrs. Evansco remembered what seemed like little things first.

"My daughter (Denise, 10) had earned some money and bought a Barbie camper. . . that went along with everything else," she said sadly.

Since the fire, which also burned two other apartments, Mrs. Evansco has been staying with her mother in Richmond, while the children are with relatives and friends.

To compound her problems, Mrs. Evansco's car had the transmission fail, and she is having difficulty getting back and forth to Marin. She works at Purcell's shoe repair shop in Fairfax, where she is especially needed because of the owner's recent death.

He said he thought his agency could help Mrs. Evansco with such items as bedding, "but we don't have enough money for large items like furniture."

He said the Department of Public Social Services was going to give Mrs. Evansco $100 for clothing for herself and the children, since she had been receiving aid to supplement her small income. The welfare department may also be able to help with some furnishings.

Braden said Mrs. Evansco had been living in county-leased housing and it might be possible to find her another such unit but, in the meantime, she faces the same discouraging picture

Staggered Hub Sewer Repair Plan

By PAT PERRY

In an effort to save the life of downtown San Anselmo, the Ross Valley Sanitary District board last night decided to stagger its plans to dig up the city's central streets for sewer installation over two years. (Another sanitary district story, page 3.)

The first phase, to begin next summer, will be to install the 36-inch diameter sewer trunkline from Bolinas Avenue as far as Tunstead Avenue. The 14-foot-deep trench for the project will be constructed in the westerly lanes of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard between Ross Avenue and Tunstead, and mean only a three-day disruption to the downtown area in crossing Tunstead.

The second phase won't start until the summer of 1974. Then, in a concentrated all-out effort the rest of downtown San Anselmo Avenue — the city's major shopping area — will be dug up block-by-block for about 14 days.

Directors told District Engineer J. Warren (Ed) Nute to get an estimate of costs for double and triple shift working for the San Anselmo Avenue stretch "so maybe it can be done in two working weeks and the merchants could take a two-week vacation."

The concessions were in response to appeals from the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, which claimed the district's original plans to dig up downtown for some five months next summer "would kill the town."

At a meeting with Nute on Nov. 17, San Anselmo businessmen claimed 50 per cent of them would go out of business if the five-month project schedule went through. They asked the district to investigate alternate methods of getting the job done.

Last night, Nute presented the staggered plan, to the board. He thought the 14-day all-out effort on San Anselmo Avenue in 1974 might satisfy some of the businessmen's fears, and suggested it would give the merchants and the city time to work out some extra parking on the land at the corner of Sir Francis Drake and Center boulevards.

The district itself might face possible trouble too, he warned, since it must file an environmental impact statement for the project. In addition to the impacts on the environment, the statement must consider the social and economic impacts, he advised.

Admitting the businessmen "do have a point" in their concerns over the fragile nature of the town's recent revival, Nute warned directors: "When we come to the environmental impact report we do have to consider these kinds of things, you might have to assign a social cost . . . how many people would go out of business . . . things like this would be very hard to tell."

The sewer trunkline has been ordered by the Regional Water Quality Control Board to eliminate bypass sewers which pollute creeks and to replace the 1920s era, 21-inch concrete pipe through the Ross Valley.

The sewer trunkline will be installed through Ross along Shady Lane next spring at a cost now estimated at $425,000, hooking up with the San Anselmo section at Bolinas Avenue.

Admitting they were troubled at the potential impact on downtown San Anselmo, the sanitary district directors quizzed Nute on ways to lessen the blow.

Director George C. Davison asked if the contractor could assign several crews . . . "tell him he's going to have to go to work in more than one location, start in two or three places. We

Revamping Of Expense Account Spending Asked By Councilman

By NELS JOHNSON

Expense account spending by San Rafael city officials may be far more costly than expense vouchers reveal, a San Rafael councilman declared last night as he proposed a revamping of handling such spending.

A $3 luncheon may cost the city as much as $19, according to Councilman John A. Miskimen, who attributed the hidden cost to the added expense incurred by city processing of expense checks. "It costs about $16 every time you write a check," he told startled colleagues.

Finance Director John B. Averett confirmed the revelation, saying studies of corporate finance procedure in big business have shown the cost of a $3 voucher mushrooms as it is processed and consumes time and effort of financial officials.

Miskimen suggested that the council eliminate the possibility of such iceberg expenses by alloting each councilman a flat monthly fee of about $20 for expenses incurred in day-to-day activities, and council colleagues agreed to study the proposal during budget hearings in June.

Miskimen — a member of the city's finance committee who has been studying city financial matters in the wake of Independent-Journal accounts of city expense procedures — also suggested that the city's method of reviewing claims at council meetings is meaningless.

"The city has already taken a legal obligation to purchase an item when we see a claim," he said. The councilman suggested the council meet on a weekly basis to approve "cash revolving account" expenses before they are made. Presently, the revolving account vouchers represent expenses already made in the preceding two weeks, he said.

Miskimen said the council finance committee is now provided with a summary sheet documenting revolving expenses "although we did not used to be" provided with a summary.

He called for careful review of all staff expenditures by the city manager and finance director, and declared that the finance director "should operate outside the normal chain of command of the city manager."

"We have to give the city treasurer and finance director (Averett fills both positions) a clear understanding that he is to refer to the finance committee any suggested changes for the handling of funds," Miskimen said. "Any impropriety he may even suspect" in expense account spending should be referred to the finance committee, he said.

Averett told the I-J last September that he had no authority to overrule expenses by city leaders. If funds are available in a particular account for an expense approved by City Mgr. James H. McCown, the city treasurer must issue reimbursements, Averett said then.

"Everyone should have someone checking on his expenditures," Miskimen said. Currenty, McCown and finance committeemen (Miskimen and Councilman Fred E. Jensen) approve their own expenses.

The councilman said it was not his intent to discourage

Truman Kidney Ills Reported Improved

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Doctors treating Harry S Truman said today the seriously ill former President's kidney function improved and he was aware that people were around him.

"He follows people's movements with his eyes, but has not spoken to them," said Research Hospital spokesman John Dreves at a morning medical briefing.

"Kidney output has increased during the last 24 hours," he said. "He continues to receive adequate nutrition even though protein intake remains curtailed."

Dreves said Truman, 88, had his second straight restful night and "seems more alert this morning."

At 9 a.m. EST, Truman's blood pressure was 140 over 60, pulse was 80, respiration was 24 and his temperature was 97 degrees.

Late Monday night, Dreves said Truman's kidney function had dropped to less than 10 per cent effective.

Dreves added, "10 per cent is the critical point. Below 10 per cent is inadequate." He said he could not be more specific.

Reporters asked him how the 88-year-old former President was able to hold on day after day and Dreves said, "That's just President Truman. I can't define that."

Dreves said, "fluid in his lungs has not increased. His heart is weak but essentially unchanged. He is still semiconscious and in no apparent pain. His vital signs remain stable and within normal limits."

The 33rd President, who was hospitalized Dec. 5 with a weak heart, hardening of the arteries and lung congestion, developed serious kidney trouble six days ago and medicine has failed to improve them. A kidney machine was ruled out as being too dangerous in view of his weak heart.

Doctors reduced Truman's liquid food intake Monday by a third, from 1,500 cubic centimeters to 1,000—slightly more than a quart—to reduce the workload on his kidneys.

U.S. Command Confirms Raids Continues Over Hanoi, Haiphong

SAIGON (UPI) — The United States has carried out the heaviest bombing raids of the war against the Hanoi-Haiphong area, Hanoi Radio reported today. It said the strikes were in their third day and a U.S. Command spokesman confirmed they were still going on.

The raids Monday night and today, Saigon time, were the most costly of the war. Two $8 million B52s were shot down, apparently by Russian-made SAM missiles, and one $15 million F111 was shot down apparently by ground fire.

Hanoi Radio said six crewmen of a B52 were captured when the bomber was shot down near the North Vietnamese capital. The U.S. Command said seven fliers were rescued and eight were missing.

There were indications the United States had used all 100 of its available B52s against the Hanoi area, the first time the big planes have bombed in the immediate area of Hanoi. In addition scores of fighterbombers from Thailand and from U.S. 7th Fleet carriers flew through rain clouds and gale winds to hit the north.

Although there were no official figures available it appeared that the Monday night - Tuesday morning raid could have been the single largest of this or any war.

In World War II the Allies mounted a number of 1,000 plane raids against Germany—raids which eclipsed the German attack on London known as the "Blitz"—but those planes carried between 2.5 and 6 tons of bombs each.

Military observers estimated the B52s, which carry 30 tons of bombs each, and the fighter-bombers which can carry eight tons each hit the Hanoi-Haiphong area with upwards of 6,000 tons of bombs.

By coincidence, the raids occurred as Le Duc Tho, the man who negotiated on a ceasefire agreement with Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, had just returned to Hanoi, a North Vietnamese spokesman said in Paris.

Radio Hanoi quoted the North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry as claiming "hundreds of plane sorties, including B52 strategic bombers" repeatedly hit North Vietnam from 1915 hours of Dec. 18, 1972, to the morning of today, Dec. 19. Subsequent broadcasts spoke of the bombings being in the third day.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedham said the U.S. planes were striking targets in North Vietnam that had not been hit previously. He declined to cite any specific targets. Electrical plants, truck parks and warehouses in the cities of Hanoi and Haiphong were not struck at least in the past because of the high concentration of civilians in those areas.

Also not attacked in the past were North Vietnam's Defense Ministry in downtown Hanoi and the Gia Lam Airport, used for both military and civilian aircraft.

Friedheim said that during the eight-week bombing halt that ended Monday many transport lines, bridges and oil pipelines north of the 20th Parallel had been repaired and put back into service. He indicated such targets were being hit again to take them out of service.

Council Deadlocks Again On Filling Barbier Seat

The San Rafael City Council last night again failed to fill the council seat vacated by the death of Harry A. Barbier after a second closed session on the matter produced no change in deadlocked ballots cast previously. (Other San Rafael City Council stories, page 39.)

Instead, the council called a special election — to coincide with the expiration of Barbier's term on April 17 — to fill the seat.

The council last night took no formal vote on appointment of a fifth member, but determined after an informal discussion that only the voters could decide the matter.

No councilman shifted from votes made on Dec. 4, when planning commissioner Thomas R. O'Toole received two votes and John A. Starkweather, president of the Dixie School District board, and Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, received one vote apiece.

Other candidates who applied for the post are: Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; Carl J. Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School; Gar C. May, an optometrist and James Dougan and Albert J. Boro, San Rafael planning commissioners.

The council last night took no formal vote on appointment of a fifth member, but determined after an informal discussion that only the voters could decide the matter.

No councilman shifted from votes made on Dec. 4, when planning commissioner Thomas R. O'Toole received two votes and John A. Starkweather, president of the Dixie School District board, and Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, received one vote apiece.

Other candidates who applied for the post are: Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; Carl J. Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School; Gar C. May, an optometrist and James Dougan and Albert J. Boro, San Rafael planning commissioners.

Policeman Indicted

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A grand jury yesterday charged a suspended policeman with beating and shooting George C. Freeman, assistant chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America, when their cars bumped together in the Lincoln Tunnel.

Freeman was cleared of counter charges that he tried to run down the off-duty patrolman, John V. Reig, 21.

The grand jury named Reig in an eight-count indictment charging with with assault with intent to kill and unlawful possession of a firearm. Reig was suspended 17 days after the Nov. 11 incident.

Terrorism Action

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. General Assembly sidetracked a U.S. effort last night to set up the machinery for combatting world terrorism by voting instead to create a committee to study the problem.

It was the Assembly's final political action of 1972.

By a vote of 76-35, with 17 abstentions, the Assembly established a 35-nation committee to consider terrorism. The move killed any prospect for early action on the issue.

Another Killing

BELFAST (UPI) — Three gunmen kidnaped and killed a member of the Northern Ireland police authority late yesterday, increasing the death toll there in the past eight days to 12. Gunmen wounded two other persons in separate shooting incidents earlier in the day.

Police said they found the body of William Johnston in the back seat of an abandoned car on a country road near the border dividing Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Pilgrim Protection

TEL AVIV (UPI) — A military source said today Israel would take security precautions "as strong and as good as we are able" to guard Christian pilgrims against Arab guerrilla attacks in the Holy Land during the Christmas season.

The statement came as the Tourism Ministry predicted an estimated 20,000 visitors would be thronging to Bethlehem on Jordan's occupied West Bank for Christmas Eve and Day.

"I have no intention of frightening tourists or pilgrims," the military source said. "But it is clear that we have to take more precautions than usual" during the holiday season.

More Heroin Lost

NEW YORK (UPI) — With 80 pounds of the famous "French Connection" heroin admittedly missing, the Police Department yesterday found a discrepancy in its records leaving another 15 pounds unaccounted for.

A former police official said the difference of 15 pounds between what his report on the 1962 drug case said and the amount turned into the police laboratories was caused by his estimating and not weighing the total amount of heroin confiscated.

The heroin in question was seized Feb. 24, 1962, in a Bronx raid which helped break a smuggling ring that became the basis of a novel and the Academy Award-winning movie, "The French Connection."

New Wage Pitch

DETROIT (UPI) — A Phase III wage-price — the primary objective of which would be the elimination of all controls and the return to "the discipline of the competitive market" — was proposed today by General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg.

As envisioned by Gerstenberg, Phase III would set "sensible and understandable" criteria for both wages and prices — 5½ per cent for annual increases in wages and 2½ per cent per year for prices.

Only price or wage hikes that exceed these criteria would be subject to review by a review board of presidentially appointed government officials. Once inflation is moderated, he said, controls would be terminated.

Tragedy For Senator

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — Nealia Biden, whose husband Joseph R. Biden Jr. claimed she was the driving force behind his election last month as the second youngest member in the history of the Senate, died yesterday in a traffic accident.

Amy Biden, 1, the couple's youngest of three children, was also killed when the station wagon driven by Mrs. Biden was struck in the side by a truck loaded with corn cobs and slammed 150 feet into a stand of trees.

The truck turned over and Biden campaign literature and corn cobs littered the suburban highway. State police said the truck driver, Curtis C. Dunn, 33, of Avondale, Pa., escaped injury.

The other children were hospitalized — Joseph III, 3, with leg injuries and Hunter, 2, with head injuries.

Soviet Budget Talk

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Supreme Soviet (parliament) debated a 1973 budget today calling for expenditures of $219.6 billion and emphasis on civilian spending instead of military.

The Communist Party's ruling central committee already has endorsed it.

Thus approval by the 1,517 members of the two houses of parliament was a foregone conclusion. The Supreme Soviet has not rejected a government proposal in 40 years.

No Pay Hikes For Sweepers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Board of Supervisors reversed itself Monday and decided not to boost the pay of San Francisco's 187 streetsweepers.

"This issue has generated tremendous public comment and discontent," Supervisor Peter Tamaras declared before the 10-0 vote.

Previously the board had voted to boost the pay for sweepers to $25 a day in six months.

Developer Lawsuits Are Settled

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —In a $58.5 million settlement of six lawsuits, Boise-Cascade Corp. agreed Monday to refund purchase costs on demand and make promised improvements on 20 "recreational" subdivisions in California and Nevada.

"It is a complete settlement as far as we are concerned," said California Attorney General Evelle Younger, who filed some of the suits.

"Those who want out are getting out and others who didn't want out but wanted improvements are getting those."

He said the company agreed to return $24 million to buyers who want cash, to spend $21.5 million on administration and maintenance of the properties, and to spend another $13 million to complete certain portions of the projects.

Boise-Cascade was accused in two federal suits and four state suits of misrepresenting the lots in some cases with questionable advertising.

Boise-Cascade sold about $360 million in recreational lots at 19 projects in California and one at Incline, Nev., between 1967 and last July, when it discontinued its realty business.

Younger said the settlement will need approval from six different courts but no difficulty is anticipated. Then, he said, notice will be sent out from the courts advising buyers of their choices.

Younger said Boise-Cascade will put $32.5 million in a trust fund to augment the agreement, which was announced jointly with District Attorneys William O'Malley of Contra Costa County and Harold Berliner of Nevada County.

The attorney general said that after agreement was reached between the company and state that Boise-Cascade's selling practices were illegal, "they acted in a very responsible manner."

George McGown, vice president of Boise Cascade and general manager of its realty group, insisted the settlement was not a determination of wrongdoing on Boise Cascade's part or by its salesmen.

He said the disbursements will fall within reserves created earlier this year as part of a $200 million extraordinary charge and will not be deducted from current or future earnings. The write-off, announced in July, resulted primarily from the company's decision to get out of land sales.

Nixon Picks Mother Of Five For Cabinet

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Anne Armstrong, an attractive brunette mother of five who holds a Phi Beta Kappa key, rides horses and speaks Spanish, has been appointed to the highest government post any woman has held in 12 years.

President Nixon Monday named Mrs. Armstrong, who celebrates her 45th birthday next week, to be a presidential counselor.

The post is of cabinet rank, and the highest job held by any woman since Oveta Culp Hobby was Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower administration.

"It is a tremendous honor to be appointed counselor to the President, and I look forward to the challenge such a position offers," Mrs. Armstrong said.

She will assume her new duties Jan. 19 when her tenure ends as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

In another administration change, the Washington Post reported today that John G. Veneman was resigning as undersecretary of health, education and welfare to re-enter California politics. His replacement in the No. 2 HEW post, the newspaper said, will be Frank C. Carlucci, deputy budget director.

Veneman may run for lieutenant governor of California, the report said. Carlucci formerly headed the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Mrs. Armstrong is a native of New Orleans. She is a graduate of the exclusive Foxcroft School in Virginia's foxhunting district and Vassar College where she earned the Phi Beta Kappa key for academic excellence.

She has lived with hus husband Tobin Armstrong on the Armstrong Ranch in south Texas for the past 22 years, winning two terms on the local school board and serving in a variety of state GOP posts including national committeewoman.

Reagan Puts Signature On Tax Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Reagan and the Democratic leaders of the Assembly went their separate philosophical ways today after formal signing of the $1.1 billion school finance and property tax relief bill which they cosponsored.

Reagan signed the massive tax bill yesterday in Los Angeles with Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and state Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles topping the list of state officials joining the Republican governor in the smiling ceremonies.

The bill gives local schools their biggest-ever increase in state support and cuts the average homeowner's property tax by about $140 a year. That is paid for by a one cent per dollar increase in the sales tax and a 1.4 per cent hike in bank and corporation tax rates.

Now Reagan's top tax advisers are working on his proposal to give most of the state's estimated $700 million surplus back to taxpayers in an income tax cut or rebate.

Moretti and other Democratic leaders are talking about other new programs the surplus could buy. And they see an income tax hike, not a cut, in the future if the state Supreme Court rules that the Reagan-Moretti tax bill hasn't done enough to equalize the differences between California's richest and poorest school districts.

But they were unanimous in praise of the bipartisan tax bill they hammered out together in the bill-signing ceremonies at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Reagan called the bill "a great victory for the legislative process" and said it "represents the first decisive victory in several decades to reform California's antiquated tax structure."

"This landmark legislation not only reduces the heavy property tax burden on our beleaguered homeowners, but even more important, it guarantees that homeowners taxes will be held down in the years to come," Reagan said.

Moretti, from Van Nuys, said final passage of the measure after months of negotiation "shows what can be achieved when various political factions want to work together."

Nominee For Post Knocks Press Probe

DALLAS (UPI) —Texas oilman William P. Clements, President Nixon's nominee for deputy secretary of defense, said Monday reporters should have "dug a little deeper" before publishing details about a six-year-old suit accusing him of conspiracy and fraud.

Clements called the reports "unfair and misleading" and denied that his drilling company was involved in any conspiracy to hide $7 million in profits on an Argentine oil well contract.

The suit, filed in 1966, names Clements, Southeastern Drilling Co., and three other officials and stockholders of Southeastern as defendants. Southeastern is a subsidiary of Sedco, Inc., which Clements owns.

The suit claims the defendants netted $25 million on contracts for drilling 1,000 Argentina oil wells, but that they then claimed a profit of only $18 million. The $7 million discrepancy is important because Clements promised to give two men involved in the deal 20 per cent of the net profits.

"If only the reporters had dug a little deeper they could have easily found out about the entire transaction," Clements said.

The suit has gone through one trial and two appeals and apparently is due for another trial in federal court in the spring.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the Nixon administration knew about the suit before they named Clements to the No. 2 post in the Pentagon.

"It was our opinion nothing contained in these actions would in any way disqualify Mr. Clements from serving in the administration," Ziegler said.

Clements said he did not expect the suit to hinder his confirmation by the Senate "because the actual facts of the case have been known for years."

The suit was filed by Antonio A. Diaz, a Buenos Aires businessman, who also was supposed to receive a certain share of the profits. But Clements said two other men involved in the deal, Charles R. O'Neal of Washington and William N. Dillin of Corpus Christi, Tex., were behind recent reports of the lawsuit. Both men have since given up their U.S. citizenship.

"The source of this information is two disgruntled American malcontents both of whom have had sizeable tax liens against them," Clements, 55, said.

"All parties agreed to take the audit of Price-Waterhouse as the final word on what the profits were," he said.

Car Pool Lanes May Be Booted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The chairman of the State Toll Bridge Authority says a special meeting may be held before January 1 to vote on whether to discontinue the special car pool lanes on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Chairman Frank J. Walton says the lanes for car pools of three or more persons have done little to reduce congestion during early morning commute hours.

The experiment was started March 1. The center lanes of the span approach were first free to car pools but a $1-a-month fee was added later.

Lucas Valley Development Is Planned

Owners of a vast stretch of undeveloped land in Upper Lucas Valley have prepared a general plan calling for a 745 unit development, landowner representative Albert Bianchi has announced.

Proposed are 180 single-family residences, 425 townhouse units and 140 garden apartments on 2,732 acres owned by the Alfred Luiz and Edward J. Grady families, he said. Some 370 units are proposed for the 1,118-acre Grady property and 375 units for the 1,614-acre Luiz property, he said.

The parcels are located beyond Marinwood on both sides of Lucas Valley Road.

Bianchi said that the proposed general plan, drawn by the Sausalito planning firm of Sasaki and Walker, would leave about 93 per cent of the acreage in open space and includes a "convenience village center" or country-store shoppers' facility.

The Marin County Planning Commission will consider the general plan at 9 a.m. Jan. 8.

Bianchi said that Lucas Valley homeowners, long concerned with the future of the property, had expressed "substantial agreement" to the proposed general plan. Homeowners at a meeting on Monday called for a greater housing mix, fewer apartment units, and asked that development be limited to low-lying areas.

Bianchi, who said up to 1,350 units currently were allowed on the land under current agricultural zoning, said most units are proposed for areas lying below the 240-foot level of the area, which is marked with picturesque hillsides and ridges.

Joan Fernandez, board member of the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association, said her group "agreed in concept" with the proposal but is urging that the 370-unit density proposed for the Grady property be halved. "We think that 370 units is too high a density on that difficult terrain," she said.

She said the association will meet again with Bianchi and planning consultants prior to the Jan. 8 hearing.

Homeowners have been seeking to rezone the property to planned residential development to limit development of the area, she said.

Agency Is Firm On Plant's Buffer Zone

The Ross Valley Sanitary District board last night stood firm in its decision to condemn 41 acres of land around its sewage treatment plant on the San Quentin Peninsula, despite pleas from a Larkspur businessman who intends to develop a restaurant and museum in the neighboring Remillard brick kiln. (Another sanitary district story, page 1.)

Robert H. Lee, a Larkspur city councilman, suggested 41 acres was "excessive" as a buffer zone for the proposed new subregional treatment plant.

"You only need 10 acres, I've never seen a treatment plant that had 30 acres as a buffer zone," he complained.

But the board remained adamant. President Eugene Ostaggi said the land surrounding the plant would prevent "someone looking down upon it and imagining odors."

Already the Ross Valley Sanitary District's plant on the peninsula handles sewage from the entire Ross Valley basin, he said, "over half the population of Marin county.

"It's a very important thing . . . if we don't take care of these people the regulatory bodies will make sure we do."

Lee said the treatment plant and his proposed restaurant "could live together compatibly" (the Remillard brick kiln is included in the lands to be compulsorily purchased by the district in its condemnation suits ordered Nov. 20.)

Referring to Larkspur's recent rezoning of the peninsula for a mammoth apartment and commercial development on the T.I. Properties holdings at the Hutchinson Quarry and Remillard lands, member Peter A. Ribar added:

"This subregional treatment plant is a necessity for all of Central and southern Marin. We are going to take ultra-conservative measures to see that service is provided — it's an essential governmental service regardless of T.I. Properties or any restaurant."

Director George C. Davison said it was natural that the sanitary district "is on the defensive". Claiming that the treatment plant was there first, he said he didn't think housing was compatible next to "the sewage of 150,000 people."

The district will have a big public investment to protect he said, and didn't want to face possible law suits from neighboring commercial and housing interests.

The Ross Valley Sanitary District board also:

INSURANCE — Agreed to pay an additional $976 on its annual insurance policy premium with Pacific Indemnity for comprehensive liability coverage, paying up to $2 million in bodily injury and $1,100,000 in property damage.

CORTE MADERA — Noted indignantly that the Corte Madera Sanitary District hadn't answered its letter of complaint about septic sewage and excess flow and the only way they learned the town had installed a chlorinator was by reading it in the Independent-Journal; heard from District engineer J. Warren Nute that Corte Madera has been pumping twice the permitted flow under its contract with the district, and decided to wait until the end of the month for an answer.

CONTRACT — Agreed to pay Nute $30,000 for engineering studies, and $6,000 for design for the installation of the state-mandated trunk sewer line through Ross to be constructed next spring at a cost of $425,000, deviating from its original route along the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project because the project was delayed by the Valentine suit against Ross; the original creekside route would have cost $362,000 said Nute.

JOINT POWERS — Delayed acting on a joint powers agreement that the San Rafael Sanitation District had already signed because the Southern Marin sewerage agency (Improvement District "A") hasn't ratified it yet; the agreement is for consolidation of sewage treatment for all of Southern and Central Marin, in the proposed subregional plant on the San Quentin Peninsula.

PERMITS — Heard from District Mgr. Ned J. Ongaro that the state Regional Water Quality Control Board has assigned the district 1,099 new single-family sewer connection permits for 1972.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to its next regular meeting on Jan. 2 at 8 p.m. at the district office.

Deadline On Out Of Town Mail At Hand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U. S. Postal Service says time is diminishing for cards and letters to reach their destinations before Christmas.

In fact, Postmaster General E. T. Klassen said Monday that the only out of town mail delivery that can be guaranteed now is airmail.

Klassen said the flow of mail has been good and the "Christmas Communication Center" believes that if persons who still have local mail send it no later than Thursday, than all holiday mail should be delivered before Christmas.

Fisher Hits Casino With A Big Suit

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Eddie Fisher filed a $2 million breach of contract suit against Caesars Palace Hotel Monday, charging he was only paid for three weeks of a 17-week engagement in 1968.

Fisher is seeking $1 million in damages plus an additional $1 million on grounds the contract also stipulated he could not perform at any other resort in the Las Vegas area until the contract expired Oct. 5, 1972.

Rainy, Warm Holiday Seen For North Bay

The temperatures will rise and the rain will continue to fall and the outlook for Marin and Southern Sonoma counties is for a wet and warm Christmas.

The weatherman predicts a new storm front moving in from the Hawaiian Islands which is expected to dump even more rain on the soggy Bay Area tonight.

This week's series of abnormally high tides combined with rainfall caused flooding of Lowry's Yacht Harbor in San Rafael at high tide this morning, and cut the harbor's electricity supply.

Last night at about 8:30 o'clock, the state Division of Highway's Petaluma office reported three minor landslides on Shoreline Highway near Bolinas. The rocks and mud were cleared "almost immediately" said officers, and caused no problem to travelers.

Temperatures are 30 and 40 degrees higher this week than they were in last week's record-breaking freeze. The overnight low of 57 degrees in San Rafael compares to the reading of 24 degrees on Monday night last week.

Heavy rain fell over both counties last night, dumping 1.4 inches on the Tamalpais Valley; 1.19 inches on Bolinas; 1.05 inches in Sausalito, and an inch on Mill Valley. By noon today the rain was drying up, leaving a warm moist fog smothering the hills.

There are those who blame the moon landing for the contrary weather of the past two weeks.

However, these pundits can find little to back up their theories. When Apollo 11 went up in July 1969 the weatherman predicted a hot spell, but clippings from the Independent-Journal indicate it never materialized.

Last year Apollo 16's landing came during one of the driest years on record in Marin — but it was dry well before and after the April landing.

At the time of today's landing the weather was far from gorgeous in Marin and Southern Sonoma. . .but it may well have been balmy in Tahiti, and the astronauts zipped over there too.

must keep the time limit down."

Director A.N. Nipper asked if Nute's estimate of 14 days for the 1974 stage included weekends, and when Nute said it didn't, suggested an intervening weekend thrown in with two working weeks might cut down the project from three to two weeks disruption.

Nute said the deep trench, which will require shoring, would be dug and closed up again block by block, but Nipper said:

"If blocks are closed it will damage the blocks that aren't closed just as seriously; why not put a crew in each of three blocks?"

Nute said that method "would be quite a mess."

Directors responded that the town will be "quite a mess" either way.

Director Peter A. Ribar also worried about the extra cost of double shifts. Nute said running double shifts on the second-phase on San Anselmo Avenue in 1974 would increase the estimated cost of that section from $105,000 to $131,000, with construction starting at about 5 a.m. and ending at 9 p.m.

He had talked to contractors about night shifts — as suggested by the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, but the costs would be prohibitive; it would be dangerous, and would necessitate returns during daylight to pour concrete.

Board president Eugene Ostaggi said the district would agree to the two-phase construction period, and would let two separate contracts, one for the stretch from Bolinas Avenue to Tunstead in 1973, and a second from Tunstead to Sanders Avenue in 1974.

Nute was instructed to investigate costs of two or three crews working simultaneously, and report back to the board's Jan. 2 meeting. After that he will meet with the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce and report the district's actions.

Youngsters Are Dug Out

Two Novato youngsters, trapped in mud along the highway bypass project in Novato, were rescued yesterday afternoon by workmen from the Freeman-Sondgroth Construction Co., co-contractors on the project.

Bobby Yoe, 7, and his sister, Carrie, 9, of 8 Harkle Road were in mud up to their waists "and beyond," and workmen dug them free with shovels, according to Fire Chief Jack W. Kidder.

The youngsters were uninjured, Kidder said. The incident, reported at 3:25 p.m., occurred on the new stretch of road between Harkle Road and Franklin Avenue.

Two Differ On Firing Of Fireman

An Alto fireman, discharged yesterday, has declared his dismissal reprisal for union activity, a claim rejected by the fire chief.

Chief Carl Heynen Jr. said Ray Giacomino, 28, a probationary employee, lost his job because he didn't seem to fit in," not because of union activity.

Heynen said Giacomino's charges against the department are those of a "disgruntled" man. Giacomino had said he was dismissed because of his efforts to win collective bargain rights for Alto firemen.

Heynen said Giacomino was notified yesterday morning, after working for the department about six or seven months, that he was being dismissed. He had been on a one-year probationary period, the chief said.

Yesterday afternoon, according to the chief, a letter arrived from Local 400 of the Civil Service Association, asking a meeting with commissioners to discuss the possibility of the Alto firemen becoming unionized.

Chief Heynen said at least one other of the department's 12 firemen was also interested in seeing a union formed but "that is their prerogative."

Giacomino claimed it was the letter that had prompted his firing.

The district's fire commissioners will probably discuss the union matter at a meeting on Jan. 4, the chief said.

Fairy Tales Set For Mill Valley

The Pyramus and Thisby Co. of Berkeley will perform fairy tales, animal stories and Mother Goose rhymes at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Old Mill School in Mill Valley.

The performance by the company, formerly the children's theater wing of the Berkeley Repertory Theater, will be sponsored by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts.

Rezoning To Double City Size

The Rohnert Park City Council last night rezoned 680 acres for future development that will double the size of the city.

City Clerk Kathryn Logue said plans also include three elementary school sites, a junior high school, a 9.6-acre community park and 40 to 50 acres of small parks, open space and trails.

Developer James Rogers said work would begin soon on the first phase of single-family homes.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

FEES — Approved a $75 increase in the bedroom tax to be used for public improvements such as a library and fire station. Tax on a three-bedroom home will be $350, with $250 allotted for parks, $25 for a football stadium and $75 for improvements.

PLANNING — Appointed Arthur Hollingsworth to replace James Cronin on the planning commission in January. Councilman Vernon P. Smith abstained, saying Cronin should have been reappointed.

CONFLICT — Heard Smith question whether Planning Commissioner Raymond Goff has a conflict of interest since he holds a real estate license. He said he would prepare a suggested policy statement next month on such matters.

REZONING — Approved the request of Codding Enterprises for zoning on 5.5 acres at Rohnert Park Expressway and South Santa Rosa Avenue to permit a motel, service station and coffee shop.

REVENUE — Agreed to hold the $27,800 received from federal revenue sharing until budget delib-erations next year to decide how it should be spent.

PARK — Asked the County of Sonoma to join in a grant application to the state to buy land in the Sonoma Mountains for a regional park.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting Jan. 2 at 7 p.m.

as anyone looking for low-cost housing in Marin.

"We just have to go to the public for help" in such cases, Braden said. He added the Red Cross would act as a collection point for clothing, toys, furniture or housing leads for the family.

(Two other tenants burned out in the fire which started about 10 a.m. have said they do not need help. Braden reported.

Braden said the Red Cross "does not receive the support it did years ago" and that public money available to such disaster victims has also been tightened up.

Twenty-nine-year-old Mrs. Evansco and her sons, Tony 6, and Frankie 11, and 10-year-old Denise are victims of changing times, he said.

He added that various agencies are trying to get together to solve such problems but in the meantime, "we have to depend on the public."

Conditional Permit For House Approved

The Belvedere Planning Commission last night approved a conditional use permit and variance to permit K.O. Collins to construct a two story house at 264 Bayview Avenue.

City Mgr. William L. Cavalli said the variance was necessary because the lot is substandard size. He said all new construction and extensive remodeling currently requires a use permit under the city's building moratorium.

Their detailed technical and scientific reports have been delayed until after New Year's Day.

The Apollo 17 command ship America, and the four-legged landing craft Challenger left behind at the moon, worked flawlessly. Ground communicator Gordon Fullerton told Cernan they were the two best spacecraft in the entire $25 billion moon project.

Although the 121-2-day, $450 million mission was the 11th and last in the Apollo series dating back to 1968, the pilots returned with a promise that the program is only the beginning of man's search into the unknown.

"Once there's a beginning, there's a continuation," Cernan said during a televised news conference while the spaceship was 100,000 miles from home Monday. "The probing into deep space by man —the next landing on the moon, a trip to Mars —may not be for 10 years, it may not be until the end of this century, but I personally have faith that it will happen."

Scientists hailed the flight of Apollo 17 as the most productive of all six lunar landing expeditions. Schmitt was the first geologist on the moon and the Apollo Lunar Geology Investigation Team said in a report the mission benefitted greatly from his presence.

"I think the thing we hoped to accomplish at Taurus-Littrow was to look at as broad a spectrum of the history of the moon as possible in one small area," Schmitt said. "And I think we did that."

Schmitt said he believes the collection of lunar samples may contain some of the oldest rocks on the moon, dating back beyond 4 billion years ago, and the youngest.

The prize of the mission was orange soil Schmitt found on the rim of a crater called Shorty. Schmitt, long an expert in examining such material, said the rusty colored soil was "reminiscent of the alteration by hot water or hot gases on Earth."

The geology team in Houston called the discovery "remarkable" and said it "lends credence to previous suggestions that Shorty and some other nearby dark, sharp-rimmed craters may be relatively young volcanic features.

"Such a discovery would result in a major revision of current thermal models (theories) for the moon," the detailed, 36-page report said. In other words, scientists now suspect the moon's volcanic activity lasted much longer than originally supposed, possibly as recently in geologic terms as 500 million years ago.

Body Of Man Is Found In Bay

The badly decomposed body of an unidentified man was found floating in San Francisco Bay near Angel Island yesterday, according to Donald L. Cornish, coroner's deputy.

The man, described as between 30 and 35 years old, six feet tall, 170 to 180 pounds, had been in the water about two weeks, the coroner's office said.

He was discovered about 3:15 p.m. by men working on an Army Corps of Engineers barge in the area.

The body was clad only in shredded socks. Cornish said a tattoo of a heart with an arrow through it, intertwined with a ribbon with "Mom" inscribed, was found on the left forearm.

An autopsy was to be performed today. The body was taken to Russell and Gooch Funeral Home in Mill Valley.

OBITUARIES

Rites Set For John F. Coen

A Mass of the Resurrection for John F. Coen, 61, a state investment officer will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of Loretto Church, Novato.

Coen of 310 Galle De La Mesa, Ignacio, died Saturday at a local hospital, apparently of a heart attack. He was an investment officer for the State Compensation Fund in San Francisco.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus in Novato, past president of the Little League of Hamilton Air Force Base and Loma Verde, a graduate of the University of San Francisco and a member of Gamma Eta Kappa fraternity.

Coen was a native of San Francisco and had been a resident of Ignacio for 15 years.

Surviving are his wife, E. M. (Bobbie) Coen, of Ignacio; two sons, John S. Coen, in the Navy, and Timothy J. Coen of Ignacio, and a daughter, Stephanie J. Coen of Ignacio.

Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Chapel of Marin, Novato. The family prefers that memorial contributions be to the heart fund.

MRS. BOND

Ferolin B. Bond of Santa Rosa, mother of Betsy Carman of Corte Madera, died yesterday in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital, apparently after suffering a brain hemorrhage. She was 77.

Mrs. Bond was rushed to the hospital Sunday night after collapsing in the home of her daughter in Corte Madera, where she was visiting for the holidays.

She was a native of Northville, Mich., and had lived in Santa Rosa for the past 11 years. She had lived in California 48 years.

She was a retired school teacher, and taught for many years in the Oakland public school system.

She was a member of the California Teachers Association and of the Daughters of the American Colonies.

She is also survived by a son, Howard C. Bond of Watsonville; two sisters, Carrie Morrison of Oakland and Bessie B. West of Santa Rosa, and nine grandchildren.

Memorial service will be at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the First Church of Religious Science in Santa Rosa. Cremation will be at the Chapel of the Chimes in Oakland.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Tuberculosis Association or the the charity of one's choice.

HELEN CHAMBERLIN

A native of Nebraska, she had lived in Marin County for 65 years until moving to Rialto four weeks ago. Her husband, the late Herbert Chamberlin was an attorney in San Francisco.

She was active in civic affairs in Marin County. She was president of the Marin County Tuberculosis Society in 1956 and 1957. She was also a member of the Red Cross, Marin County Humane Society, Marin Art and Garden Center and the Marin County Book Club.

She is survived by two brothers, William D. Hurd of San Bernardino and Wayne Hurd of Denver, and four sisters, Myrtle Grandey of San Bernardino, Florence Stone of Denver, Bertha Fisher and Harriett Ellingsen of Highlands, San Bernardino County.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m., Thursday at Grove Colonial Mortuary in Rialto. Following cremation, her ashes will be buried in Mountain View Cemetery, San Bernardino.

ELIZABETH SPANGENBERG

Funeral for Elizabeth W. Spangenberg, former resident of Larkspur and San Anselmo, will be at 1 p.m. Thursday at Lisle Funeral Home in Fresno.

She died Sunday in a Fresno hospital after a long illness.

Mrs. Spangenberg was born in Walla Walla, Wash., and was graduated from Oregon State University at Corvallis. She had lived in California for 37 years, most of it in Marin County. She and her husband, Normand F. Spangerberg, a retired United States forester, moved to Fresno five years ago.

She was a member of Holy Family Episcopal Church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Earl Spangenberg of Wisconsin, and two grandchildren.

Burial will be in Fresno.

JOHN FREEMAN

Funeral and burial for John Boone Freeman of Wilkes Hotel, 1135 Fourth Street, San Rafael, will be in Abington, Pa.

Freeman, 40, was found dead in his room Saturday. Apparently he had been dead for several days, according to Marin County Coroner.

An autopsy-report is scheduled, according to the coroner.

He is survived by his mother Jean Freeman of Abington.

BERNICE MORRIS

The obituary for Bernice June Morris of Fairfax in yesterday's Independent-Journal neglected to include among her survivors her brother, Clarence R. Herold of Novato.

The obituary also said Mrs. Morris succumbed after a brief illness, but members of the family report she had not been known to be ill and had died unexpectedly.

MICHAEL SHABEL

Funeral for Michael Shabel of 30 Bayview Drive, Larkspur, will be Thursday at 10:30 a.m. at Daphne Funerals, 1 Church Street, San Francisco.

Shabel died Saturday in a San Francisco hospital. He was 75.

A native of Russia, he had lived in California for 49 years. He was a retired longshoreman.

He is survived by his wife, Theresa of the family home.

JOSEPHINE MARTINEZ

Josephine Martinez of Mill Valley died yesterday in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was 72.

She was a native of San Francisco and had lived in California all her life. She was a 23-year resident of Mill Valley.

She is survived by her husband, George Martinez Sr.; a daughter, Josephine Lundwall, and a son, George Martinez Jr., in Mill Valley; a sister, Marie Swanson of San Francsico; a brother, Steve Smario of San Francisco and seven grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Catholic Church in Mill Valley. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Russell and Gooch funeral chapel in Mill Valley.

participation at meaningful meetings. "We're talking about day-to-day activities," he said.

Miskimen said moreover that he is not opposed to the possibility of wining and dining a developer or industrialist interested in investing in the city through redevelopment.

City financial procedures came under fire last September when revolving account vouchers revealed that several city leaders had been accustomed to meeting for lunch and charging the city.

At issue then and the target of Miskimen's financial report last night is the controversial cash revolving account, a fund set up to pay for day-to-day expenses incurred by city leaders while on city business. The account pays for conferences, luncheons, training courses, travel expenses including gas, airfare and hotel accomodations and library postage, among others. Also paid from the account are "payroll trusts" or early payment of salaries to employees taking paid leave or vacation.

The account exists to take care of expenses that occur between council meetings and before council authority is given, according to Miskimen. A check is drawn against the account, and the account is replenished at the next council meeting through finance committee "approval" of expenses.

Rainy, Warm Holiday Seen For North Bay

The temperatures will rise and the rain will continue to fall and the outlook for Marin and Southern Sonoma counties is for a wet and warm Christmas.

The weatherman predicts a new storm front moving in from the Hawaiian Islands which is expected to dump even more rain on the soggy Bay Area tonight.

This week's series of abnormally high tides combined with rainfall caused flooding of Lowry's Yacht Harbor in San Rafael at high tide this morning, and cut the harbor's electricity supply.

Last night at about 8:30 o'clock, the state Division of Highway's Petaluma office reported three minor landslides on Shoreline Highway near Bolinas. The rocks and mud were cleared "almost immediately" said officers, and caused no problem to travelers.

Temperatures are 30 and 40 degrees higher this week than they were in last week's record-breaking freeze. The overnight low of 57 degrees in San Rafael compares to the reading of 24 degrees on Monday night last week.

Heavy rain fell over both counties last night, dumping 1.4 inches on the Tamalpais Valley; 1.19 inches on Bolinas; 1.05 inches in Sausalito, and an inch on Mill Valley. By noon today the rain was drying up, leaving a warm moist fog smothering the hills.

There are those who blame the moon landing for the contrary weather of the past two weeks.

However, these pundits can find little to back up their theories. When Apollo 11 went up in July 1969 the weatherman predicted a hot spell, but clippings from the Independent-Journal indicate it never materialized.

Last year Apollo 16's landing came during one of the driest years on record in Marin — but it was dry well before and after the April landing.

At the time of today's landing the weather was far from gorgeous in Marin and Southern Sonoma. . .but it may well have been balmy in Tahiti, and the astronauts zipped over there too.

must keep the time limit down."

Director A.N. Nipper asked if Nute's estimate of 14 days for the 1974 stage included weekends, and when Nute said it didn't, suggested an intervening weekend thrown in with two working weeks might cut down the project from three to two weeks disruption.

Nute said the deep trench, which will require shoring, would be dug and closed up again block by block, but Nipper said:

"If blocks are closed it will damage the blocks that aren't closed just as seriously; why not put a crew in each of three blocks?"

Nute said that method "would be quite a mess."

Directors responded that the town will be "quite a mess" either way.

Director Peter A. Ribar also worried about the extra cost of double shifts. Nute said running double shifts on the second-phase on San Anselmo Avenue in 1974 would increase the estimated cost of that section from $105,000 to $131,000, with construction starting at about 5 a.m. and ending at 9 p.m.

He had talked to contractors about night shifts — as suggested by the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, but the costs would be prohibitive; it would be dangerous, and would necessitate returns during daylight to pour concrete.

Board president Eugene Ostaggi said the district would agree to the two-phase construction period, and would let two separate contracts, one for the stretch from Bolinas Avenue to Tunstead in 1973, and a second from Tunstead to Sanders Avenue in 1974.

Nute was instructed to investigate costs of two or three crews working simultaneously, and report back to the board's Jan. 2 meeting. After that he will meet with the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce and report the district's actions.

Youngsters Are Dug Out

Two Novato youngsters, trapped in mud along the highway bypass project in Novato, were rescued yesterday afternoon by workmen from the Freeman-Sondgroth Construction Co., co-contractors on the project.

Bobby Yoe, 7, and his sister, Carrie, 9, of 8 Harkle Road were in mud up to their waists "and beyond," and workmen dug them free with shovels, according to Fire Chief Jack W. Kidder.

The youngsters were uninjured, Kidder said. The incident, reported at 3:25 p.m., occurred on the new stretch of road between Harkle Road and Franklin Avenue.

Rezoning To Double City Size

The Rohnert Park City Council last night rezoned 680 acres for future development that will double the size of the city.

Shapell Industries of Northern California received zoning for houses, apartments, townhouses and a small shopping center on the 680 acres north of Hinebaugh Creek.

City Clerk Kathryn Logue said plans also include three elementary school sites, a junior high school, a 9.6-acre community park and 40 to 50 acres of small parks, open space and trails.

Developer James Rogers said work would begin soon on the first phase of single-family homes.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

FEES — Approved a $75 increase in the bedroom tax to be used for public improvements such as a library and fire station. Tax on a three-bedroom home will be $350, with $250 allotted for parks, $25 for a football stadium and $75 for improvements.

PLANNING — Appointed Arthur Hollingsworth to replace James Cronin on the planning commission in January. Councilman Vernon P. Smith abstained, saying Cronin should have been reappointed.

CONFLICT — Heard Smith question whether Planning Commissioner Raymond Goff has a conflict of interest since he holds a real estate license. He said he would prepare a suggested policy statement next month on such matters.

REZONING — Approved the request of Codding Enterprises for zoning on 5.5 acres at Rohnert Park Expressway and South Santa Rosa Avenue to permit a motel, service station and coffee shop.

REVENUE — Agreed to hold the $27,800 received from federal revenue sharing until budget delib-erations next year to decide how it should be spent.

PARK — Asked the County of Sonoma to join in a grant application to the state to buy land in the Sonoma Mountains for a regional park.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting Jan. 2 at 7 p.m.

Two Differ On Firing Of Fireman

An Alto fireman, discharged yesterday, has declared his dismissal reprisal for union activity, a claim rejected by the fire chief.

Chief Carl Heynen Jr. said Ray Giacomino, 28, a probationary employee, lost his job because he didn't seem to fit in," not because of union activity.

Heynen said Giacomino's charges against the department are those of a "disgruntled" man. Giacomino had said he was dismissed because of his efforts to win collective bargain rights for Alto firemen.

Heynen said Giacomino was notified yesterday morning, after working for the department about six or seven months, that he was being dismissed. He had been on a one-year probationary period, the chief said.

Yesterday afternoon, according to the chief, a letter arrived from Local 400 of the Civil Service Association, asking a meeting with commissioners to discuss the possibility of the Alto firemen becoming unionized.

Chief Heynen said at least one other of the department's 12 firemen was also interested in seeing a union formed but "that is their prerogative."

Giacomino claimed it was the letter that had prompted his firing.

The district's fire commissioners will probably discuss the union matter at a meeting on Jan. 4, the chief said.

Fairy Tales Set For Mill Valley

The Pyramus and Thisby Co. of Berkeley will perform fairy tales, animal stories and Mother Goose rhymes at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Old Mill School in Mill Valley.

The performance by the company, formerly the children's theater wing of the Berkeley Repertory Theater, will be sponsored by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts.

"We just have to go to the public for help" in such cases, Braden said. He added the Red Cross would act as a collection point for clothing, toys, furniture or housing leads for the family.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m., Thursday at Grove Colonial Mortuary in Rialto. Following cremation, her ashes will be buried in Mountain View Cemetery, San Bernardino.

ELIZABETH SPANGENBERG

Funeral for Elizabeth W. Spangenberg, former resident of Larkspur and San Anselmo, will be at 1 p.m. Thursday at Lisle Funeral Home in Fresno.

She died Sunday in a Fresno hospital after a long illness.

Mrs. Spangenberg was born in Walla Walla, Wash., and was graduated from Oregon State University at Corvallis. She had lived in California for 37 years, most of it in Marin County. She and her husband, Normand F. Spangerberg, a retired United States forester, moved to Fresno five years ago.

She was a member of Holy Family Episcopal Church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Earl Spangenberg of Wisconsin, and two grandchildren.

Burial will be in Fresno.

JOHN FREEMAN

Funeral and burial for John Boone Freeman of Wilkes Hotel, 1135 Fourth Street, San Rafael, will be in Abington, Pa.

Freeman, 40, was found dead in his room Saturday. Apparently he had been dead for several days, according to Marin County Coroner.

An autopsy-report is scheduled, according to the coroner.

He is survived by his mother Jean Freeman of Abington.

BERNICE MORRIS

The obituary for Bernice June Morris of Fairfax in yesterday's Independent-Journal neglected to include among her survivors her brother, Clarence R. Herold of Novato.

The obituary also said Mrs. Morris succumbed after a brief illness, but members of the family report she had not been known to be ill and had died unexpectedly.

MICHAEL SHABEL

Funeral for Michael Shabel of 30 Bayview Drive, Larkspur, will be Thursday at 10:30 a.m. at Daphne Funerals, 1 Church Street, San Francisco.

Shabel died Saturday in a San Francisco hospital. He was 75.

A native of Russia, he had lived in California for 49 years. He was a retired longshoreman.

He is survived by his wife, Theresa of the family home.

JOSEPHINE MARTINEZ

Josephine Martinez of Mill Valley died yesterday in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was 72.

She was a native of San Francisco and had lived in California all her life. She was a 23-year resident of Mill Valley.

She is survived by her husband, George Martinez Sr.; a daughter, Josephine Lundwall, and a son, George Martinez Jr., in Mill Valley; a sister, Marie Swanson of San Francsico; a brother, Steve Smario of San Francisco and seven grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Catholic Church in Mill Valley. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Russell and Gooch funeral chapel in Mill Valley.

participation at meaningful meetings. "We're talking about day-to-day activities," he said.

Miskimen said moreover that he is not opposed to the possibility of wining and dining a developer or industrialist interested in investing in the city through redevelopment.

City financial procedures came under fire last September when revolving account vouchers revealed that several city leaders had been accustomed to meeting for lunch and charging the city.

At issue then and the target of Miskimen's financial report last night is the controversial cash revolving account, a fund set up to pay for day-to-day expenses incurred by city leaders while on city business. The account pays for conferences, luncheons, training courses, travel expenses including gas, airfare and hotel accomodations and library postage, among others. Also paid from the account are "payroll trusts" or early payment of salaries to employees taking paid leave or vacation.

The account exists to take care of expenses that occur between council meetings and before council authority is given, according to Miskimen. A check is drawn against the account, and the account is replenished at the next council meeting through finance committee "approval" of expenses.

Defeated Miner President Quits

NEW YORK (UPI) — Without explanation, W. A. (Tony) Boyle resigned Monday as president of the United Mine Workers several weeks before the man who defeated him in a closely-supervised election steps into the office.

Boyle then got permission from the union's executive board to address it as a "rank and file member" at a meeting today.

The board voted to give Boyle a $50,000 per year retirement pension, which equals his full salary. Arnold Miller, the insurgent who defeated Boyle in the court-ordered election, has said he would try to strip Boyle of the pension.

W. A. (TONY) BOYLE
Surprise resignation

Leonard Pankovich, the union's vice president who also was defeated, succeeds Boyle as head of the 205,000-member union until Miller can be installed—probably next month. He said his tenure would serve to bring about "an orderly transition of power."

Final but unofficial returns of the election, supervised by the Labor Department, showed Miller with 70,372 votes and Boyle with 56,334. The Miller-Boyle election was ordered by a federal court because of irregularities in the 1969 election Boyle won from Joseph "Jock" Yablonski three weeks before Yablonski, his wife and daughter were slain.

A union official reported that Boyle stepped to the microphone at a board meeting and announced, "I tender my resignation effective today. I will not be your international president after today. The vice president automatically becomes president of the international union." Boyle refused to answer questions.

Poachers Cut Down Estimated 15 Million Yule Trees Yearly

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Rustling—the kind peculiar to the Christmas season—is still rampant in the Western United States. But tough laws and bad weather have hampered efforts by Christmas tree poachers in some places this year.

Tree stealing, an annual Christmas season peril for the Forest Service, got so bad in Washington state recently the FBI was called in. Utah and Nevada are using air surveillance to catch poachers, who seem to be working faster than ever.

The Forest Service estimates that poachers steal up to 15 million trees in the United States each year. Fewer than 1 per cent of them are caught.

Tree poachers clear $4 to $6 a tree, officials estimate. Most trees sell for about $1 a foot. People who deal with poachers aren't likely to ask questions about where the trees came from.

"Some of these guys are making a real killing and wrecking this country's scenic beauty at the same time," said a forest ranger in Utah.

Some poachers aren't that lucky. In Pittsburgh, Martin L. Noel, 23, awaits trial on larceny charges in the Dec. 11 theft of between $500 to $600 worth of Christmas trees.

In Arizona, Old Man Winter has hampered thieves. Rain and snow came in early abundance and most roads into forest areas have been virtually impassable for the past few weeks.

Robert Umberger of the Forestry Service in Maine says commercial Christmas tree poaching has cut down tremendously in the last 10 years because state law requires a certificate before thay can be transported on Maine roads.

California law calls for up to a $500 fine and six months in jail for anyone convicted of having a Christmas tree without authorization. In addition, rangers patrol the forests intermittently and snow blocks many roads leading into regions with small trees.

But Steve Beck, information officer for the Sierra National Forest in central California, says professional poachers are still active. "They go in with hand saws in the daytime and cut them down and then remove them by night."

John Dreves of the Michigan Department of Agriculture says the problem of Christmas tree poachers is not what it once was in Michigan. Most trees in Michigan are now grown on farms specifically for that purpose. Dreves said most people would rather spend around $5 to get a tree properly pruned and shaped to be a Christmas tree, rather than take the chance on poaching a wild tree that often is not properly shaped.

Michigan, too, has an anti-poaching law for Christmas trees, but it does not apply to persons with two trees or less between Dec. 1 and Dec. 28.

Officials in Massachusetts, where a stiff state law is backed up by around-the-clock patrols by the Department of Natural Resources, concede that there are a few thefts of Christmas trees, but say it does not add up to anything worth worrying about.

Occasionally the Forest Service scores a major triumph in the fight against poachers. A man caught in northern California admitted he had been stealing trees for 20 years at an average annual profit of $20,000. He went to jail.

Two Utah men were caught with 1,700 stolen trees. One went to jail and the other was fined.

Authorities say that while surveillance has been intensified in many states most poachers by now, are counting their cash and secure in the knowledge that they've probably gotten away with their illegal deed—at least until the next Christmas season.

Film Star Nearly Attacked By Gators

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Roger (The Saint) Moore, starring in the latest James Bond spy movie, was almost attacked by three alligators during a filming session this weekend.

A film spokesman said Monday that the veteran actor, known for his starring role as Simon Templar in "The Saint" television series, was rescued by a stand-in Saturday from three pursuing alligators on location at the Jamaican Swamp Safari, a tourist attraction near Falmouth, 22 miles east of Kingston.

Council Delays Talks On Open Space Bonds

The Corte Madera Town Council last night postponed until March further discussion about a possible bond measure to buy open space.

Town Mgr. Ronald A. Bartels suggested the delay, saying the town's new general plan, now being prepared by a consultant firm, should be ready by then.

In the meantime, he said, the town might "overcommit our bonding capacity" if the open space bond measure were passed. He suggested bond money might also be needed to cure flooding problems.

All the councilmen, including Robert J. Flahive, who had prompted discussion of the bond measure, agreed to the delay until March 19.

In other action, Flahive proposed that half of the federal revenue sharing funds to be received by Corte Madera during next year ($22,000) be earmarked for open space purchase.

Other councilmen pointed out that the amount of money would buy very little land and that the funds may be needed elsewhere, especially under new legislation putting a ceiling on local governmental tax rates.

Only Councilman Herber C. Leney supported Flahive, and the motion lost. It was agreed to turn over to the council's finance committee consideration of how to spend the money.

The council also tabled indefinitely a proposed open space plan required by the state until it is learned what the new deadline for the requirement is.

The Corte Madera Town Council Also:

REDEVELOPMENT — Agreed to write a letter to Reed School District officials, who had expressed concern about property in the planned redevelopment area of the town, telling them no Reed property is in the redevelopment proposal.

NOTICES — Agreed to the posting of additional bulletin boards at the library and various businesses for posting of town council meeting agendas and notices.

QUARRY — Agreed by a 3-to-2 vote to adopt an ordinance rezoning the Quarry Site to planned unit development. Councilmen Harold B. Wagstaff and Edward D. Colthurst voted against the ordinance, which had been introduced at an earlier meeting.

BOARD — Sent a proposal to increase membership on the town's board of design from three to five members back to the planning commission and the board of design.

CHAIRS — Agreed to purchase 30 additional chairs for the council chambers at an approximate cost of $1,000.

ATTORNEY — Named John Rosenberg as deputy town attorney for occasions when attorney Albert Bianchi is unable to attend council meetings.

CLOSING — Turned down a request from town employees for early closing hours at town hall on Friday and Dec. 29.

A Volunteer Business Consultant

(EDITOR'S NOTE— All around the world there are people who see a need and do something about it. They're ordinary people, but they show an extraordinary interest in others who need help. They're people who take time to care. Here is the first of a four-part series on some of today's Good Samaritans.)

By AVID WINDER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, — "Call me Don," he says, his face crinkling in a broad grin. "Everyone around here calls me Don."

Winning friends comes easily to Donald Warren which is what makes him such a choice candidate for the "Paunch Corps." That's the more popular name for the International Executive Service Corps (IESC), — a sort of businessman' answer to the Peace Corps.

Warren's sparkle and brisk energy belie his retirement. Recently he put in a hard work stint as a volunteer business consultant in a food processing plant in Istanbul, Turkey. Now he is eager for another assignment in an underdeveloped country that could use his services.

Speaking in the comfortable surroundings of his home at Amityville on New York's Long Island, he noted one of the incentives for going:

"It's nice to be needed," he said gently. "Just to give of your background. When you reach my age the idea of giving, and giving in a worthwhile manner, boosts your own morale."

And the Turkish food-processing plant where he worked in Istanbul did need him. It needed his expertise in the formulation and preparation of a new rice-cereal baby food. The project meant new employees, new packaging, new advertising and promotion.

It also meant a very much-needed rice cereal which had not yet been manufactured in the country and which was to be superior to the three or four other existing baby foods.

Warren had much to give. He had decades of practical business experience before retiring in 1965 as manager of product standards and specifications at a subdivision of the Thomas J. Lipton Co., at Englewood Cliffs, N.J.

Warren's wife, Violet, who accompanied him on his assignment in Istanbul indicated that what really counted was the sensitivity with which the projects are undertaken by the IESC.

"They (the recipients of the program) just want you to help. They don't want you to manage. After a while the men could see Donald wasn't going to take over the plant so they became more cooperative," she said.

This was not to suggest that the two-month consulting period was fun. Far from it, despite all the worthy idealism.

Says Warren: "They told me in New York — 'Don, there will be frustrations. Don't think things will be easy.' "

They weren't easy. For the first three weeks there was no electricity to drive the drum dryer which spreads the thick, viscuous cereal mix and turns it into a thin flake. Another problem was that on rainy days as a result of seepage from rusty pipes the water supply was not up to the strict standards set for baby-food preparation although pure enough for other food processing.

In time the electricity was resumed, and clear spring water was brought in large plastic containers. But even then the work was arduous.

Up at 5:30 a.m. Not finished before 6:30 p.m., very often not before 7:30. "By Friday night," Warren recalls, "I had worked harder than I have ever worked."

But it was an experience he will never forget.

"Bus (Bus Wilcox, the Paunch Corps resident director of operations for Turkey) said: 'You Wait. You'll have a lump in your throat before you leave.' I haw-hawed the idea. I didn't think I would become so attached to those workers in the plant."

But elaborating on his inability to communicate in English with the Turkish workers, Warren recounted his last day:

"There is common language you know. These people, they were so kind to me. When they lined up at the end of the day's work close to the manager's office they all came in with gifts and kissed me on both cheeks. When I left the little maid who had waited on us at table, the tears were streaming down her cheeks. I kissed her on both cheeks — that's the Turkish custom."

Each year hundreds of retired businessmen, many of them ex-presidents and directors of corporations, travel to underdeveloped countries to fill gaps in jobs that require managerial skills. The project is always of a short duration.

"This made it possible for IESC to recruit executives of the caliber not possible if we were asking a man to drop everything to go abroad for a couple of years. But they could possibly drop everything for three months. On that basis we have been able to gt really tiptop men," says Charlie H. Brown of the public-relations department of the IESC.

The volunteer receives no financial remuneration, but is provided with an economy-class air ticket, hotel accommodation, and a per diem of about $50 for him and his wife, who is encouraged to go along.

The program is financed by the United States Agency for International Development (AID); by some 200 corporate and other private sponsors in the U.S. and overseas, and by contributions from overseas client-firms themselves.

"The thing that is exciting to me about it," says Brown, "is that it works."

Former Guard At Prison Gets Jail Time On Drugs

A former San Quentin guard, who admitted smuggling drugs into the prison, was ordered yesterday to serve six months in jail.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also ordered two years of unsupervised probation for 29-year-old Samuel Thomas Jr. of Richmond.

The judge rejected a plea for shorter jail time for the first time offender, stating, "When you are dealing with a correctional officer at San Quentin, there has to be some deterrence."

After only three months on the job, Thomas was arrested Dec. 1, 1971, as he entered the prison with 11 Seconal capsules in his hat band and 12 Benzedrine tablets in his shirt pocket, according to prison authorities.

Thomas, now a junior college student, told his probation officer he was taking the drugs to an inmate who helped him keep control of the cell section he was assigned to oversee.

Prison authorities said other guards reported he was acting suspiciously so he was searched when he reported for work.

Thomas's probation officer said he was recruited in the prison drive to hire minority guards and felt he was in over his head with "wily and manipulative" convicts.

Defeated Miner President Quits

NEW YORK (UPI) — Without explanation, W. A. (Tony) Boyle resigned Monday as president of the United Mine Workers several weeks before the man who defeated him in a closely-supervised election steps into the office.

Boyle then got permission from the union's executive board to address it as a "rank and file member" at a meeting today.

The board voted to give Boyle a $50,000 per year retirement pension, which equals his full salary. Arnold Miller, the insurgent who defeated Boyle in the court-ordered election, has said he would try to strip Boyle of the pension.

Leonard Pankovich, the union's vice president who also was defeated, succeeds Boyle as head of the 205,000-member union until Miller can be installed—probably next month. He said his tenure would serve to bring about "an orderly transition of power."

Final but unofficial returns of the election, supervised by the Labor Department, showed Miller with 70,372 votes and Boyle with 56,334. The Miller-Boyle election was ordered by a federal court because of irregularities in the 1969 election Boyle won from Joseph "Jock" Yablonski three weeks before Yablonski, his wife and daughter were slain.

W. A. (TONY) BOYLE
Surprise resignation

A union official reported that Boyle stepped to the microphone at a board meeting and announced, "I tender my resignation effective today. I will not be your international president after today. The vice president automatically becomes president of the international union." Boyle refused to answer questions.

Poachers Cut Down Estimated 15 Million Yule Trees Yearly

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Rustling—the kind peculiar to the Christmas season—is still rampant in the Western United States. But tough laws and bad weather have hampered efforts by Christmas tree poachers in some places this year.

Tree stealing, an annual Christmas season peril for the Forest Service, got so bad in Washington state recently the FBI was called in. Utah and Nevada are using air surveillance to catch poachers, who seem to be working faster than ever.

The Forest Service estimates that poachers steal up to 15 million trees in the United States each year. Fewer than 1 per cent of them are caught.

Tree poachers clear $4 to $6 a tree, officials estimate. Most trees sell for about $1 a foot. People who deal with poachers aren't likely to ask questions about where the trees came from.

"Some of these guys are making a real killing and wrecking this country's scenic beauty at the same time," said a forest ranger in Utah.

Some poachers aren't that lucky. In Pittsburgh, Martin L. Noel, 23, awaits trial on larceny charges in the Dec. 11 theft of between $500 to $600 worth of Christmas trees.

In Arizona, Old Man Winter has hampered thieves. Rain and snow came in early abundance and most roads into forest areas have been virtually impassable for the past few weeks.

Robert Umberger of the Forestry Service in Maine says commercial Christmas tree poaching has cut down tremendously in the last 10 years because state law requires a certificate before thay can be transported on Maine roads.

California law calls for up to a $500 fine and six months in jail for anyone convicted of having a Christmas tree without authorization. In addition, rangers patrol the forests intermittently and snow blocks many roads leading into regions with small trees.

But Steve Beck, information officer for the Sierra National Forest in central California, says professional poachers are still active. "They go in with hand saws in the daytime and cut them down and then remove them by night."

John Dreves of the Michigan Department of Agriculture says the problem of Christmas tree poachers is not what it once was in Michigan. Most trees in Michigan are now grown on farms specifically for that purpose. Dreves said most people would rather spend around $5 to get a tree properly pruned and shaped to be a Christmas tree, rather than take the chance on poaching a wild tree that often is not properly shaped.

Michigan, too, has an anti-poaching law for Christmas trees, but it does not apply to persons with two trees or less between Dec. 1 and Dec. 28.

Officials in Massachusetts, where a stiff state law is backed up by around-the-clock patrols by the Department of Natural Resources, concede that there are a few thefts of Christmas trees, but say it does not add up to anything worth worrying about.

Occasionally the Forest Service scores a major triumph in the fight against poachers. A man caught in northern California admitted he had been stealing trees for 20 years at an average annual profit of $20,000. He went to jail.

Two Utah men were caught with 1,700 stolen trees. One went to jail and the other was fined.

Authorities say that while surveillance has been intensified in many states most poachers by now, are counting their cash and secure in the knowledge that they've probably gotten away with their illegal deed—at least until the next Christmas season.

Film Star Nearly Attacked By Gators

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Roger (The Saint) Moore, starring in the latest James Bond spy movie, was almost attacked by three alligators during a filming session this weekend.

A film spokesman said Monday that the veteran actor, known for his starring role as Simon Templar in "The Saint" television series, was rescued by a stand-in Saturday from three pursuing alligators on location at the Jamaican Swamp Safari, a tourist attraction near Falmouth, 22 miles east of Kingston.

Council Delays Talks On Open Space Bonds

The Corte Madera Town Council last night postponed until March further discussion about a possible bond measure to buy open space.

Town Mgr. Ronald A. Bartels suggested the delay, saying the town's new general plan, now being prepared by a consultant firm, should be ready by then.

In the meantime, he said, the town might "overcommit our bonding capacity" if the open space bond measure were passed. He suggested bond money might also be needed to cure flooding problems.

All the councilmen, including Robert J. Flahive, who had prompted discussion of the bond measure, agreed to the delay until March 19.

In other action, Flahive proposed that half of the federal revenue sharing funds to be received by Corte Madera during next year ($22,000) be earmarked for open space purchase.

Other councilmen pointed out that the amount of money would buy very little land and that the funds may be needed elsewhere, especially under new legislation putting a ceiling on local governmental tax rates.

Only Councilman Herber C. Leney supported Flahive, and the motion lost. It was agreed to turn over to the council's finance committee consideration of how to spend the money.

The council also tabled indefinitely a proposed open space plan required by the state until it is learned what the new deadline for the requirement is.

The Corte Madera Town Council Also:

REDEVELOPMENT — Agreed to write a letter to Reed School District officials, who had expressed concern about property in the planned redevelopment area of the town, telling them no Reed property is in the redevelopment proposal.

NOTICES — Agreed to the posting of additional bulletin boards at the library and various businesses for posting of town council meeting agendas and notices.

QUARRY — Agreed by a 3-to-2 vote to adopt an ordinance rezoning the Quarry Site to planned unit development. Councilmen Harold B. Wagstaff and Edward D. Colthurst voted against the ordinance, which had been introduced at an earlier meeting.

BOARD — Sent a proposal to increase membership on the town's board of design from three to five members back to the planning commission and the board of design.

CHAIRS — Agreed to purchase 30 additional chairs for the council chambers at an approximate cost of $1,000.

ATTORNEY — Named John Rosenberg as deputy town attorney for occasions when attorney Albert Bianchi is unable to attend council meetings.

CLOSING — Turned down a request from town employees for early closing hours at town hall on Friday and Dec. 29.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Tuesday, December 19th, the 353rd day of 1972 with 12 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars. The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

British Arctic explorer William Perry was born Dec. 19, 1790.

For draft eligibles the lottery number is 19.

On this day in history:

A thought for the day: German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer said: "Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, light air pollution.

San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Son Of Famed Western Outlaw Dies In Blaze

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Robert Longbauch, 72, son of the famed Western outlaw known as "Sundance Kid," died Monday in a fire in an old four-story hotel.

Fire officials said one other person, John Schon, an elderly blind man, also was killed when flames swept the Priess Hotel.

The rest of the hotel's 34 residents, many of them university students, escaped without injury.

The blaze erupted in a basement under a bar, and a bartender tried to douse the first flames with a pitcher of water before calling the Fire Department.

Cigar Ban In Club Cars Hit

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Cigar Institute of America Monday protested the ban on cigar and pipe smoking in Amtrak club cars—a prohibition that came about after a complaint by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

In letters to Burger, outgoing Transportation Secretary John Volpe and Amtrak President Roger Lewis, the institute said "The protest of Justice Burger made public and acted upon so arbitrarily by the Amtrak management casts cigar and pipe smoking in a most undesired light.

"To quote William Makepeace Thackeray, a cigar is 'a kind companion, a gentle stimulant, an amiable anodyne, a cementer of friendship."

Clay Pit Now Valuable Land

POOLE, England (UPI) —In 1963 Eric Brooks paid $47,000 for an abandoned seaside clay pit in this English Channel resort. His friends thought he was mad.

Real estate agents estimate that the 27-acre site, now nearly filled, is worth about $2.3 million.

"My friends thought I was mad when I paid out so much money," Brooks said. "It was just a deep soggy hole and they didn't think it was worth anything. They said I could never fill it."

Tighter Curbs On Methadone Uses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government has announced tighter controls over distribution of methadone, a drug used to curb heroin addiction.

Dr. Jerome Jaffee, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse, said Monday the new regulations were designed to provide "clear cut guidelines" to operators of methadone maintenance programs, to curb growing illicit street traffic in methadone and to avoid making methadone addicts out of persons never before on drugs.

Methadone is a synthetic drug which curbs the craving of some addicts for heroin. In methadone maintenance programs, patients are given regular doses of the substitute drug, at little or no cost to them, to get them off heroin habits which often are supported by crime.

The new regulations restrict marketing of methadone to hospital pharmacies, approved maintenance programs conducted by clinics or doctors and some drugstores in rural areas. They will take effect over a six-month period.

Jaffee said programs conducted under the new rules "can have a positive effect in reducing the spread of heroin addiction. The amount of crime they (addicts) commit will be slightly reduced. The amount of heroin they use will be slightly reduced. Maybe they just won't die of (heroin) overdose."

He expressed hopes that the regulated methadone programs would help reduce the social cost of heroin addiction.

Methadone is addictive itself. Persons not tolerant to its effects can experience euphoria. An overdose can cause death. Jaffee said the regulations will seek to prevent cases in which persons not already on heroin begin to take methadone and become addicted to it.

Some doctors oppose the controls because they feel the government should not regulate the practice of medicine. John Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, called the new rules a "stop-gap measure, satisfactory for the time being."

"We are all hopeful a more permanent type solution will be found for treating addicts," Ingersoll said.

Fog Hits Britain

LONDON (AP) — Fog blanketed much of Britain today with visibility down to five yards in some places. Airliners bringing Christmas holidayers from New York, Chicago and Los Angeles were diverted to airports on the continent.

Archdiocese Hit With Labor Suit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The state Labor Relations Board has ruled that the Philadelphia Catholic Archdiocese and John Cardinal Krol were guilty of unfair labor practices in a union bargaining election by lay teachers.

The ruling, which a union attorney said was an historic first, invalidated a disputed June 13 election at which diocesan Catholic elementary teachers voted 646 to 410 against representation by the Association of Catholic Teachers, an AFL-CIO affiliate.

The board Monday ordered a new election on grounds Cardinal Krol unfairly influenced the June balloting by sending a letter to the teachers that had "the effect of intimidating" them.

"This is the first time in history that a prince of the church, or any bishop, has been found guilty of such a charge," said Michael Walsh, attorney for the Association of Catholic Teachers.

A diocesan spokesman said that "from our initial reading of the ruling, the labor relations board apparently has an unbelievable idea of freedom of speech and freedom of religion. An idea that would seem to deny to the cardinal the right, the freedom to speak on religious matters to his people."

A Market Flap Over Scotch Whisky Role

BRUSSELS (UPI) —Britain and France clashed today over Scotch whisky and its role in the enlarged European Common Market.

France said whisky is alcohol; Britain said it is "processed agricultural goods." As in most complex Common Market disputes, millions of dollars rides on the outcome.

The United States, which will be affected by the outcome, kept a worried watch from the sidelines.

The dispute came up at a meeting of the nine agricultural ministers of the enlarged market, which is to grow from six to nine nations when Britain, Ireland and Denmark join on Jan. 1.

The term of entry obligate Britian's whisky distillers to replace much of the 750,000 tons of grain they buy now from the United States and Canada with Common Market grain—mostly from France.

Britain argued today that the Common Market grain is more expensive. It said that if this grain goes into whisky, which is then exported outside the Common Market, it should be given a special subsidy to avoid raising whisky prices in the United States and other export markets.

France objected. The French have long urged the market to form an "alcohol policy," which would enable France to dispose of surplus wine.

Britain said the matter could be handled perfectly well by treating whisky as "processed agricultural goods," under the existing farm policy.

The ministers said they hoped for a compromise.

A Volunteer Business Consultant

(EDITOR'S NOTE— All around the world there are people who see a need and do something about it. They're ordinary people, but they show an extraordinary interest in others who need help. They're people who take time to care. Here is the first of a four-part series on some of today's Good Samaritans.)

By AVID WINDER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, — "Call me Don," he says, his face crinkling in a broad grin. "Everyone around here calls me Don."

Winning friends comes easily to Donald Warren which is what makes him such a choice candidate for the "Paunch Corps." That's the more popular name for the International Executive Service Corps (IESC), — a sort of business-man' answer to the Peace Corps.

Warren's sparkle and brisk energy belie his retirement. Recently he put in a hard work stint as a volunteer business consultant in a food processing plant in Istanbul, Turkey. Now he is eager for another assignment in an underdeveloped country that could use his services.

Speaking in the comfortable surroundings of his home at Amityville on New York's Long Island, he noted one of the incentives for going:

"It's nice to be needed," he said gently. "Just to give of your background. When you reach my age the idea of giving, and giving in a worthwhile manner, boosts your own morale."

And the Turkish food-processing plant where he worked in Istanbul did need him. It needed his expertise in the formulation and preparation of a new rice-cereal baby food. The project meant new employees, new packaging, new advertising and promotion.

It also meant a very much-needed rice cereal which had not yet been manufactured in the country and which was to be superior to the three or four other existing baby foods.

Warren had much to give. He had decades of practical business experience before retiring in 1965 as manager of product standards and specifications at a subdivision of the Thomas J. Lipton Co., at Englewood Cliffs, N.J.

Warren's wife, Violet, who accompanied him on his assignment in Istanbul indicated that what really counted was the sensitivity with which the projects are undertaken by the IESC.

"They (the recipients of the program) just want you to help. They don't want you to manage. After a while the men could see Donald wasn't going to take over the plant so they became more cooperative," she said.

This was not to suggest that the two-month consulting period was fun. Far from it, despite all the worthy idealism.

Says Warren: "They told me in New York — 'Don, there will be frustrations. Don't think things will be easy.' "

They weren't easy. For the first three weeks there was no electricity to drive the drum dryer which spreads the thick, viscuous cereal mix and turns it into a thin flake. Another problem was that on rainy days as a result of seepage from rusty pipes the water supply was not up to the strict standards set for baby-food preparation although pure enough for other food processing.

In time the electricity was resumed, and clear spring water was brought in large plastic containers. But even then the work was arduous.

Up at 5:30 a.m. Not finished before 6:30 p.m., very often not before 7:30. "By Friday night," Warren recalls, "I had worked harder than I have ever worked."

But it was an experience he will never forget.

"Bus (Bus Wilcox, the Paunch Corps resident director of operations for Turkey) said: 'You Wait. You'll have a lump in your throat before you leave.' I haw-hawed the idea. I didn't think I would become so attached to those workers in the plant."

But elaborating on his inability to communicate in English with the Turkish workers, Warren recounted his last day:

"There is common language you know. These people, they were so kind to me. When they lined up at the end of the day's work close to the manager's office they all came in with gifts and kissed me on both cheeks. When I left the little maid who had waited on us at table, the tears were streaming down her cheeks. I kissed her on both cheeks — that's the Turkish custom."

Each year hundreds of retired businessmen, many of them ex-presidents and directors of corporations, travel to underdeveloped countries to fill gaps in jobs that require managerial skills. The project is always of a short duration.

"This made it possible for IESC to recruit executives of the caliber not possible if we were asking a man to drop everything to go abroad for a couple of years. But they could possibly drop everything for three months. On that basis we have been able to gt really tip-top men," says Charlie H. Brown of the public-relations department of the IESC.

The volunteer receives no financial remuneration, but is provided with an economy-class air ticket, hotel accommodation, and a per diem of about $50 for him and his wife, who is encouraged to go along.

The program is financed by the United States Agency for International Development (AID); by some 200 corporate and other private sponsors in the U.S. and overseas, and by contributions from overseas client-firms themselves.

"The thing that is exciting to me about it," says Brown, "is that it works."

Former Guard At Prison Gets Jail Time On Drugs

A former San Quentin guard, who admitted smuggling drugs into the prison, was ordered yesterday to serve six months in jail.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also ordered two years of unsupervised probation for 29-year-old Samuel Thomas Jr. of Richmond.

The judge rejected a plea for shorter jail time for the first time offender, stating, "When you are dealing with a correctional officer at San Quentin, there has to be some deterrence."

After only three months on the job, Thomas was arrested Dec. 1, 1971, as he entered the prison with 11 Seconal capsules in his hat band and 12 Benzedrine tablets in his shirt pocket, according to prison authorities.

Thomas, now a junior college student, told his probation officer he was taking the drugs to an inmate who helped him keep control of the cell section he was assigned to oversee.

Prison authorities said other guards reported he was acting suspiciously so he was searched when he reported for work.

Thomas's probation officer said he was recruited in the prison drive to hire minority guards and felt he was in over his head with "wily and manipulative" convicts.

Pier Feud Erupts Once More

The long-running feud between Tomales Bay property owners Peter D. Whitney and Larry H. Marks erupted again yesterday as the county planning commission deferred action on a request to open Whitney's controversial pier to the public.

The pier, including an illegally built 48-foot extension, is located near the county's Chicken Ranch beach at Inverness and was the focal point of the Marks vs. Whitney court decision.

Marks, the loser in that state Supreme Court decision which held Whitney had a right to build his pier across a tide lot owned by Marks, yesterday requested opening the pier to the public.

Whitney called the proposal ridiculous, adding "this is not just a pier to Mr. Marks, it's Moby Dick — a white whale he has been trying to harpoon for 18 years."

Whitney said the county had no right to impose public use of his pier and charged Marks was seeking free access to the bay for upland properties he planned to sell.

The matter came before the planning commission on an appeal from Marks of the county environmental protection committee's decision to legalize the pier extension.

Marks argued that since the pier also crossed county-owned tidelands it should be open to public use.

The matter was delayed for further study by the county counsel's office and will be reconsidered at the commission's Jan. 8 meeting.

The Marin County Planning Commission also:

NORTH RIDGE — Heard the parks and recreation department's plans to keep portions of the North Ridge between Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur in open space. The commission declined to set a formal hearing for adoption of the plan until the three cities had considered the proposal in depth.

APARTMENTS — Deferred action on a plan from P. J. Tarrant to construct 42 apartments on a 3.4-acre site on Los Ranchitos Road near its intersection with Glenside Way. Nearby residents protested that the project was too dense and would create too much traffic. They said they were considering purchasing the site for a neighborhood park. It will be reconsidered on Jan. 22.

MOOSE LODGE — Deferred action on a use permit requested by the Moose Lodge of Novato for use of the vacant Atherton Club at the intersection of H Lane and Atherton Avenue near Novato. Nearby residents complained of possible noise and traffic but agreed to meet with club representatives and attempt to iron out differences.

TANKS — Approved a use permit for Robert Borello to place to sewage holding ponds on his property on Borello Ranch Road near Bolinas.

PLANS — Unanimously denied plans to place an A and W fast food restaurant at 3141 Redwood Highway near San Rafael. The site, across Highway 101 from the Civic Center, currently is used by Booby's Restaurant. The commission said the new restaurant would not be in keeping with the area.

Muir Beach Rezone Plea Denied

The Marin County Planning Commission yesterday rejected a Muir Beach property owner's request that his land be rezoned to commercial-recreational use on the eve of federal acquisition.

The request, submitted by Gilbert F. Allard of Mill Valley, proposed to change the agricultural designation for 19 acres stretching a half mile up Frank Valley Road from its intersection with Shoreline Highway.

The commission voted 6-0 (Commissioner George P. Leonard absent) to deny the request, agreeing with Commissioner Margaret B. Azevedo who said the rezoning would be premature since the federal government intends to include the land in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

An attorney for Allard told the commission his client planned to develop a campground on the site to serve 185 families.

The planning commission agreed with arguments against the rezoning by Muir Beach residents who said rezoning to commercial-recreational use was no assurance the property owner would develop the campground.

Under county ordinances, such zoning permits nightclubs, restaurants and service stations, among other things.

The land originally was proposed for the controversial A-60 agricultural zoning, but county supervisors suspended such action because of property owners' complaints that it would lower land values.

In suspending the agricultural rezoning in the new federal park, the board said it would take a dim view of proposals to inflate land values through rezoning or submittal of development plans.

Jewel Theft Pleas Given

A 20-year-old woman arrested in connection with $1,780 in stolen jewelry has been sentenced to 30 days in jail on a reduced charge of concealing stolen property.

Codefendant Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, also of Ignacio, pleaded guilty to the felony charge, provided he receives no more than four months in jail. He is to be sentenced Dec. 27.

Both pleaded guilty after a plea bargaining session by the judge, defense attorneys and a deputy district attorney. The district attorney favored four months jail in each instance.

San Rafael police arrested the pair Oct. 3 after learning that Goodrich sold the stolen jewelry to a San Rafael Merchant Sept. 26 for $165.

The jewelry was part of $3,830 in possessions stolen Sept. 26 from the home of Elena Mills Foley on a Nova Albion Way.

Heath Likes Those 'Tom-Jerry' Films

LONDON (UPI) —Friends of Prime Minister Edward Heath let the cat out of the bag today. They said he loves to watch "Tom and Jerry" cartoons.

They said Heath asked aides to obtain a supply of "Tom and Jerry" cartoons to watch over the Christmas holidays at his Chequers country retreat. They said whenever the prime minister has some free time, he likes to put his feet up and watch the zany adventures of the famous cartoon cat and mouse.

Lawmaker Urges Pay Raise Veto

SACRAMENTO (AP) — At least one lawmaker is urging Gov. Reagan to veto the 10 per cent pay increase California legislators voted for themselves in the waning hours of this year's session.

Assemblyman Floyd Wakefield, a Republican from South Gate, called upon Californians Monday to send Reagan letters and telegrams urging him to reject the pay hike.

Wakerfield said the pay raise was worked out behind closed doors with the usual committee procedure bypassed.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Tuesday, December 19th, the 353rd day of 1972 with 12 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars. The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

British Arctic explorer William Perry was born Dec. 19, 1790.

For draft eligibles the lottery number is 19.

On this day in history:

A thought for the day: German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer said: "Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, light air pollution.

San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Son Of Famed Western Outlaw Dies In Blaze

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Robert Longbauch, 72, son of the famed Western outlaw known as "Sundance Kid," died Monday in a fire in an old four-story hotel.

Fire officials said one other person, John Schon, an elderly blind man, also was killed when flames swept the Priess Hotel.

The rest of the hotel's 34 residents, many of them university students, escaped without injury.

The blaze erupted in a basement under a bar, and a bartender tried to douse the first flames with a pitcher of water before calling the Fire Department.

Cigar Ban In Club Cars Hit

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Cigar Institute of America Monday protested the ban on cigar and pipe smoking in Amtrak club cars—a prohibition that came about after a complaint by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

In letters to Burger, outgoing Transportation Secretary John Volpe and Amtrak President Roger Lewis, the institute said "The protest of Justice Burger made public and acted upon so arbitrarily by the Amtrak management casts cigar and pipe smoking in a most undesired light.

"To quote William Makepeace Thackeray, a cigar is 'a kind companion, a gentle stimulant, an amiable anodyne, a cementer of friendship."

Clay Pit Now Valuable Land

POOLE, England (UPI) —In 1963 Eric Brooks paid $47,000 for an abandoned seaside clay pit in this English Channel resort. His friends thought he was mad.

Real estate agents estimate that the 27-acre site, now nearly filled, is worth about $2.3 million.

"My friends thought I was mad when I paid out so much money," Brooks said. "It was just a deep soggy hole and they didn't think it was worth anything. They said I could never fill it."

Tighter Curbs On Methadone Uses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government has announced tighter controls over distribution of methadone, a drug used to curb heroin addiction.

Dr. Jerome Jaffee, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse, said Monday the new regulations were designed to provide "clear cut guidelines" to operators of methadone maintenance programs, to curb growing illicit street traffic in methadone and to avoid making methadone addicts out of persons never before on drugs.

Methadone is a synthetic drug which curbs the craving of some addicts for heroin. In methadone maintenance programs, patients are given regular doses of the substitute drug, at little or no cost to them, to get them off heroin habits which often are supported by crime.

The new regulations restrict marketing of methadone to hospital pharmacies, approved maintenance programs conducted by clinics or doctors and some drugstores in rural areas. They will take effect over a six-month period.

Jaffee said programs conducted under the new rules "can have a positive effect in reducing the spread of heroin addiction. The amount of crime they (addicts) commit will be slightly reduced. The amount of heroin they use will be slightly reduced. Maybe they just won't die of (heroin) overdose."

He expressed hopes that the regulated methadone programs would help reduce the social cost of heroin addiction.

Methadone is addictive itself. Persons not tolerant to its effects can experience euphoria. An overdose can cause death. Jaffee said the regulations will seek to prevent cases in which persons not already on heroin begin to take methadone and become addicted to it.

Some doctors oppose the controls because they feel the government should not regulate the practice of medicine. John Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, called the new rules a "stop-gap measure, satisfactory for the time being."

"We are all hopeful a more permanent type solution will be found for treating addicts," Ingersoll said.

Fog Hits Britain

LONDON (AP) — Fog blanketed much of Britain today with visibility down to five yards in some places. Airliners bringing Christmas holidayers from New York, Chicago and Los Angeles were diverted to airports on the continent.

Archdiocese Hit With Labor Suit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The state Labor Relations Board has ruled that the Philadelphia Catholic Archdiocese and John Cardinal Krol were guilty of unfair labor practices in a union bargaining election by lay teachers.

The ruling, which a union attorney said was an historic first, invalidated a disputed June 13 election at which diocesan Catholic elementary teachers voted 646 to 410 against representation by the Association of Catholic Teachers, an AFL-CIO affiliate.

The board Monday ordered a new election on grounds Cardinal Krol unfairly influenced the June balloting by sending a letter to the teachers that had "the effect of intimidating" them.

"This is the first time in history that a prince of the church, or any bishop, has been found guilty of such a charge," said Michael Walsh, attorney for the Association of Catholic Teachers.

A diocesan spokesman said that "from our initial reading of the ruling, the labor relations board apparently has an unbelievable idea of freedom of speech and freedom of religion. An idea that would seem to deny to the cardinal the right, the freedom to speak on religious matters to his people."

A Market Flap Over Scotch Whisky Role

BRUSSELS (UPI) —Britain and France clashed today over Scotch whisky and its role in the enlarged European Common Market.

France said whisky is alcohol; Britain said it is "processed agricultural goods." As in most complex Common Market disputes, millions of dollars rides on the outcome.

The United States, which will be affected by the outcome, kept a worried watch from the sidelines.

The dispute came up at a meeting of the nine agricultural ministers of the enlarged market, which is to grow from six to nine nations when Britain, Ireland and Denmark join on Jan. 1.

The term of entry obligate Britian's whisky distillers to replace much of the 750,000 tons of grain they buy now from the United States and Canada with Common Market grain—mostly from France.

Britain argued today that the Common Market grain is more expensive. It said that if this grain goes into whisky, which is then exported outside the Common Market, it should be given a special subsidy to avoid raising whisky prices in the United States and other export markets.

France objected. The French have long urged the market to form an "alcohol policy," which would enable France to dispose of surplus wine.

Britain said the matter could be handled perfectly well by treating whisky as "processed agricultural goods," under the existing farm policy.

The ministers said they hoped for a compromise.

Snags Develop In Novato Plan

Novato City Council, warned by Mayor F. Wayne Sartain that it was going to have to "bite the bullet soon," last night postponed delving into the revised Novato Area General Plan.

The plan, a year in the making and subject of five public hearings in recent weeks, was before the city council for comment and recommendation.

After councilmen questioned the staff and heard late comment at a public hearing, it appeared that the council would then have its say.

At that point, Councilman George C. Quesada said he wasn't prepared "to comment in depth," since he was "getting comment and still thinking."

Other councilmen agreed it wouldn't be logical to proceed until all members were ready, and will meet again on the plan at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 4 at the Novato Community House.

Sartain said, "At some point in time we have to come to grips" with the plan. Furthermore, he said, it appeared that changes will be made in the plan and it would have to be referred back to the planning commission, extending the time before adoption.

Councilman Fred F. Ruegg challenged a planning staff report that public scenic area in the plan could be purchased for $3.2 million.

Ruegg said based on the costs of acquiring land for redevelopment in Santa Rosa, the value of the land would be about $7.1 million, and based on "recent sales, appraisals, offers to purchase and estate valuation" it would be in excess of $10 million.

Quesada said that "raw land is grossly underassessed," and the matter should be taken to the Marin County Grand Jury to have it assessed at its proper value.

During the abbreviated public hearing, Planning Commissioner James L. Picchi said he believed that "single family residential is passe," with apartments and condominiums which have "total amenities as the "way of life that is coming."

"I still think we're looking into the past," Picchi said.

Attorney Richard Tarrant representing McAlester Construction Finance Corp. objected to designation of the firm's land adjoining Bel Marin Keys as agricultural.

Eileen Souza, representing Frank Ribelo, owner of land at the end of Vineyard Road, said the Ribelo land shouldn't be designated agricultural because it is "economically impossible" to use it for agriculture.

Mary Souza, representing owners of land at Deer Island, opposed the hill and canyon designation which would permit one home per five acres. "We don't want everything taken away from us on this property," she said.

Councilmen pondered the relationship between the proposed countywide plan and the city's general plan, since the city's plan extends beyond city boundaries into unincorporated area.

Ruegg also asked what would happen if the county's plan and the city's plan were in conflict in the unincorporated area near Novato.

City Atty. Clark M. Palmer said the city wouldn't have any power in the unincorporated area, but "the impact would depend on the degree of intergovernmental cooperation."

Councilman David Price Jones said: "I think we should adopt ours as soon as possible. If we do, it will be a lot easier to convince them to do what we want in the area."

The council adjourned until its regular session at 8 p.m. today at the Novato Community House. Sartain said the council will conduct final interviews of persons seeking appointment to the city commissions at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Community House. After the interviews, the council will hold a closed session, and then, in open session, make the appointments, Sartain said.

Younger Looks At Crime Lords

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's Attorney General, Evelle J. Younger, says Mafia-style "godfathers" hve much less of a grip on organized crime on the West Coast than anywhere else in the nation.

Younger said Sunday there are fewer and less powerful crime lords in the West because "the classic type of organized crime" hasn't been as successful as it has on the East Coast.

He said a major factor in the lower profile of organized crime in the west is "the high quality of leadership in law enforcement and the integrity of our representatives in government."

Job Suit Allowed At Class Action

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A federal judge ruled Monday that an employment discrimination case against the Bank of California could be argued as a statewide class action on behalf of women, blacks and chicanos.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham dismissed from the action three organizations and individuals who had filed it. He said the National Organization of Women, GI Forum and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had not "alleged injuries to themselves or any of their members.

But, Peckham said, he would not dismiss the suit.

The action sought "population parity," employe representation reflecting the number of blacks, women and chicanos in the population.

19 Receive Awards For Bike Essays

Nineteen Fairfax youngsters were presented with cash awards of up to $25 yesterday for submitting prize-winning essays in the Fairfax Police Department's bicycle safety essay contest, Chief Charles A. Grasso announced today.

In order of placement, winners are:

Merchants who contributed to the $167 prize kitty were Quality Liquors, Shep's Meats, Food Villa, Fairfax Lumber, B and C Television, Bank of America, Marin Town and Country Club, Enrico's Restaurant, S and N Auto Parts, Fastidious Fido's, Perri's Tavern, Crocker Citizens Bank and the Fairfax Theater, he said.

Some 113 entries were submitted in the contest, which was judged by Fairfax School District officials, Grasso said.

Peron On Way Back To Madrid

LIMA (UPI) —Former Argentine President Juan D. Peron arrived in Peru Monday for a brief two-day visit before continuing his trip back to Madrid for Christmas.

Peron departed Paraguay after a four-day stay without commenting on the political turmoil unleashed in Argentine peronist ranks by his selection of Hector J. Campora as presidential candidate of the Justicialista Liberation Front.

Peron, 77, was expected to meet in Lima with leftist nationalist President Juan Velazco Alvarado, then to continue on to Madrid next Thursday.

Qantas Development Plans Turned Down

The Petaluma City Council last night balked at a rezoning request, asking for more precise plans on the development of houses, apartments and offices.

Qantas Development Corp. requested a planned community district for 38 acres behind the Washington Square Shopping Center. Plans included 73 homes on 5,000-square foot lots, 208 apartment units and nearly seven acres of professional-medical offices.

Councilmen said they had no quarrel with the rezoning request, but hesitated to grant it since complete details of the plans were not available.

Representatives of Qantas said they would meet with staff members and prepare more information for the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council did, however, accept the environmental impact report on the project which included conflicting opinions on the effect the project would have on schools.

While the developers report indicated some problem with school housing for students, the Petaluma Board of Education submitted a letter urging absolutely no further development in the McDowell School area since 900 children are now crowded into the school designed for 750.

The Petaluma City Council Also:

REZONING — Granted request of Ronald Nunn for planned unit development zoning to permit six single-family homes on Dickson Hill off West Street.

CARS — Accepted the bid of Jim Rose Chrysler-Plymouth of $16,685 for four police sedans, a station wagon and a compact sedan.

RADIO — Rejected on a 2-2 vote the suggestion of Councilman William A. Perry Jr. that the city buy an hour of radio time on Jan. 1 to discuss city goals for 1973. Councilmen Fred V. Mattei and Richard W. Cleak dissented while Mayor Helen Putnam supported Perry. Councilmen Robert A. Brunner, William A. Daly and John W. Cavanagh Jr. were absent.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting on Jan. 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Food Prices Drop

MANILA (UPI) —Food prices, particularly rice, vegetables and fruits, declined 5 to 161 per cent in the first two weeks of November. The Central Bank attributed the decrease to a continuous flow of vegetables and fruits from Northern and Southern Luzon and Northern Mindanao provinces.

Stolen Property Charge Admitted

UKIAH, Calif. (UPI) —The owners of a remote ranch allegedly used as a burying grounds by the Hell's Angels pleaded guilty Monday to charges of possessing stolen property.

George and Helen Wethern, who were granted immunity from narcotics charges earlier in return for testimony against motorcycle gang members, were placed on probation after entering their pleas.

They were arrested Oct. 30 on their ranch six miles outside this Mendocino County town by officers who found the bodies of two men and a woman buried in an abandoned welt on the property.

Woman Reports Her Purse Stolen

Christine Olson, 107 Galland Street, Petaluma, told police a young man stole her purse yesterday at 2:30 p.m. as she walked on Kentucky Street.

Mrs. Olson said the man grabbed the purse from behind and fled. The purse contained $15.

WHERE VOLVOS COME FROM, A CAR MUST EAT UP THE ROAD. NOT VICE VERSA.

Swedish winters are car killers. With slush and raw salt on the road half the year, a car can be eaten away in short order. Unless it's protected as well as a Volvo. Every Volvo in our showroom has two undercoats protecting its underside. Vulnerable body parts are made of anti-corrosive galvanized steel. And instead of shiny chrome trim, which rusts, Volvo has shiny, stainless steel and aluminum, which don't.

Pier Feud Erupts Once More

The long-running feud between Tomales Bay property owners Peter D. Whitney and Larry H. Marks erupted again yesterday as the county planning commission deferred action on a request to open Whitney's controversial pier to the public.

The pier, including an illegally built 48-foot extension, is located near the county's Chicken Ranch beach at Inverness and was the focal point of the Marks vs. Whitney court decision.

Marks, the loser in that state Supreme Court decision which held Whitney had a right to build his pier across a tide lot owned by Marks, yesterday requested opening the pier to the public.

Whitney called the proposal ridiculous, adding "this is not just a pier to Mr. Marks, it's Moby Dick — a white whale he has been trying to harpoon for 18 years."

Whitney said the county had no right to impose public use of his pier and charged Marks was seeking free access to the bay for upland properties he planned to sell.

The matter came before the planning commission on an appeal from Marks of the county environmental protection committee's decision to legalize the pier extension.

Marks argued that since the pier also crossed county-owned tidelands it should be open to public use.

The matter was delayed for further study by the county counsel's office and will be reconsidered at the commission's Jan. 8 meeting.

The Marin County Planning Commission also:

NORTH RIDGE — Heard the parks and recreation department's plans to keep portions of the North Ridge between Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur in open space. The commission declined to set a formal hearing for adoption of the plan until the three cities had considered the proposal in depth.

APARTMENTS — Deferred action on a plan from P. J. Tarrant to construct 42 apartments on a 3.4-acre site on Los Ranchitos Road near its intersection with Glenside Way. Nearby residents protested that the project was too dense and would create too much traffic. They said they were considering purchasing the site for a neighborhood park. It will be reconsidered on Jan. 22.

MOOSE LODGE — Deferred action on a use permit requested by the Moose Lodge of Novato for use of the vacant Atherton Club at the intersection of H Lane and Atherton Avenue near Novato. Nearby residents complained of possible noise and traffic but agreed to meet with club representatives and attempt to iron out differences.

TANKS — Approved a use permit for Robert Borello to place to sewage holding ponds on his property on Borello Ranch Road near Bolinas.

PLANS — Unanimously denied plans to place an A and W fast food restaurant at 3141 Redwood Highway near San Rafael. The site, across Highway 101 from the Civic Center, currently is used by Booby's Restaurant. The commission said the new restaurant would not be in keeping with the area.

Muir Beach Rezone Plea Denied

The Marin County Planning Commission yesterday rejected a Muir Beach property owner's request that his land be rezoned to commercial-recreational use on the eve of federal acquisition.

The request, submitted by Gilbert F. Allard of Mill Valley, proposed to change the agricultural designation for 19 acres stretching a half mile up Frank Valley Road from its intersection with Shoreline Highway.

The commission voted 6-0 (Commissioner George P. Leonard absent) to deny the request, agreeing with Commissioner Margaret B. Azevedo who said the rezoning would be premature since the federal government intends to include the land in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

An attorney for Allard told the commission his client planned to develop a campground on the site to serve 185 families.

The planning commission agreed with arguments against the rezoning by Muir Beach residents who said rezoning to commercial-recreational use was no assurance the property owner would develop the campground.

Under county ordinances, such zoning permits nightclubs, restaurants and service stations, among other things.

The land originally was proposed for the controversial A-60 agricultural zoning, but county supervisors suspended such action because of property owners' complaints that it would lower land values.

In suspending the agricultural rezoning in the new federal park, the board said it would take a dim view of proposals to inflate land values through rezoning or submittal of development plans.

Jewel Theft Pleas Given

A 20-year-old woman arrested in connection with $1,780 in stolen jewelry has been sentenced to 30 days in jail on a reduced charge of concealing stolen property.

Codefendant Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, also of Ignacio, pleaded guilty to the felony charge, provided he receives no more than four months in jail. He is to be sentenced Dec. 27.

Both pleaded guilty after a plea bargaining session by the judge, defense attorneys and a deputy district attorney. The district attorney favored four months jail in each instance.

San Rafael police arrested the pair Oct. 3 after learning that Goodrich sold the stolen jewelry to a San Rafael Merchant Sept. 26 for $165.

The jewelry was part of $3,830 in possessions stolen Sept. 26 from the home of Elena Mills Foley on a Nova Albion Way.

Heath Likes Those 'Tom-Jerry' Films

LONDON (UPI) —Friends of Prime Minister Edward Heath let the cat out of the bag today. They said he loves to watch "Tom and Jerry" cartoons.

They said Heath asked aides to obtain a supply of "Tom and Jerry" cartoons to watch over the Christmas holidays at his Chequers country retreat. They said whenever the prime minister has some free time, he likes to put his feet up and watch the zany adventures of the famous cartoon cat and mouse.

Lawmaker Urges Pay Raise Veto

SACRAMENTO (AP) — At least one lawmaker is urging Gov. Reagan to veto the 10 per cent pay increase California legislators voted for themselves in the waning hours of this year's session.

Assemblyman Floyd Wakefield, a Republican from South Gate, called upon Californians Monday to send Reagan letters and telegrams urging him to reject the pay hike.

Wakerfield said the pay raise was worked out behind closed doors with the usual committee procedure bypassed.

Ranch House Glows With Antiques

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Since moving to the Pacheco Ranch in Ignacio seven years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland have been restoring the antique furniture that they found stored n a shed on the ranch.

Rowland is the great-grandson of the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The home was built by Mrs. Pacheco for her son, Gumesindo Pacheco. The ast resident was Rowland's mother, Abigail Rowland.

Rowland's aunt, Mercedes Boeken, had painted much of the furniture and cut off the tops of some of the tables. Mrs. Herbert Rowland removed all of the old paint and varnish from the furniture and got bursitis doing it, she said.

The Rowlands have also restored furniture brought by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives when they came across the plains to Salt Lake City. They have restored the inside of the home with the old charm being maintained.

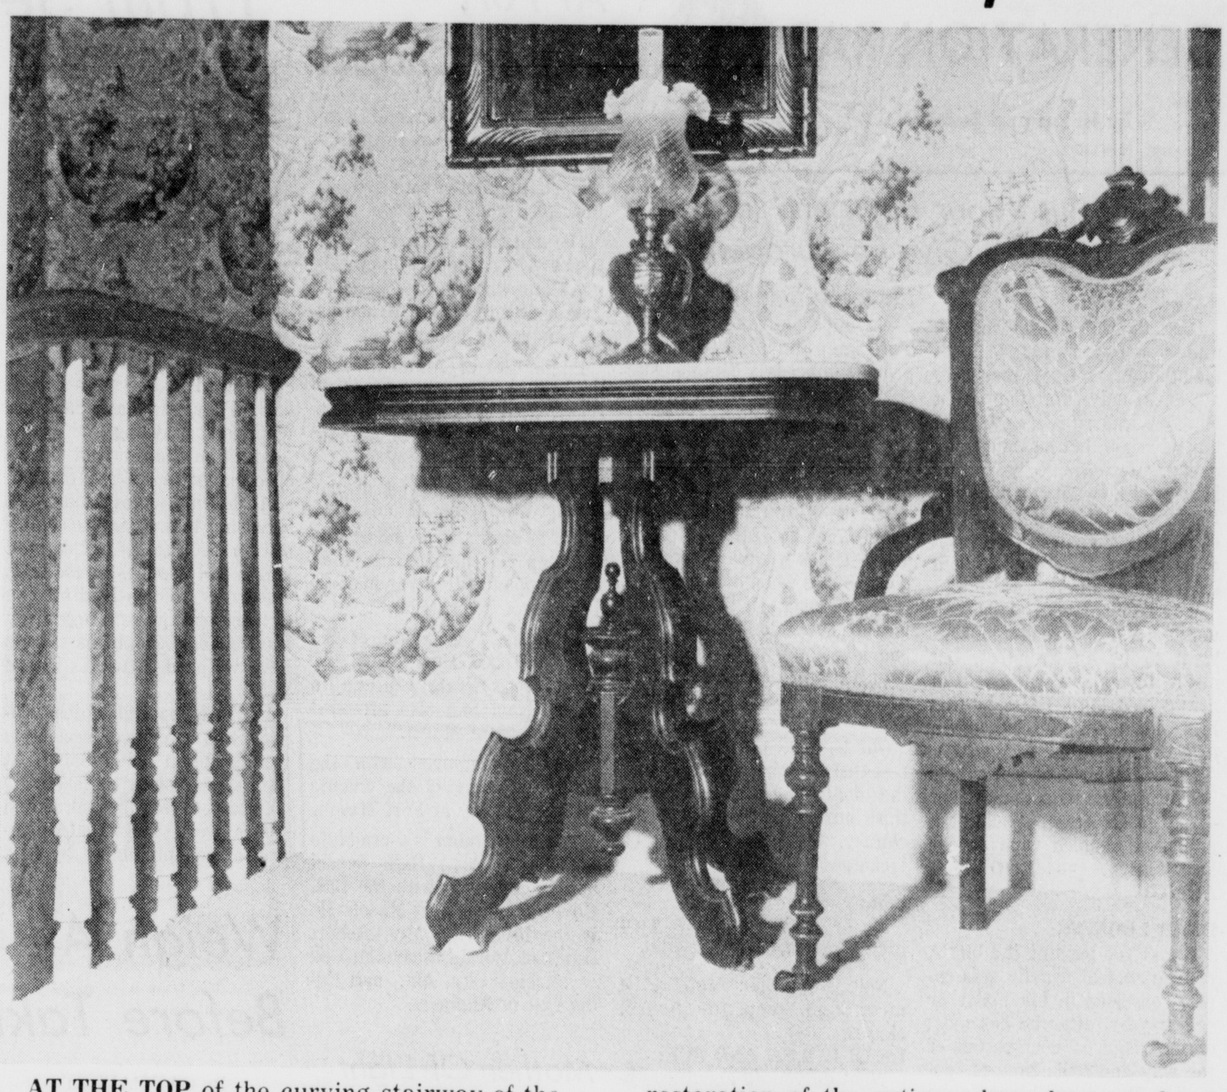
The Herbert Rowlands met in Shanghai when her parents, the late E. M. Bagleys, took her on a trip around the world. Rowland was a purser for the Dollar Lines. He has been with the American President Lines for 40 years.

Mrs. Rowland was graduated from law school, as were her parents. She has never practiced law, however.

The Pacheco home will probably remain in the family. The Rowland's son, Herbert Jr., a student at the University of California at Davis, hopes to eventually take over the ranch. Following in the footsteps of his mother and grandparents, he will study law.

The Rowlands also have a daughter, Ann, a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara, who is living in Salt Lake City.

MRS. HERBERT ROWLAND looks over the book of the Pacheco family history while sitting in the charming living room of their home in Ignacio. The Victorian sofa and chair, the picture of a pastoral scene and the table were all stored in a shed at the home of the late Mrs. Abigail Rowland and restored by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland.



AT THE TOP of the curving stairway of the five bedroom home at the Pacheco ranch is a marble top table which has a marking that it was sent by Wells Fargo to the Pacheco home. Other added attractions are the kerosene lamp and the Victorian chair. The restoration of the antiques have been made since the Herbert Rowlands moved to the ranch seven years ago. They also lived 15 years in Larkspur and five years in Loch Lommond before moving to the ranch.

ANTIQUES OF MRS. Rowland's family are also in the home on the Pacheco Ranch, built by the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The needlepoint chair, on the left of the fireplace, was brought across the plains to Salt Lake City by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives. The unusual fireplace is coalburning.

THE HIGH HEADBOARD and flowered quilt add to the charm of one of the bedrooms of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland who have refinished many of the antiques they found in a shed at the Pacheco Ranch, the home of the late Abigail Rowland, mother of Herbert Rowland. Many antique silver pieces were also found in drawers in the shed and they have been refinished.

Couple Will Make Home In Carmel

Rosalie I. Castleman of Sacramento and Paul E. Griesshaber of Alturas were married Dec. 9 at Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in Sacramento.

After a wedding trip to Carmel, they will make their home in Alturas.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Pearl Castleman of Sacramento and Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Heinz E. Griesshaber of Corte Madera.

The couple is self-employed and missionaries of Jehovah's Witnesses.

For the wedding Marilee Reed of Tucson, Ariz., was matron of honor, and Lisa Griesshaber of Corte Madera and Nancy Castleman of Sacramento were the bridesmaids.

Ray Castleman of Sacramento performed best man duties. The ushers were John Malich of Mill Valley and Jon Kesser of Chico.

The bride is a graduate of C. K. McClatchey High School in Sacramento. She is the sister of Ray, Nancy and Neil Castleman of Sacramento and Mrs. Reed of Tucson. Earl Jones of Quincy is her grandfather.

Paul, who is a graduate of Redwood High School, is the brother of Lisa and Nancy Griesshaber of Corte Madera. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Griesshaber of Bonita Springs, Fla.

Faddish Diets Are Dangerous

NEW YORK (UPI) — Low carbohydrate diets can be faddish and even dangerous, says the Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York. If your meals contain too little carbohydrate, your body will use fat or protein for energy that should be utilized otherwise.

You can also suffer a shortage of protein for body repair and maintenance and a shortage of fat for vitamins and essential fatty acids.

Engagement Of Couple Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Del Prete of San Rafael have announced the engagement of their daughter Diana Lynne Del Prete to Kevin Kenneth Kilbride of San Rafael.

The couple are planning to be married next June.

Diana is the sister of Susan Marie, Sheryl Ann, James and John O. Del Prete Jr. of San Rafael.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Haskin and Mrs. Guilia Del Prete of San Rafael are her grandparents.

Diana is a graduate of San Rafael High School and is employed with F. W. Woolworth Co. in Corte Madera.

Kevin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kilbride of San Rafael, and he is the brother of Lawrence Kilbride of Kirkland, Wash., and Mrs. Paul Bange of Ojai.

He also is a graduate of San Rafael High School and Kevin attended the College of Marin. He is employed with his father in Abbot Construction Co. in San Rafael.

Use Cards For Happy Holiday Look

Some ideas:

Attach cards to a folding cardboard screen covered with gold paper that would serve as a backdrop for a statue of the Madonna or a replica of the Christmas crib.

Cut a giant tree-shape from green felt. Tape it to a wall. As the cards arrive, add them to the "tree" with pins, tape, or glue.

Use wide strips of red satin greetings. Tape ribbons to either side of a doorway or window. If the curtains won't interfere, run ribbons right down the window, attaching them to the frame at top and bottom.

Make a two-sided display by taping or stapling cards to both sides, thus making a window decoration that can be enjoyed from both outdoors and indoors.

Strip an old umbrella of fabric, spray spokes gold and anchor handle in a pot of soil or clay. Presto — you have an umbrella card tree. Hang on cards with red and green ribbons.

Doll Costumes Made By Girls

Marin Camp Fire Girls Discovery Club members have made costumes for dolls to be distributed by the Salvation Army for Christmas.

Other Camp Fire holiday activites will be singing Christmas carols Monday on KTIM radio and Tuesday at Kaiser Hospital in San Rafael.

Epilepsy Said Nerve Disorder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Epilepsy is a disorder of the nervous system. Drugs have been developed which can wholly or partially control epileptic seizures in some 80 per cent of the cases, according to the National Health Education Committee.

However, great numbers of persons who could benefit from such treatment never receive it. Over 20 anti-convulsant drugs can control seizures.

Snags Develop In Novato Plan

Novato City Council, warned by Mayor F. Wayne Sartain that it was going to have to "bite the bullet soon," last night postponed delving into the revised Novato Area General Plan.

The plan, a year in the making and subject of five public hearings in recent weeks, was before the city council for comment and recommendation.

After councilmen questioned the staff and heard late comment at a public hearing, it appeared that the council would then have its say.

At that point, Councilman George C. Quesada said he wasn't prepared "to comment in depth," since he was "getting comment and still thinking."

Other councilmen agreed it wouldn't be logical to proceed until all members were ready, and will meet again on the plan at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 4 at the Novato Community House.

Sartain said, "At some point in time we have to come to grips" with the plan. Furthermore, he said, it appeared that changes will be made in the plan and it would have to be referred back to the planning commission, extending the time before adoption.

Councilman Fred F. Ruegg challenged a planning staff report that public scenic area in the plan could be purchased for $3.2 million.

Ruegg said based on the costs of acquiring land for redevelopment in Santa Rosa, the value of the land would be about $7.1 million, and based on "recent sales, appraisals, offers to purchase and estate valuation" it would be in excess of $10 million.

Quesada said that "raw land is grossly underassessed," and the matter should be taken to the Marin County Grand Jury to have it assessed at its proper value.

During the abbreviated public hearing, Planning Commissioner James L. Picchi said he believed that "single family residential is passe," with apartments and condominiums which have "total amenities as the "way of life that is coming."

"I still think we're looking into the past," Picchi said.

Attorney Richard Tarrant representing McAlester Construction Finance Corp. objected to designation of the firm's land adjoining Bel Marin Keys as agricultural.

Eileen Souza, representing Frank Ribelo, owner of land at the end of Vineyard Road, said the Ribelo land shouldn't be designated agricultural because it is "economically impossible" to use it for agriculture.

Mary Souza, representing owners of land at Deer Island, opposed the hill and canyon designation which would permit one home per five acres. "We don't want everything taken away from us on this property," she said.

Councilmen pondered the relationship between the proposed countywide plan and the city's general plan, since the city's plan extends beyond city boundaries into unincorporated area.

Ruegg also asked what would happen if the county's plan and the city's plan were in conflict in the unincorporated area near Novato.

City Atty. Clark M. Palmer said the city wouldn't have any power in the unincorporated area, but "the impact would depend on the degree of intergovernmental cooperation."

Councilman David Price Jones said: "I think we should adopt ours as soon as possible. If we do, it will be a lot easier to convince them to do what we want in the area."

The council adjourned until its regular session at 8 p.m. today at the Novato Community House. Sartain said the council will conduct final interviews of persons seeking appointment to the city commissions at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Community House. After the interviews, the council will hold a closed session, and then, in open session, make the appointments, Sartain said.

Younger Looks At Crime Lords

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's Attorney General, Evelle J. Younger, says Mafia-style "godfathers" hve much less of a grip on organized crime on the West Coast than anywhere else in the nation.

Younger said Sunday there are fewer and less powerful crime lords in the West because "the classic type of organized crime" hasn't been as successful as it has on the East Coast.

He said a major factor in the lower profile of organized crime in the west is "the high quality of leadership in law enforcement and the integrity of our representatives in government."

Job Suit Allowed At Class Action

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A federal judge ruled Monday that an employment discrimination case against the Bank of California could be argued as a statewide class action on behalf of women, blacks and chicanos.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham dismissed from the action three organizations and individuals who had filed it. He said the National Organization of Women, GI Forum and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had not "alleged injuries to themselves or any of their members.

But, Peckham said, he would not dismiss the suit.

The action sought "population parity," employe representation reflecting the number of blacks, women and chicanos in the population.

19 Receive Awards For Bike Essays

Nineteen Fairfax youngsters were presented with cash awards of up to $25 yesterday for submitting prize-winning essays in the Fairfax Police Department's bicycle safety essay contest, Chief Charles A. Grasso announced today.

In order of placement, winners are:

Merchants who contributed to the $167 prize kitty were Quality Liquors, Shep's Meats, Food Villa, Fairfax Lumber, B and C Television, Bank of America, Marin Town and Country Club, Enrico's Restaurant, S and N Auto Parts, Fastidious Fido's, Perri's Tavern, Crocker Citizens Bank and the Fairfax Theater, he said.

Some 113 entries were submitted in the contest, which was judged by Fairfax School District officials, Grasso said.

Peron On Way Back To Madrid

LIMA (UPI) —Former Argentine President Juan D. Peron arrived in Peru Monday for a brief two-day visit before continuing his trip back to Madrid for Christmas.

Peron departed Paraguay after a four-day stay without commenting on the political turmoil unleashed in Argentine peronist ranks by his selection of Hector J. Campora as presidential candidate of the Justicialista Liberation Front.

Peron, 77, was expected to meet in Lima with leftist nationalist President Juan Velazco Alvarado, then to continue on to Madrid next Thursday.

Qantas Development Plans Turned Down

The Petaluma City Council last night balked at a rezoning request, asking for more precise plans on the development of houses, apartments and offices.

Qantas Development Corp. requested a planned community district for 38 acres behind the Washington Square Shopping Center. Plans included 73 homes on 5,000-square foot lots, 208 apartment units and nearly seven acres of professional-medical offices.

Councilmen said they had no quarrel with the rezoning request, but hesitated to grant it since complete details of the plans were not available.

Representatives of Qantas said they would meet with staff members and prepare more information for the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council did, however, accept the environmental impact report on the project which included conflicting opinions on the effect the project would have on schools.

While the developers report indicated some problem with school housing for students, the Petaluma Board of Education submitted a letter urging absolutely no further development in the McDowell School area since 900 children are now crowded into the school designed for 750.

The Petaluma City Council Also:

CARS — Accepted the bid of Jim Rose Chrysler-Plymouth of $16,685 for four police sedans, a station wagon and a compact sedan.

RADIO — Rejected on a 2-2 vote the suggestion of Councilman William A. Perry Jr. that the city buy an hour of radio time on Jan. 1 to discuss city goals for 1973. Councilmen Fred V. Mattei and Richard W. Cleveak dissented while Mayor Helen Putnam supported Perry. Councilmen Robert A. Brunner, William A. Daly and John W. Cavanagh Jr. were absent.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting on Jan. 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Food Prices Drop

MANILA (UPI) —Food prices, particularly rice, vegetables and fruits, declined 5 to 161 per cent in the first two weeks of November. The Central Bank attributed the decrease to a continuous flow of vegetables and fruits from Northern and Southern Luzon and Northern Mindanao provinces.

Stolen Property Charge Admitted

UKIAH, Calif. (UPI) —The owners of a remote ranch allegedly used as a burying grounds by the Hell's Angels pleaded guilty Monday to charges of possessing stolen property.

George and Helen Wethern, who were granted immunity from narcotics charges earlier in return for testimony against motorcycle gang members, were placed on probation after entering their pleas.

They were arrested Oct. 30 on their ranch six miles outside this Mendocino County town by officers who found the bodies of two men and a woman buried in an abandoned welt on the property.

Woman Reports Her Purse Stolen

Christine Olson, 107 Galland Street, Petaluma, told police a young man stole her purse yesterday at 2:30 p.m. as she walked on Kentucky Street.

Mrs. Olson said the man grabbed the purse from behind and fled. The purse contained $15.

WHERE VOLVOS COME FROM, A CAR MUST EAT UP THE ROAD. NOT VICE VERSA.

Swedish winters are car killers. With slush and raw salt on the road half the year, a car can be eaten away in short order. Unless it's protected as well as a Volvo. Every Volvo in our showroom has two undercoats protecting its underside. Vulnerable body parts are made of anti-corrosive galvanized steel. And instead of shiny chrome trim, which rusts, Volvo has shiny, stainless steel and aluminum, which don't.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Don't Push Your Boyfriend Into A Career — Give Encouragement

RAP:

How do you light the fire under a boyfriend? I don't mean lovewise, but careerwise.

Toby's only ambition right now is to marry me, and I like that idea too, but he won't plan ahead. He doesn't have any idea what he wants to do in life, I guess he thinks if you finish college, somehow you'll just drop into a great job without even aiming for it.

We're sophomores at the university and I already know I want to be an architect, but never mention it because I'm afraid he'd think I was putting him down for not having a direction.

He isn't afraid of work, he's bright, and he likes money, but — no goals. At 20, shouldn't a guy have decided what career he wants? — LOOKING AHEAD

DEAR LOOKING:

Aren't you pushing it a bit? A college student usually gets career-conscious in his junior or senior year, after he has most of the required courses out of the way and finds time to specialize. Encourage his interests — the goals will come in good time. — HELEN

LOOKING AHEAD:

Here's a tip that might work: talk about your architect-ambitions! A little competition sometimes lights the fire under a guy. If Toby hears you already have a career in mind, he may start thinking more seriously about his goals. . .The male ego thing, y'know: a man doesn't appreciate his girl getting ahead of him. — SUE

HELEN AND SUE:

These people (like "Archie") who keep harping that the peace symbol is a communistic sign, "anti-Christ witch's foot" emblem, and whatnot: don't they know a symbol means only what it is most widely accepted as?

The two-finger "peace" sign was once "V for Victory." When I was younger it meant donkey-ears when held behind a friend's head. If I see this gesture now I don't think someone is calling me a donkey. I return it as acknowledgment of a mutual desire for world peace. Another example:

Our political parties are represented by the elephant and the donkey. Does this mean that our politicians are all clumsy, tough-hided uglies or jackasses? — C.M.

C.M.:

We-e-ell. . .since you asked. . .HELEN

Note from Sue: Mother, be nice; and keep the peace, okay?

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

What do you do about a father who thinks he's the world's greatest humorist? He yells to me down the hall, "Here's Pete," when he knows perfectly well it's Joe at the door. He just loves mixing up names of my boyfriends to embarrass me. If I show I'm mad, he teases all the more. — FATHER-BOTHERED NEW DATER

DEAR F.B.N.D.:

Better kidding than cussing —which is what some fathers do about boyfriends. Hopefully yours will outgrow this "cute" stage in a few months —with a little help from Mother. — HELEN

DEAR BOTHERED:

How about getting your mother to call your Dad a different man's name every night for a week? That should show him how it feels. — SUE

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Vows Said At Fort Mason Chapel

Bette Ann Croker and Winford Foy Cox of San Francisco were married at Fort Mason Chapel in San Francisco on Dec. 10.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Croker of San Anselmo, Bette was attended by Mrs. Arthur Reade of San Bruno as her matron of honor.

A reception followed at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club. Following a wedding trip through Northern California, the couple will live in San Francisco.

Bette is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and Fort Hays State College in Hays, Kan. She also attended the College of Marin.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Eufala, Ala., High School and is employed with the U.S. Government at Fort Mason. He is the brother of Mrs. Robert Jones of Eufala, Sherman Cox of Phoenix City, Ala., and Eddie Cox of Alameda.

Mother Of Eight Receives Degree

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—It's two down and one to go for Mrs. Don P. Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell, mother of eight and grandmother of 24, received her bachelor of science degree from Western Michigan University in weekend graduation ceremonies.

She quit high school in the 10th grade and returned to school and received her Benton Harbor High School diploma in 1966, along with her son, Steve, the last of the eight Mitchell children to graduate from high school.

Mrs. Mitchell says she will return to college in April and work for a masters degree.

Mrs. John Rauschkolb, director of volunteers, presented pins totalling 6,900 hours of service to the hospital.

Mms. Herbert McComber and Francis Burt received pins for 800 hours of service. Mms. Robert Aregger, James Collins, Gordon Costa, John Reamey and G. M. Thomason were honored for 500 hours. Mms. Delbert Davis and John Taylor were honored for 400 hours.

Mrs. Betty Allen, Mrs. Roy Anderson, Mrs. Jerome Francheschi and Mrs. Seymour Malmuth were listed for 300 hours and Mrs. E. A. Kunstman had 200 hours. Awards for 100 hours of service went to Mms. Howard Chapman, Werner Desepte, Dan Gallagher, Warner Morgan and Luis A. Otanez. Mms. Donald Barron and Winston Frenzel were honored for 25 hours of service.

A BRAZILIAN DANCE

From Self-Defense To Art Form

By RICHARD WEINGARTEN

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Seven teen-age girls recently enrolled in an all-male class to learn the rough and tumble dance with the evil mystique Brazilians call "capoeira."

"My mother and father were against the idea, and still are," Claudia Almeida, 18, told UPI. "You know, they thought I'd get hurt, and meet the wrong types."

Brazilian slaves first developed capoeira as a means of self defense against armed slave masters. Using a combination of rapid, well-aimed kicks, and dodges, a rebellious slave was able to fend off two or three opponents. A legendary slave leader, Zumbi, is said to have whipped 30 whites in one fight.

In 1890, a year after Brazilian slaves were emancipated, capoeira was prohibited by law. Backlands politicians for years had henchmen trained in capoeira to "win over" voters.

Later, the most experienced capoeristas, known as "masters," toned down its most violent elements. When whites were present, they staged special acrobatic exhibitions using the so called "gentlemen's touch."

President Getulio Vargas saw one of these demonstrations in 1934 and was much impressed. Shortly afterwards, two famous capoeiristas opened Capoeira Academies.

AS TAUGHT and practiced in the academies, capoeira has evolved away from violence towards becoming a stylized dance. It demands great agility and tremendous physical stamina.

A group of Sao Paulo capoeira masters are now trying to have the government make capoeira Brazil's national sport. It is unlikely that this will happen very soon, because capoeira has not yet lost its shady image.

A recent newspaper report told of a 16 year old capoeirista who tangled with two policemen. Before the police could draw their revolvers, the boy gave each a barefooted smack on the ear and fled through a screen of excited onlookers.

THE GIRLS learning capoeira from "Peixinho," a 22-year-old business administration student and member of Rio's folkdancing "Senzala Group," said that they were not interested in becoming vicious capoeira mercenaries.

Claudia said she was interested in the dance, not in "busting some guy in the mouth." She said she began dancing capoeira with her boyfriend.

American-born Regina "Nina" Whealer, 17, said she had an "aggressive streak" and likes "aggressive dance."

Boys and girls agreed, however, that capoeira requires a dose of "malice."

"The important blows are delivered on the counterattack," Peixinho explained. "When my opponent's coming at me, I try to evade his kick, and give him a kick, or push him off balance."

ASKED IF she was malicious enough to be a good capoerista, Claudia came back with a coy smile and said, "Any person born and raised in Rio de Janeiro is enough of a scoundrel to be an excellent capoeirista."

In less than five months, the girls have learned five basic capoeira attacks. The "Ginga" is a bobbing and weaving step used to size up one's opponent.

To an outsider the other blows start out innocently, looking like a slow, backwards cartwheel, until a meaty heel goes flying into the face, chest, or ribcage of the other dancer.

Those not dancing clap their hands and chant the special refrains that describe the action. A one-stringed instrument called a "Berimbau" provides the twangy rhythm for the dancers. Tambourines and long cylindrical bongo drums are also used.

"But it is the berimbau that commands the dance," Peixinho said.

Weigh All The Sides Carefully Before Taking The Job Plunge

By GAY PAULEY

They're the ones who do not hold jobs outside the home. Occasionally they're counted but it's the other group—the working women—who get more national attention.

Statistically, the women who do not hold jobs outside the home number 41 million (the latest count from the U.S. Department of Labor). Of these, 35 million plus keep house, another 3.4 million are in school and still a segment of several hundred thousand are unable to work. In short, this group is larger than the more publicized 31.5 million who do hold jobs.

Now comes the question—if you're among the 41 million, should you enter the labor market? The Women's Bureau (of the labor department) says yes.

YOUR TALENTS and skills are needed in the economy and the development of new industries and expansion of others has opened new doors in business, the professions and the production of goods and services.

But there are many things to consider before you seek a paying job. The idea of extra income sounds great—but how much extra will a job mean?

One national magazine recently calculated that extra costs and hidden expenses could eat up 70 per cent of that contribution.

Penny Scott, family financial consultant for the Oak Park, Ill., Federal Savings and Loan Association, takes one family to illustrate what can happen to that two-salaried family with preschool children.

Husband earns $14,400 annually and wife gets a job for $9,200, giving her a base pay of $177 a week.

SHE "LOSES" $23 withheld for federal income tax and another $5 for a typical state tax, plus $9 for social security. Another $2 weekly goes for group health and life insurance plans. That leaves her $138 per week.

But the wife also pays $25 a week for child care, $15 a week for housekeeping help, $10 a week for lunches and coffee breaks, and $3 per week for bus fare.

In addition, the wife spends $15 a week for the cost of new clothes, more frequent trips to the hairdresser, ready prepared or convenience foods, use of commercial laundry, more dry cleaning and the like.

All of these extras make the $177 a week dwindle to $70, or $3,640 a year.

Then at tax time, because her withholding enters into the total family income, the family finds it owes an additional $818 in federal income taxes. And in some instances, state and city income taxes also take another big bite.

All told, this wife may end up with only 30 per cent of her annual salary.

GRANTED, THE working woman can save by taking her lunch and if the family is cooperative, and she is strong enough, she can do her own housekeeping after job hours.

But an outside job also could mean the family needs a second car. Even if she goes in a car pool, she may have to contribute to gas expenses. And some jobs also involve dues and license expenses.

Now, should the wife still seek a paying job?

Talk the matter over with the entire family. It should be a family decision, actually, said Miss Scott.

Everyone should understand what's involved and the changes that have to be made.

Ladies' Days On Slopes Returning

OTTAWA (UPI) — Ladies' Days, which were given a tryout last season, are back again this year every Tuesday and Wednesday at Silver Star Mountain ski area in Vernon, British Columbia, Canada, says the government tourist bureau.

Special baby-sitting services are provided for skiing moms. The idea has proved so popular that ski-moms from many surrounding towns flock to Vernon for Ladies' Days.

More Free Time Than The Bachelor

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japanese government survey on leisure showed that fathers with the youngest child in high school or above have more free time than bachelors.

Unmarried men have about four and a half hours of free time each weekday, compared with more than five hours for married men with children of high school age or older, the survey reported.

A Cookbook Funds To Go To Agency

NEW YORK (UPI) —A San Francisco research organization that specializes in ethnic and minority studies has added a cookbook to its publishing list to raise funds for CARE, the international assistance agency.

Most of the recipes in the "We Care Cookbook" by Robert D. Reed and Kathy S. Reed (R & E Research Associates) were culled from 19th and early 20th century cookbooks, but a few are included from CARE nutritionists as examples of the types of foods used in the agency's program. Included are recipes from Africa, Pakistan, northern India, the Bulkans, southeast Asia, the Caribbean and Latin America.

A third of the price of each book is donated to the assistance agency, and represents food for 300 children.

The book can be ordered by direct mail from We Care Cookbook, 18581 McFarland Ave., Saratoga, Calif., 95070.

Publishers hope to expand distribution through bulk sales to individuals, church and other community and civic groups, school and college organizations, service clubs and youth groups. Single copies are $3.45 each, including postage.

Ranch House Glows With Antiques

MRS. HERBERT ROWLAND looks over the book of the Pacheco family history while sitting in the charming living room of their home in Ignacio. The Victorian sofa and chair, the picture of a pastoral scene and the table were all stored in a shed at the home of the late Mrs. Abigail Rowland and restored by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland.

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Since moving to the Pacheco Ranch in Ignacio seven years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland have been restoring the antique furniture that they found stored n a shed on the ranch.

Rowland is the great-grandson of the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The home was built by Mrs. Pacheco for her son, Gumesindo Pacheco. The ast resident was Rowland's mother, Abigail Rowland.

Rowland's aunt, Mercedes Boeken, had painted much of the furniture and cut off the tops of some of the tables. Mrs. Herbert Rowland removed all of the old paint and varnish from the furniture and got bursitis doing it, she said.

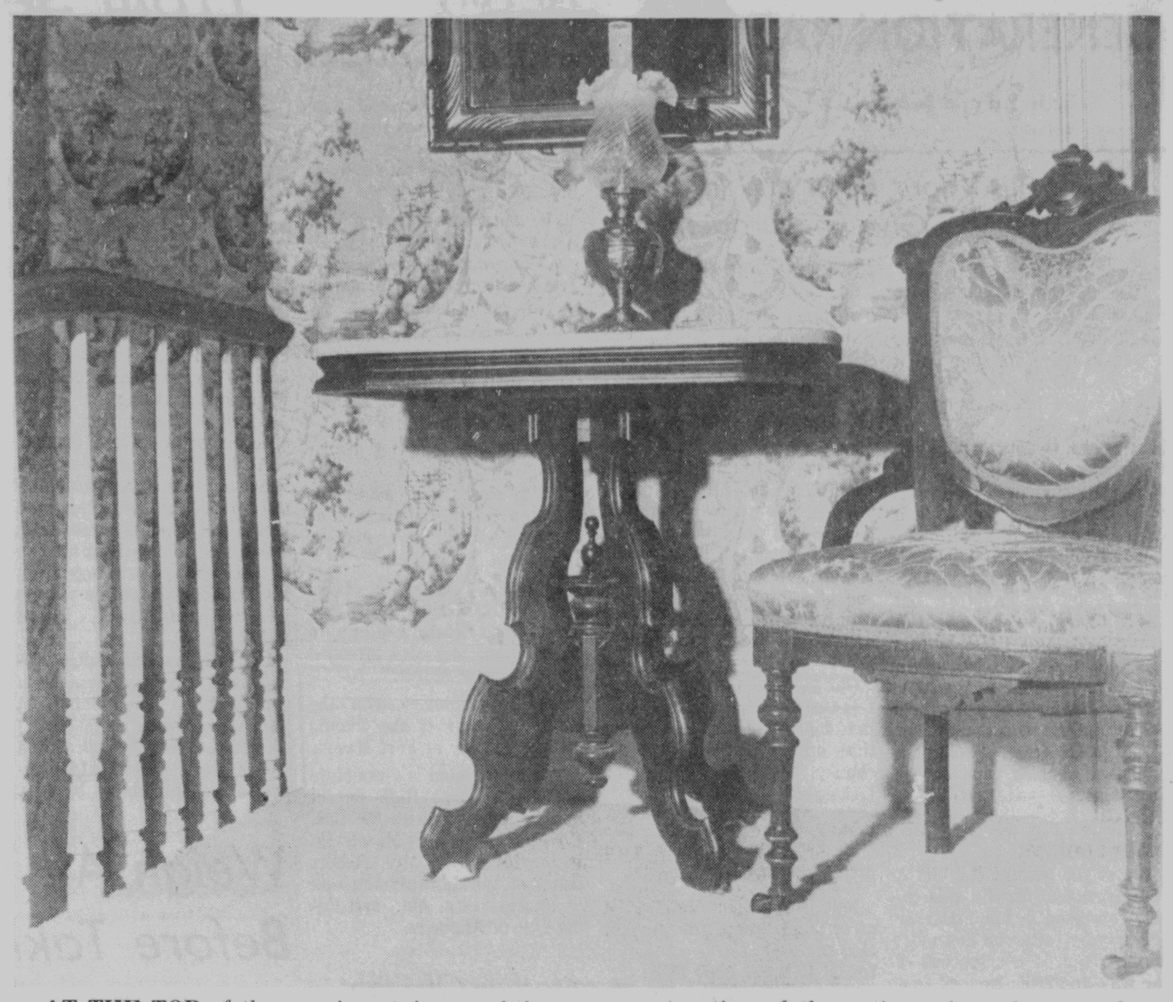
The Rowlands have also restored furniture brought by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives when they came across the plains to Salt Lake City. They have restored the inside of the home with the old charm being maintained.

The Herbert Rowlands met in Shanghai when her parents, the late E. M. Bagleys, took her on a trip around the world. Rowland was a purser for the Dollar Lines. He has been with the American President Lines for 40 years.

Mrs. Rowland was graduated from law school, as were her parents. She has never practiced law, however.

The Pacheco home will probably remain in the family. The Rowland's son, Herbert Jr., a student at the University of California at Davis, hopes to eventually take over the ranch. Following in the footsteps of his mother and grandparents, he will study law.

The Rowlands also have a daughter, Ann, a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara, who is living in Salt Lake City.



AT THE TOP of the curving stairway of the five bedroom home at the Pacheco ranch is a marble top table which has a marking that it was sent by Wells Fargo to the Pacheco home. Other added attractions are the kerosene lamp and the Victorian chair. The restoration of the antiques have been made since the Herbert Rowlands moved to the ranch seven years ago. They also lived 15 years in Larkspur and five years in Loch Lommond before moving to the ranch.

ANTIQUES OF MRS. Rowland's family are also in the home on the Pacheco Ranch, built by the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The needlepoint chair, on the left of the fireplace, was brought across the plains to Salt Lake City by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives. The unusual fireplace is coalburning.

THE HIGH HEADBOARD and flowered quilt add to the charm of one of the bedrooms of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland who have refinished many of the antiques they found in a shed at the Pacheco Ranch, the home of the late Abigail Rowland, mother of Herbert Rowland. Many antique silver pieces were also found in drawers in the shed and they have been refinished.

Couple Will Make Home In Carmel

Rosalie I. Castleman of Sacramento and Paul E. Griesshaber of Alturas were married Dec. 9 at Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in Sacramento.

After a wedding trip to Carmel, they will make their home in Alturas.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Pearl Castleman of Sacramento and Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Heinz E. Griesshaber of Corte Madera.

The couple is self-employed and missionaries of Jehovah's Witnesses.

For the wedding Marilee Reed of Tucson, Ariz., was matron of honor, and Lisa Griesshaber of Corte Madera and Nancy Castleman of Sacramento were the bridesmaids.

Ray Castleman of Sacramento performed best man duties. The ushers were John Malich of Mill Valley and Jon Kesser of Chico.

The bride is a graduate of C. K. McClatchey High School in Sacramento. She is the sister of Ray, Nancy and Neil Castleman of Sacramento and Mrs. Reed of Tucson. Earl Jones of Quincy is her grandfather.

Paul, who is a graduate of Redwood High School, is the brother of Lisa and Nancy Griesshaber of Corte Madera. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Griesshaber of Bonita Springs, Fla.

Faddish Diets Are Dangerous

NEW YORK (UPI) — Low carbohydrate diets can be faddish and even dangerous, says the Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York. If your meals contain too little carbohydrate, your body will use fat or protein for energy that should be utilized otherwise.

You can also suffer a shortage of protein for body repair and maintenance and a shortage of fat for vitamins and essential fatty acids.

Engagement Of Couple Announced

DIANA DEL PRETE
Engagement news

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Del Prete of San Rafael have announced the engagement of their daughter Diana Lynne Del Prete to Kevin Kenneth Kilbride of San Rafael.

The couple are planning to be married next June.

Diana is the sister of Susan Marie, Sheryl Ann, James and John O. Del Prete Jr. of San Rafael.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Haskin and Mrs. Guilia Del Prete of San Rafael are her grandparents.

Diana is a graduate of San Rafael High School and is employed with F. W. Woolworth Co. in Corte Madera.

Kevin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kilbride of San Rafael, and he is the brother of Lawrence Kilbride of Kirkland, Wash., and Mrs. Paul Bange of Ojai.

He also is a graduate of San Rafael High School and Kevin attended the College of Marin. He is employed with his father in Abbot Construction Co. in San Rafael.

Use Cards For Happy Holiday Look

Some ideas:

Attach cards to a folding cardboard screen covered with gold paper that would serve as a backdrop for a statue of the Madonna or a replica of the Christmas crib.

Cut a giant tree-shape from green felt. Tape it to a wall. As the cards arrive, add them to the "tree" with pins, tape, or glue.

Use wide strips of red satin greetings. Tape ribbons to either side of a doorway or window. If the curtains won't interfere, run ribbons right down the window, attaching them to the frame at top and bottom.

Make a two-sided display by taping or stapling cards to both sides, thus making a window decoration that can be enjoyed from both outdoors and indoors.

Strip an old umbrella of fabric, spray spokes gold and anchor handle in a pot of soil or clay. Presto — you have an umbrella card tree. Hang on cards with red and green ribbons.

Doll Costumes Made By Girls

Marin Camp Fire Girls Discovery Club members have made costumes for dolls to be distributed by the Salvation Army for Christmas.

Mixing Design Periods Can Be Fun

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
(Distributed by Genera Features Corp.

Rather consistently I hear myself claiming to be a totally contemporary person. Nostalgia is not for me. Tomorrow is something I anticipate with relish, including the possibility of visiting yonder moon.

Yet beautiful old things get their hooks into me. A jewel of a Louis Comfort Tiffany bud vase, embellished with tendrils of dark green glass, is a favorite possession. And pre-Columbian artifacts dating from 700 to 1,000 years ago seem totally appropriate to my lifestyle and, in fact, they rest atop my 1972 stereo speakers.

There's a bit of this duality in most of us, so it's sometimes confusing to make a decorating decision based on multiple interests.

So my advice is pick one major period of design you prefer above all others, whether it be English country, 18th-Century French, American Colonial or 20th-Century modern (or at least what we now consider modern). Organize major seating pieces and one or two tables or cabinets in this "look." Then forget it. Don't buy a rug to match the look, don't search for lamps with similar detailing. Just start acquiring the best accessories for today's living.

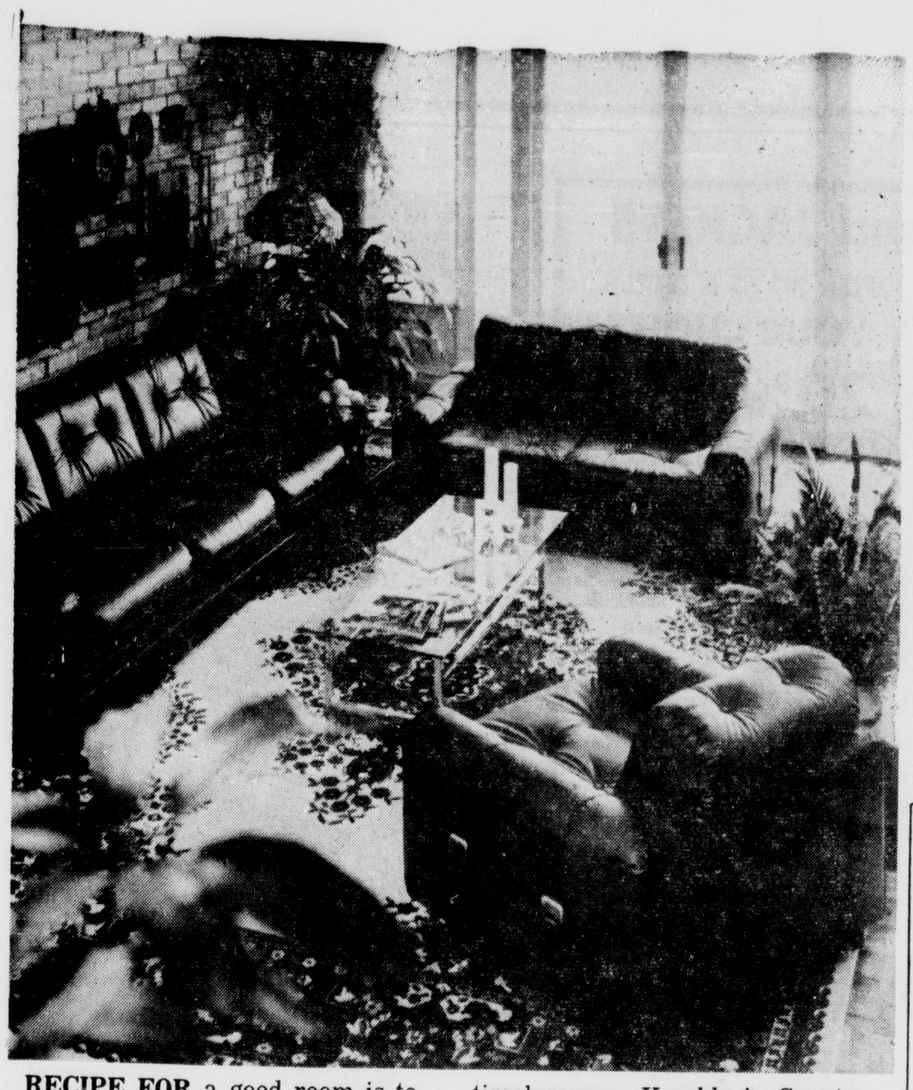
MODERN LAMPS are one of the easiest accessories to absorb into an eclectic interior. Pick the purest forms — the lamps that do the job you require. If you prefer Oriental rugs, use them, no matter what kind of furniture you've selected; they really are at home with everything. And if you own the rug before you purchase furniture, let the rug be your color guide.

Oriental rugs generally leave areas of wood or vinyl or tile flooring exposed. Some free-wheeling designers like to place Oriental rugs atop wall-to-wall carpeting where the floors are not sufficiently handsome or exposable. For example, many houses have concrete slabs as base floors, and builders have installed carpeting over the slab. A new owner might take up the carpet expecting to find wood floors. Quite a surprise!

So before you throw away current wall-to-wall carpeting, check the base. You may prefer the Oriental or contemporary area rug atop the old carpeting than a big investment in wood or tile floors.

The room shown today bridges a lot of design gaps. The owners stripped a painted wall to expose old brick construction. They refinished an unusual stained and paned door and window area. They brought in lots of oldies but goodies, such as the hanging Tiffany lamp and the collectables on the wall.

For seating they chose the supercomfort of Kroehler's Country Set line and instead of simply a sofa and chair, they added a two-seater unit that really expands the sit-down space in this attractive room. Although it keeps its secret well, this Kroehler group is covered in Uniroyal's new Aerflo breathable vinyl, not real leather. Lots of foam cushioning makes it truly soft to the touch as well as easy on the eyes — and a perfect mate for the Oriental rug.



RECIPE FOR a good room is to mix the best of today's upholstery techniques with the visuals of timelessness. Kroehler's Country Set group is at home with period accessories.

Osteoarthritis Afflicts Many

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 10 million Americans have osteoarthritis severe enough to cause painful problems. Osteoarthritis is associated with aging and degeneration of joint tissues.

It usually develops more slowly and is milder and less painful than rheumatoid arthritis.

Don't Push Your Boyfriend Into A Career — Give Encouragement

RAP:

How do you light the fire under a boyfriend? I don't mean lovewise, but careerwise.

Toby's only ambition right now is to marry me, and I like that idea too, but he won't plan ahead. He doesn't have any idea what he wants to do in life, I guess he thinks if you finish college, somehow you'll just drop into a great job without even aiming for it.

We're sophomores at the university and I already know I want to be an architect, but never mention it because I'm afraid he'd think I was putting him down for not having a direction.

He isn't afraid of work, he's bright, and he likes money, but — no goals. At 20, shouldn't a guy have decided what career he wants? — LOOKING AHEAD

DEAR LOOKING:

Aren't you pushing it a bit? A college student usually gets career-conscious in his junior or senior year, after he has most of the required courses out of the way and finds time to specialize. Encourage his interests — the goals will come in good time. — HELEN

LOOKING AHEAD:

Here's a tip that might work: talk about your architect-ambitions! A little competition sometimes lights the fire under a guy. If Toby hears you already have a career in mind, he may start thinking more seriously about his goals. . .The male ego thing, y'know: a man doesn't appreciate his girl getting ahead of him. — SUE

HELEN AND SUE:

These people (like "Archie") who keep harping that the peace symbol is a communistic sign, "anti-Christ witch's foot" emblem, and whatnot: don't they know a symbol means only what it is most widely accepted as?

The two-finger "peace" sign was once "V for Victory." When I was younger it meant donkey-ears when held behind a friend's head. If I see this gesture now I don't think someone is calling me a donkey. I return it as acknowledgment of a mutual desire for world peace. Another example:

Our political parties are represented by the elephant and the donkey. Does this mean that our politicians are all clumsy, tough-hided uglies or jackasses? — C.M.

C.M.:

We-e-ell. . .since you asked. . .HELEN

Note from Sue: Mother, be nice; and keep the peace, okay?

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

What do you do about a father who thinks he's the world's greatest humorist? He yells to me down the hall, "Here's Pete," when he knows perfectly well it's Joe at the door. He just loves mixing up names of my boyfriends to embarrass me. If I show I'm mad, he teases all the more. — FATHER-BOTHERED NEW DATER

DEAR F.B.N.D.:

Better kidding than cussing —which is what some fathers do about boyfriends. Hopefully yours will outgrow this "cute" stage in a few months —with a little help from Mother. — HELEN

DEAR BOTHERED:

How about getting your mother to call your Dad a different man's name every night for a week? That should show him how it feels. — SUE

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Volunteers Are Honored

Mrs. John Rauschkolb, director of volunteers, presented pins totalling 6,900 hours of service to the hospital.

Mms. Herbert McComber and Francis Burt received pins for 800 hours of service. Mms. Robert Aregger, James Collins, Gordon Costa, John Reamey and G. M. Thomason were honored for 500 hours. Mms. Delbert Davis and John Taylor were honored for 400 hours.

Mrs. Betty Allen, Mrs. Roy Anderson, Mrs. Jerome Francheschi and Mrs. Seymour Malmuth were listed for 300 hours and Mrs. E. A. Kunstman had 200 hours. Awards for 100 hours of service went to Mms. Howard Chapman, Werner Desepte, Dan Gallagher, Warner Morgan and Luis A. Otanez. Mms. Donald Barron and Winston Frenzel were honored for 25 hours of service.

Vows Said At Fort Mason Chapel

Bette Ann Croker and Winford Foy Cox of San Francisco were married at Fort Mason Chapel in San Francisco on Dec. 10.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Croker of San Anselmo, Bette was attended by Mrs. Arthur Reade of San Bruno as her matron of honor.

A reception followed at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club. Following a wedding trip through Northern California, the couple will live in San Francisco.

Bette is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and Fort Hays State College in Hays, Kan. She also attended the College of Marin.

She is employed with the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands Agency at Fort Mason.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Eufala, Ala., High School and is employed with the U.S. Government at Fort Mason. He is the brother of Mrs. Robert Jones of Eufala, Sherman Cox of Phoenix City, Ala., and Eddie Cox of Alameda.

Mother Of Eight Receives Degree

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—It's two down and one to go for Mrs. Don P. Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell, mother of eight and grandmother of 24, received her bachelor of science degree from Western Michigan University in weekend graduation ceremonies.

She quit high school in the 10th grade and returned to school and received her Benton Harbor High School diploma in 1966, along with her son, Steve, the last of the eight Mitchell children to graduate from high school.

Mrs. Mitchell says she will return to college in April and work for a masters degree.

A BRAZILIAN DANCE

From Self-Defense To Art Form

By RICHARD WEINGARTEN

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Seven teen-age girls recently enrolled in an all-male class to learn the rough and tumble dance with the evil mystique Brazilians call "capoeira."

"My mother and father were against the idea, and still are," Claudia Almeida, 18, told UPI. "You know, they thought I'd get hurt, and meet the wrong types."

Brazilian slaves first developed capoeira as a means of self defense against armed slave masters. Using a combination of rapid, well-aimed kicks, and dodges, a rebellious slave was able to fend off two or three opponents. A legendary slave leader, Zumbi, is said to have whipped 30 whites in one fight.

In 1890, a year after Brazilian slaves were emancipated, capoeira was prohibited by law. Backlands politicians for years had henchmen trained in capoeira to "win over" voters.

Later, the most experienced capoeristas, known as "masters," toned down its most violent elements. When whites were present, they staged special acrobatic exhibitions using the so called "gentlemen's touch."

President Getulio Vargas saw one of these demonstrations in 1934 and was much impressed. Shortly afterwards, two famous capoeiristas opened Capoeira Academies.

AS TAUGHT and practiced in the academies, capoeira has evolved away from violence towards becoming a stylized dance. It demands great agility and tremendous physical stamina.

A group of Sao Paulo capoeira masters are now trying to have the government make capoeira Brazil's national sport. It is unlikely that this will happen very soon, because capoeira has not yet lost its shady image.

A recent newspaper report told of a 16 year old capoeirista who tangled with two policemen. Before the police could draw their revolvers, the boy gave each a barefooted smack on the ear and fled through a screen of excited onlookers.

THE GIRLS learning capoeira from "Peixinho," a 22-year-old business administration student and member of Rio's folkdancing "Senzala Group," said that they were not interested in becoming vicious capoeira mercenaries.

Claudia said she was interested in the dance, not in "busting some guy in the mouth." She said she began dancing capoeira with her boyfriend.

American-born Regina "Nina" Whealer, 17, said she had an "aggressive streak" and likes "aggressive dance."

Boys and girls agreed, however, that capoeira requires a dose of "malice."

"The important blows are delivered on the counterattack," Peixinho explained. "When my opponent's coming at me, I try to evade his kick, and give him a kick, or push him off balance."

ASKED IF she was malicious enough to be a good capoerista, Claudia came back with a coy smile and said, "Any person born and raised in Rio de Janeiro is enough of a scoundrel to be an excellent capoeirista."

In less than five months, the girls have learned five basic capoeira attacks. The "Ginga" is a bobbing and weaving step used to size up one's opponent.

To an outsider the other blows start out innocently, looking like a slow, backwards cartwheel, until a meaty heel goes flying into the face, chest, or ribcage of the other dancer.

Those not dancing clap their hands and chant the special refrains that describe the action. A one-stringed instrument called a "Berimbau" provides the twangy rhythm for the dancers. Tambourines and long cylindrical bongo drums are also used.

"But it is the berimbau that commands the dance," Peixinho said.

Weigh All The Sides Carefully Before Taking The Job Plunge

By GAY PAULEY

They're the ones who do not hold jobs outside the home. Occasionally they're counted but it's the other group—the working women—who get more national attention.

Statistically, the women who do not hold jobs outside the home number 41 million (the latest count from the U.S. Department of Labor). Of these, 35 million plus keep house, another 3.4 million are in school and still a segment of several hundred thousand are unable to work. In short, this group is larger than the more publicized 31.5 million who do hold jobs.

Now comes the question—if you're among the 41 million, should you enter the labor market? The Women's Bureau (of the labor department) says yes.

YOUR TALENTS and skills are needed in the economy and the development of new industries and expansion of others has opened new doors in business, the professions and the production of goods and services.

But there are many things to consider before you seek a paying job. The idea of extra income sounds great—but how much extra will a job mean?

One national magazine recently calculated that extra costs and hidden expenses could eat up 70 per cent of that contribution.

Penny Scott, family financial consultant for the Oak Park, Ill., Federal Savings and Loan Association, takes one family to illustrate what can happen to that two-salaried family with preschool children.

Husband earns $14,400 annually and wife gets a job for $9,200, giving her a base pay of $177 a week.

SHE "LOSES" $23 withheld for federal income tax and another $5 for a typical state tax, plus $9 for social security. Another $2 weekly goes for group health and life insurance plans. That leaves her $138 per week.

But the wife also pays $25 a week for child care, $15 a week for housekeeping help, $10 a week for lunches and coffee breaks, and $3 per week for bus fare.

In addition, the wife spends $15 a week for the cost of new clothes, more frequent trips to the hairdresser, ready prepared or convenience foods, use of commercial laundry, more dry cleaning and the like.

All of these extras make the $177 a week dwindle to $70, or $3,640 a year.

Then at tax time, because her withholding enters into the total family income, the family finds it owes an additional $818 in federal income taxes. And in some instances, state and city income taxes also take another big bite.

All told, this wife may end up with only 30 per cent of her annual salary.

GRANTED, THE working woman can save by taking her lunch and if the family is cooperative, and she is strong enough, she can do her own housekeeping after job hours.

But an outside job also could mean the family needs a second car. Even if she goes in a car pool, she may have to contribute to gas expenses. And some jobs also involve dues and license expenses.

Now, should the wife still seek a paying job?

Talk the matter over with the entire family. It should be a family decision, actually, said Miss Scott.

Everyone should understand what's involved and the changes that have to be made.

Ladies' Days On Slopes Returning

OTTAWA (UPI) — Ladies' Days, which were given a tryout last season, are back again this year every Tuesday and Wednesday at Silver Star Mountain ski area in Vernon, British Columbia, Canada, says the government tourist bureau.

Special baby-sitting services are provided for skiing moms. The idea has proved so popular that ski-moms from many surrounding towns flock to Vernon for Ladies' Days.

More Free Time Than The Bachelor

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japanese government survey on leisure showed that fathers with the youngest child in high school or above have more free time than bachelors.

Unmarried men have about four and a half hours of free time each weekday, compared with more than five hours for married men with children of high school age or older, the survey reported.

A Cookbook Funds To Go To Agency

NEW YORK (UPI) —A San Francisco research organization that specializes in ethnic and minority studies has added a cookbook to its publishing list to raise funds for CARE, the international assistance agency.

Most of the recipes in the "We Care Cookbook" by Robert D. Reed and Kathy S. Reed (R & E Research Associates) were culled from 19th and early 20th century cookbooks, but a few are included from CARE nutritionists as examples of the types of foods used in the agency's program. Included are recipes from Africa, Pakistan, northern India, the Bulkans, southeast Asia, the Caribbean and Latin America.

A third of the price of each book is donated to the assistance agency, and represents food for 300 children.

The book can be ordered by direct mail from We Care Cookbook, 18581 McFarland Ave., Saratoga, Calif., 95070.

Publishers hope to expand distribution through bulk sales to individuals, church and other community and civic groups, school and college organizations, service clubs and youth groups. Single copies are $3.45 each, including postage.

Mixing Design Periods Can Be Fun

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
(Distributed by Genera Features Corp.

Rather consistently I hear myself claiming to be a totally contemporary person. Nostalgia is not for me. Tomorrow is something I anticipate with relish, including the possibility of visiting yonder moon.

Yet beautiful old things get their hooks into me. A jewel of a Louis Comfort Tiffany bud vase, embellished with tendrils of dark green glass, is a favorite possession. And pre-Columbian artifacts dating from 700 to 1,000 years ago seem totally appropriate to my lifestyle and, in fact, they rest atop my 1972 stereo speakers.

There's a bit of this duality in most of us, so it's sometimes confusing to make a decorating decision based on multiple interests.

So my advice is pick one major period of design you prefer above all others, whether it be English country, 18th-Century French, American Colonial or 20th-Century modern (or at least what we now consider modern). Organize major seating pieces and one or two tables or cabinets in this "look." Then forget it. Don't buy a rug to match the look, don't search for lamps with similar detailing. Just start acquiring the best accessories for today's living.

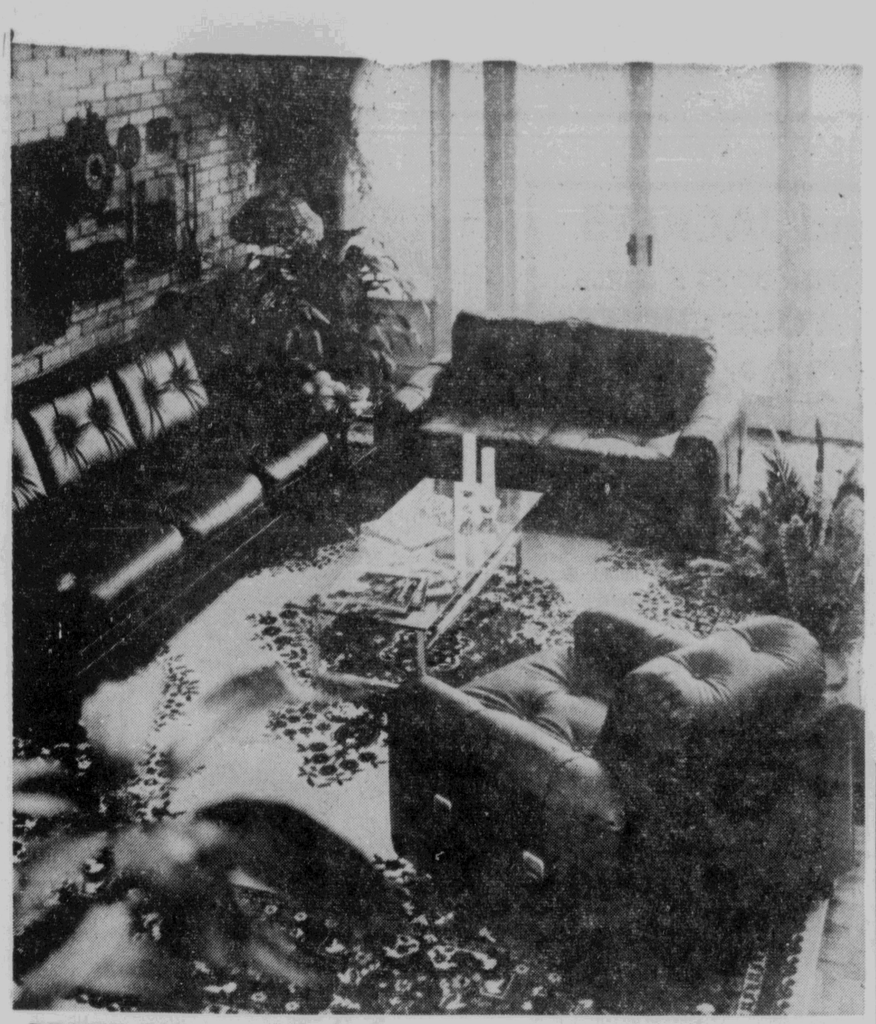
MODERN LAMPS are one of the easiest accessories to absorb into an eclectic interior. Pick the purest forms — the lamps that do the job you require. If you prefer Oriental rugs, use them, no matter what kind of furniture you've selected; they really are at home with everything. And if you own the rug before you purchase furniture, let the rug be your color guide.

Oriental rugs generally leave areas of wood or vinyl or tile flooring exposed. Some free-wheeling designers like to place Oriental rugs atop wall-to-wall carpeting where the floors are not sufficiently handsome or exposable. For example, many houses have concrete slabs as base floors, and builders have installed carpeting over the slab. A new owner might take up the carpet expecting to find wood floors. Quite a surprise!

So before you throw away current wall-to-wall carpeting, check the base. You may prefer the Oriental or contemporary area rug atop the old carpeting than a big investment in wood or tile floors.

The room shown today bridges a lot of design gaps. The owners stripped a painted wall to expose old brick construction. They refinished an unusual stained and paned door and window area. They brought in lots of oldies but goodies, such as the hanging Tiffany lamp and the collectables on the wall.

For seating they chose the supercomfort of Kroehler's Country Set line and instead of simply a sofa and chair, they added a two-seater unit that really expands the sit-down space in this attractive room. Although it keeps its secret well, this Kroehler group is covered in Uniroyal's new Aerflo breathable vinyl, not real leather. Lots of foam cushioning makes it truly soft to the touch as well as easy on the eyes — and a perfect mate for the Oriental rug.



RECIPE FOR a good room is to mix the best of today's upholstery techniques with the visuals of timelessness. Kroehler's Country Set group is at home with period accessories.

Osteoarthritis Afflicts Many

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 10 million Americans have osteoarthritis severe enough to cause painful problems. Osteoarthritis is associated with aging and degeneration of joint tissues.

It usually develops more slowly and is milder and less painful than rheumatoid arthritis.

Democracy Must Work Both Ways

In a democracy, the majority rules.

When a proposition is put before the electorate for decision, we are all expected to abide by the result of the vote.

TWELVE YEARS ago, directors of Marin Municipal Water District decided to put on the ballot the question of whether fluoride should be added to the district's water supply. They didn't have to do this. The district has legal power to add fluoride just as it adds other things to the water. But the directors felt the democratic way would be to put the issue before the voters.

In the June, 1960, primary, fluoridation lost by 84 votes — 18,967 "yes" to 19,051 "no."

Because the result was so close, groups favoring fluoridation decided to try again. They qualified an initiative for the November ballot, putting the issue back before the people.

That time, it was turned down decisively, 29,133 "no" to 21,879 "yes."

The nearly 22,000 voters who had wanted fluoridation accepted the result. So did the water district directors. No fluoride was added.

TWELVE YEARS elapsed, during which many other communities fluoridated their water supplies. This year, water district directors decided to put the issue to the people again.

This time it passed: 46,105 "yes" to 35,901 "no."

But now it turns out that the anti-fluoridationists, who were all for majority rule when they were on the winning side, don't believe in it when they lose.

Last week one of their spokesmen, Wynn E. Westover, called on the water district board to have an "environmental impact" study made before carrying out the fluoridation mandated by the voters.

He claimed the district is obligated to notify customers of possible "side-effects" of adding fluoride to the water.

THIS IS nonsense. Environmental impact reports are for construction projects which may change the geography, or pollute air or water. Adding fluoride to the water is not polluting it. In fact, the principal objection of the anti-fluoridationists is that fluoridation is medicating the water. They claim that's what they don't believe in.

The water district directors showed absence of spine and good sense in asking the district's legal counsel to look into the "environmental impact" issue.

The district directors of a decade ago sensibly accepted the verdict of the majority as expressed at the polls. They didn't have to. They could have fluoridated the supply anyhow. But they believed in the democratic way.

The present directors should show as much gumption. The voters called for fluoridation by a plurality of more than 10,000. The people have spoken. The water district should get on with the program, and not be deterred by obstructionist, anti-democratic attacks.

Bird's Shoes? Well, Almost

Have you wondered how birds are able to keep their thin, stick-like feet from freezing in very cold weather? One reason is the elevated metabolism and the circulation of very warm blood through the feet. Birds have body temperatures in the range of 102 degrees. To fuel this fire requires much food. Which is why birds appreciate gifts of high calorie goodies, such as beef suet, during the winter.

Nature has put thick, leather-like "shoes" on her birds. These help insulate against the cold. In chilly weather, the bird will press his feet into his fluffed-out feathers, as we might put our cold hands under our sweater.

Why Is U.C.'s Hitch Afraid To Make Contract Public?

By EARL G. WATERS

A request to the University of California to view the employment contract between President Charles J. Hitch and the regents has been denied this writer.

As the basis for the denial it was stated, "According to Government Code Section 6254, subsection 'c,' an employment contract is not a public record, and disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Says who?

THAT POSITION, Mr. Hitch, is an unwarranted affront to this reporter and every taxpayer of this state who contributes to your salary and the support of the university.

The section referred to relates to records which are not required to be disclosed. Subsection "c" includes among such records, "Personnel, medical or similar files. . ."

It says nothing about employment contracts which require the expenditure of tax dollars.

The university is supported by tax dollars. All other moneys in its possession, regardless of whether they were private gifts or whatever source, become public money the moment they are accepted by the university.

All contracts by which public funds are expended that are executed by a state agency for construction, equipment, goods or services are public records. If they are not, there had better be some law changes pronto!

The salaries and other emoluments given to all professors and other employees are public. To take the position that the prsident's conditions of employment are to be excepted is untenable.

IT IS AN AMAZING position for the president of the state's seat of learning to take.

What is being hidden?

The inquiry was prompted by rumors floating about that Hitch has a "sweetheart" contract which provides much more than that normally given to presidents of other universities, public or private.

If this is not a fact, it should be scotched. Rather than to suggest the contract is not proper, this column sought to get the facts.

The emoluments given Hitch should be matched with those granted other college presidents. Perhaps the salary of $53,000, which is more than that paid the governor of California, is not enough. Then, again, it may be excessive when all other benefits granted at cost to the taxpayers are added up. No one will know until the contract is disclosed.

IT HAS BEEN leanred that this information is not in the possession of Director of Finance Verne Orr, despite the fact Hitch is asking Orr for more than $400 million to run the university next year.

Now, Mr. Hitch, you are respectfully requested to review your position and disclose this contract for the edification of the taxpayers. This request is made to avoid the embarrassment to you that would result if it becomes necessary to drag you into court.

Please be advised, Mr. Hitch, that we are prepared to do exactly that if you persist in denying this right to this reporter.

"No, you keep 'em. We can't fly 'em either."

Concerned For Welfare Of Missing Dog

On the night of Dec. 6, my dog accidentally got out of our fenced back yard. I raised this dog from a small puppy and I am extremely fond of him. He had a good home and exceptional care.

For the last six days I have tried in vain to locate him. . .All of my attempts to find my dog have been unsuccessful.

It has been suggested by many people that my dog is being kept by some household. If this is so I hope that it is only temporary until I can be located and identify him as my dog. If the home he has found is one where his keepers are fond of him also I would most certainly like to be consulted in this matter. Just knowing he is alive and well would put my mind at rest. I would possibly consider allowing whoever it is the privilege of my dog remaining with them. . .

Response To Emergency Calls Slow In Hub

I am wondering if anyone else is experiencing the difficulty I am, regarding emergency assistance in San Anselmo.

A few weeks ago, early one Sunday morning, I was awakened by a neighbor who was screaming for help. I immediately tried to alert our police department. It took seven minutes to give the particulars, over and over again, to the switchboard operator at the police department, and another 10 minutes before they responded with a patrol car.

Last Sunday evening, one of the coldest nights in our recent freezing weather, an elderly neighborhood woman fell down an outside stairway. A friend and I called for assistance from the San Anselmo Police Department, and then we stayed with the woman, seated on cold concrete steps, trying to keep the lady warm, and afraid to move her as the extent of her injuries was not known. It took 45 minutes for the police and ambulance to arrive.

We hear a lot nowadays about people not caring for other human beings, and turning their backs when a neighbor needs help. What about those of us who do care, and then find that we are not able to get the assistance we need. It is disheartening, to say the least, to "get involved" and not receive the protection we are paying taxes for. . .

District Discriminates Against Auto Drivers

How long are the commuters and taxpayers going to put up with the overt discrimination practiced by the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit District? Consider the special bus lane as an example:

1. The bridge and highway north of the bridge were paid for primarily by funds from auto commuters.
2. Funds to purchase the buses provided by the district came primarily from the auto commuter.
3. Funds to subsidize the loss operation of the bus system and ferry system came primarily from the auto commuter.
4. Patrons of the bus and ferry system are not paying anywhere near the cost of the services provided them.
5. The bus system, which I understood was to help relieve traffic congestion, has indeed further complicated an already impossible commute situation and now also involves southbound traffic in the evening.

What possible rationale can there be to diverting the buses into special lanes to speed the people who are not paying their way past the endless line of cars winding down the Waldo in bumper to bumper stop and go driven by the people who made the entire system possible and who are paying the lion's share of the cost? How about a $1 per person donation to hire an attorney to file a class action suit against the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit and its directors to get the system back to some degree of sanity?

Arabs Held To Blame For Refugee Problem

Concerning Dr. Graham's comments: To say that the "pro-Jewish press never reports on the plight of the Arab refugees is a total misconception. Almost every article on the Mid-East will have reference to the refugee problem.

To say that the one million refugees were "driven from their homes" without referring to the statements of the Grand Mufti of Jeruselum before the 1948 war, exhorting the Arabs to leave the territory because the Arab armies will drive the new state into the sea, at which time they can return and take over all the land, is certainly showing your bias. The Arabs declared and started the war on Israel to wipe out the new state in 1948 when the refugees fled.

Every war, whether it's Vietnam, India-Pakistan, or the internal Sudanese war, produces a refugee problem, but reflect on who started the 1948 conflict. Without it, no refugees would exist. The Mayor of Haifa in 1948 asked the Arabs not to leave.

. . . Over one million Jews have fled from every Arab country where they have been persecuted. Does the U.N. ever discuss their plight?

To say that "the refugees have no seat in the U.N. so that the world has provided them with no recourse" is to completely disregard the almost total number of Arab countries and those whom they aid that almost completely control the U.N. and give support to the Arabs and their cause.

To imply that the area of Palestine was ruled by Arabs and therefore is entitled to representation is to completely disregard history. Previous to 1948, the area was governed by the British as a mandate from 1918 to 1948. Prior to that the non-Arab Turkish Ottoman Empire ruled it for almost six centuries. One would have to go back to the ninth century to find Arab rule over the land.

With its obvious bias and its lack of a meaningful peace-keeping force, how can the U.N. ever impose a peace in the area as Dr. Graham suggests?

Remember the old days before Women's Lib when Christmas was the season of good will toward men?

This year the gals are rewriting the Christmas story to make two of the three Wise Men women.

Instead of a Mr. Santa who comes down the chimney, we now have a Ms. Claus who goes through the roof.

The thing about this year's Christmas carols is that the women insist on calling the tune.

The husband who complains about the Christmas neckties his wife selects for him may get a belt.

Capitol Soothsayer Sees Nixon In Another Turn-Around

WASHINGTON — This is an informed view of 1973. It is a view not from the White House where all the blinds are down and the rule is silence, but from one of the ablest administrator-economists who follows the trends at close range with a specialized staff and the requisite computer banks.

Into the forecast goes a healthy respect for President Nixon's capacity for making a 180-degree turn and doing just what he said he would never do. The surprise element could in mid-1973, in this educated crystal ball, produce a dramatic turnaround comparable to mid-1971 when the president clamped on wage and price controls and re-valued the currency. He is capable of stealing the Democrats' clothes while they are happily swimming in the warm current of spending welfare programs.

As for the economy, prospects look favorable to very good. The upward trend in the last quarter of 1972 will be sustained perhaps through the entire year. The drop in the unemployment rate just disclosed from 5.5 to 5.2 is likely to continue. It will bounce around the five per cent mark, possibly even falling below that barrier.

INFLATION DOESN'T look good. While the rate had begun to come down, recent price increases threaten to start it upward again and that is particularly true for food. With the $1.2 billion wheat sale to the Soviet Union, wheat stocks have been run down. This carries over into corn and in turn into beef.

Yet the administration can take comfort from the fact that the rate is so much lower than in other western nations. Whem Prime Minister Edward Heath comes here just after the inauguration, he will envy the American rate of 3.5 to four per cent a year as against Britain's eight per cent plus. In West Germany it is 6.3.

So on the economic side it is almost all on the upbeat. On the political side the opposite is true. Congress and the President will engage in a long and bitter wrangle over spending versus economy. The President will come in with a new budget tailored like the '74 budget with cuts deep enough to preclude a tax increase. That along with the $250 billion Nixon spending ceiling will be the battleground.

The Democratic attack will come through pushing programs such as Sen. Walter Mondale's child care bill and the aid to higher education that he has sponsored along with Sen. Claiborne Pell. The strategy will center on grants in aid to states and municipalities. Here is the sensitive political nerve as localities discover that with the Nixon economy they are not going to get the help that seemed programmed into the spending measures. The President's slash of half the $18 billion voted to clean up America's rivers is causing wide crumbling.

But the cuts will not be sufficient and by mid-year, say, the administration will face a painful dilemma. The choice will be either new taxes or more deficit spending, and with $100 billion in red ink already on the ledger, the latter course is all but ruled out.

THEN COMES the great turn-around scene comparable to Aug. 15, 1971, when the President took the steps — wage and price controls — that he had been saying for two years he would never take. He proposes to wrap all grants in aid programs in one big bundle and with no strings attached get the federal government entirely out of the picture. This would mean a whopping bonanza of perhaps $40 billion compared to which the revenue sharing now being dished out is peanuts.

This will spell the end of administration resistance to cutbacks in the welfare-reform measures. The economic policy will have collapsed, to paraphrase that often quoted line of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper. And the President can blame the Congress for the tax increases that will have to follow.

The seer has come up with one other possibility after careful study of the computerized crystal ball. That is a sizeable cut in the defense budget based on optimism over progress in disarmament in the SALT II talks with the Soviet Union. But the chances for this happening are rated at 10 per cent.

Meandering Streams Become Ugly Ditches 'To Conserve Soil'

You may find it hard to believe the government is spending large sums of your tax money converting beautiful natural streams into ugly ditches.

But that is exactly what the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing.

They call it "channelization."

TO CHANNELIZE a meandering creek or river, you move in with chain saws and bulldozers and strip its banks of trees and brush. Then you bring in huge draglines to deepen and straighten the stream bed, eliminating all the bends and looping curves that slow down the flow of water —and incidentally make the stream a thing of beauty.

Because a channelized stream carries off water more rapidly, nearby bottomlands which once were subject to flooding may become suitable for agriculture.

This presumably benefits the farmers who own those lands, since they can look to the government rather than themselves to foot most of the bill.

OF COURSE, there is some question about the consistency of the Department of Agriculture spending tax money to create new farm lands at the same time it is ladling out funds to farmers to take other croplands out of cultivation.

But that is not the biggest objection that has been raised by critics of channelization.

Environmental protection groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society, say channelization is doing infinitely more harm than good. Even the farmers who get new land may suffer, they say, from a lowering of the water table that causes wells and springs to dry up.

The principal victims of channelization projects, they say, are swamps and floodlands that have served for centuries as natural habitats for many types of wildlife.

FOR EXAMPLE: in one of its current projects, the Soil Conservation Service proposes to dig a big ditch through the Horse Range Swamp in South Carolina. Conservationists say it will destroy the Horse Range Swamp and adversely affect the nearby Four Holes Swamp, which the Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy have purchased to protect perpetually as a classic example of the fast-disappearing ecology of the back-water cypress swamp.

Concern about the effects of the project also has been expressed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and even by the Army Corps of Engineers, which is not noted as an ardent exponent of conservation.

Political pressure is building up to halt the Horse Range ditching. But the same battle will have to be fought in hundreds of other places all over America.

The SCS already has gutterized 8,000 miles of American streams, and has scheduled another 13,000 miles for similar "improvement." Its ultimate goal is to convert 175,000 miles of winding natural woodland streams into nude-banked ditches.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By BONNIE BARD

Bicycle Paths For Petaluma At Last In Planning Stage

Petaluma's long-awaited bicycle path system is finally in the planning stages after months of discussion.

Responses from a survey mailed to all residences along with water bills showed most Petalumans want a system for recreational use rather than as alternate transportation to the family car.

Consultant Arnold A. Johnson, whose services are provided by a state grant, will be working out the system along with city staff members and citizens. If everything goes smoothly, the paths could be in operation in 1973.

The bicycle survey brought a 22.5 per cent return or a total of 2,114 replies, which is considered good for Petaluma. The streets most often listed as favorites for riding were Washington Street, South McDowell Boulevard, Ely Road, Petaluma Boulevard, and Western Avenue.

THE DANGER of auto traffic was listed as the main reason for not using bicycles for local transportation. The high rate of bicycle thefts was a distant second as the deterrent.

Although the questionnaire had only a tiny space for written comments, many of the responses included them. Most cited the need for bicycle safety near schools and made very general comments, but one citizen demanded that all city employees be required to ride bicycles to work. For some it might be practical, but the comment brought only chuckles from public works employees who live in Santa Rosa and Forestville.

If a bicycle path system is installed, next year's residential development allotment board will have better ammunition to require paths from developers.

This year's board often questioned builders on the lack of trails, only to be told the suggestion was "ridiculous" since there was not central path for a link-up. Next year they may have to think of some other excuse.

LAST WEEK'S Old Adobe School district special election will go down in history as one of the least noticed and most costly in local history.

The Sonoma County Board of Elections estimated cost of the election at $1,500, which figures out to nearly $5 per vote since only 310 were cast. The other 4,574 registered voters should have gone to the polls if for no other reason than to get their money's worth.

60 Days Jail Time Is Given To Driver, 18

A Marin Superior Court judge has ordered 18-year-old Newton Jeffrey Wise of Tiburon to spend 60 days in jail for felony drunken driving during an accident in which he and four others were injured.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also fined Wise $500 and placed him on probation for two years on the charge resulting from a two-car collision near Redwood High School in Larkspur Sept. 23.

Police said a car driven by Wise went through a stop sign at Doherty Drive and Riviera Circle and collided with a car driven by Stanley G. Walker, 39, of Larkspur.

Both drivers, two passengers in Walker's car and one in Wise's were taken to a local hospital by ambulance after the wreck.

Burglar Rifles Office Of Dentist

The office of Dr. John T. Smith, a dentist, was entered during the weekend and $14 in cash, keys and blank checks were stolen, San Anselmo police said today.

World Cup Skiing

The opening meet of the World Cup ski season ended last week in the French Alpine town of Val D'Isere. About half of the American team participated in the meet. In World Cup competition, both men's and women's teams vie for points in straight downhill races and zigzag downhill races. Skiing is a relatively new sport. The first ski competition was believed to be held in Norway about 1875. Skiing became a part of the Winter Olympic Games in 1924. Before the World Cup season ends in March, 1973, skiers will have traversed slopes in Yugoslavia, Germany, Alaska, Japan, and California.

ART BUCHWALD

Best Hope For Vietnam May Be Long-Lasting Warce

WASHINGTON — It is obvious from the recent Kissinger talks in Paris that we have been unable to work out a true peace treaty in Vietnam.

Hallaby Hegelstein, a political science professor, maintains the most we can get out of Indochina is a "warce."

"What is a warce?" I asked him.

"IT IS NEITHER peace nor war; it is actually a combination of both. For some time now the world has needed a new word to describe the situation many countries are in. In the Middle East you do not have peace, nor do you have a fighting war. The English language has no word for this predicament so I invented one which I call 'warce.'"

"How could warce apply to Vietnam?"

"If the United States signs a treaty with Hanoi which the South Vietnamese refuse to ratify, you will have a state of warce. President Nixon may call it a peace, but he would only be kidding himself and the American people."

"What would the warce consist of?" I asked.

"You would probably have a cease-fire with some fighting on both sides. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will continue sporadic probing of the South Vietnamese defenses, and the South Vietnamese will probably make occasional attacks on Viet Cong strongholds. But both sides will probably be stalemated and the warce could continue for years."

"WELL, I GUESS a warce in Indochina is better than nothing," I said.

"It might be the coming thing. Since peace treaties are so hard to come by, I would advocate that nations sign warce treaties instead. It could save face on both sides. Many of our world leaders consider the signing of a peace pact a sign of weakness. But no one could criticize them at home if they said they had agreed to a warce."

"I imagine if he couldn't have it any other way, President Nixon would settle for a generation of warce," I said.

"The advantage of warce," Hegelsten said, "is that Congress wouldn't have to declare it. If the President decided he wanted to involve the country in a warce, he could do it on his own."

"And if he succeeded," I said, "he could be nominated for the Nobel Warce Prize."

"I BELIEVE the nation would thrive on a warce footing," Hagelstein said. "You wouldn't have to shut down your defense plants and put a lot of people out of work, and at the same time you would use very little of the stuff to kill people."

"And you could sell warce bonds to finance it," I added.

"It would also solve the military problem. In a period of peace, the armed forces find themselves in disrepute. But if we were at warce, our men in uniform would still be respected and there would be plenty of opportunity for promotion," Hegelstein said.

He added, "The world is not ready for peace and may never be. At the same time, war is not the answer to our problems. Therefore, we must condition ourselves to warce — whether they be warces of liberation, limited warces or even a World Warce. Vietnam may be the big test. If we can have a successful warce there, it will prove that it's possible to have a warce anywhere."

"That's a good thought to leave with people at this time of year, Professor."

"Thank you. Merry Christmas, and remember, warce on earth —good will to men."

Democracy Must Work Both Ways

In a democracy, the majority rules.

When a proposition is put before the electorate for decision, we are all expected to abide by the result of the vote.

TWELVE YEARS ago, directors of Marin Municipal Water District decided to put on the ballot the question of whether fluoride should be added to the district's water supply. They didn't have to do this. The district has legal power to add fluoride just as it adds other things to the water. But the directors felt the democratic way would be to put the issue before the voters.

In the June, 1960, primary, fluoridation lost by 84 votes — 18,967 "yes" to 19,051 "no."

Because the result was so close, groups favoring fluoridation decided to try again. They qualified an initiative for the November ballot, putting the issue back before the people.

That time, it was turned down decisively, 29,133 "no" to 21,879 "yes."

The nearly 22,000 voters who had wanted fluoridation accepted the result. So did the water district directors. No fluoride was added.

TWELVE YEARS elapsed, during which many other communities fluoridated their water supplies. This year, water district directors decided to put the issue to the people again.

This time it passed: 46,105 "yes" to 35,901 "no."

But now it turns out that the anti-fluoridationists, who were all for majority rule when they were on the winning side, don't believe in it when they lose.

Last week one of their spokesmen, Wynn E. Westover, called on the water district board to have an "environmental impact" study made before carrying out the fluoridation mandated by the voters.

He claimed the district is obligated to notify customers of possible "side-effects" of adding fluoride to the water.

THIS IS nonsense. Environmental impact reports are for construction projects which may change the geography, or pollute air or water. Adding fluoride to the water is not polluting it. In fact, the principal objection of the anti-fluoridationists is that fluoridation is medicating the water. They claim that's what they don't believe in.

The water district directors showed absence of spine and good sense in asking the district's legal counsel to look into the "environmental impact" issue.

The district directors of a decade ago sensibly accepted the verdict of the majority as expressed at the polls. They didn't have to. They could have fluoridated the supply anyhow. But they believed in the democratic way.

The present directors should show as much gumption. The voters called for fluoridation by a plurality of more than 10,000. The people have spoken. The water district should get on with the program, and not be deterred by obstructionist, anti-democratic attacks.

Bird's Shoes? Well, Almost

Have you wondered how birds are able to keep their thin, stick-like feet from freezing in very cold weather? One reason is the elevated metabolism and the circulation of very warm blood through the feet. Birds have body temperatures in the range of 102 degrees. To fuel this fire requires much food. Which is why birds appreciate gifts of high calorie goodies, such as beef suet, during the winter.

Nature has put thick, leather-like "shoes" on her birds. These help insulate against the cold. In chilly weather, the bird will press his feet into his fluffed-out feathers, as we might put our cold hands under our sweater.

By EARL G. WATERS

A request to the University of California to view the employment contract between President Charles J. Hitch and the regents has been denied this writer.

As the basis for the denial it was stated, "According to Government Code Section 6254, subsection 'c,' an employment contract is not a public record, and disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Says who?

THAT POSITION, Mr. Hitch, is an unwarranted affront to this reporter and every taxpayer of this state who contributes to your salary and the support of the university.

The section referred to relates to records which are not required to be disclosed. Subsection "c" includes among such records, "Personnel, medical or similar files. . ."

It says nothing about employment contracts which require the expenditure of tax dollars.

The university is supported by tax dollars. All other moneys in its possession, regardless of whether they were private gifts or whatever source, become public money the moment they are accepted by the university.

All contracts by which public funds are expended that are executed by a state agency for construction, equipment, goods or services are public records. If they are not, there had better be some law changes pronto!

The salaries and other emoluments given to all professors and other employees are public. To take the position that the prsident's conditions of employment are to be excepted is untenable.

IT IS AN AMAZING position for the president of the state's seat of learning to take.

What is being hidden?

The inquiry was prompted by rumors floating about that Hitch has a "sweetheart" contract which provides much more than that normally given to presidents of other universities, public or private.

If this is not a fact, it should be scotched. Rather than to suggest the contract is not proper, this column sought to get the facts.

The emoluments given Hitch should be matched with those granted other college presidents. Perhaps the salary of $53,000, which is more than that paid the governor of California, is not enough. Then, again, it may be excessive when all other benefits granted at cost to the taxpayers are added up. No one will know until the contract is disclosed.

IT HAS BEEN leanred that this information is not in the possession of Director of Finance Verne Orr, despite the fact Hitch is asking Orr for more than $400 million to run the university next year.

Now, Mr. Hitch, you are respectfully requested to review your position and disclose this contract for the edification of the taxpayers. This request is made to avoid the embarrassment to you that would result if it becomes necessary to drag you into court.

Please be advised, Mr. Hitch, that we are prepared to do exactly that if you persist in denying this right to this reporter.

Concerned For Welfare Of Missing Dog

On the night of Dec. 6, my dog accidentally got out of our fenced back yard. I raised this dog from a small puppy and I am extremely fond of him. He had a good home and exceptional care.

For the last six days I have tried in vain to locate him. . .All of my attempts to find my dog have been unsuccessful.

It has been suggested by many people that my dog is being kept by some household. If this is so I hope that it is only temporary until I can be located and identify him as my dog. If the home he has found is one where his keepers are fond of him also I would most certainly like to be consulted in this matter. Just knowing he is alive and well would put my mind at rest. I would possibly consider allowing whoever it is the privilege of my dog remaining with them. . .

Response To Emergency Calls Slow In Hub

I am wondering if anyone else is experiencing the difficulty I am, regarding emergency assistance in San Anselmo.

A few weeks ago, early one Sunday morning, I was awakened by a neighbor who was screaming for help. I immediately tried to alert our police department. It took seven minutes to give the particulars, over and over again, to the switchboard operator at the police department, and another 10 minutes before they responded with a patrol car.

Last Sunday evening, one of the coldest nights in our recent freezing weather, an elderly neighborhood woman fell down an outside stairway. A friend and I called for assistance from the San Anselmo Police Department, and then we stayed with the woman, seated on cold concrete steps, trying to keep the lady warm, and afraid to move her as the extent of her injuries was not known. It took 45 minutes for the police and ambulance to arrive.

We hear a lot nowadays about people not caring for other human beings, and turning their backs when a neighbor needs help. What about those of us who do care, and then find that we are not able to get the assistance we need. It is disheartening, to say the least, to "get involved" and not receive the protection we are paying taxes for. . .

District Discriminates Against Auto Drivers

How long are the commuters and taxpayers going to put up with the overt discrimination practiced by the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit District? Consider the special bus lane as an example:

1. The bridge and highway north of the bridge were paid for primarily by funds from auto commuters.
2. Funds to purchase the buses provided by the district came primarily from the auto commuter.
3. Funds to subsidize the loss operation of the bus system and ferry system came primarily from the auto commuter.
4. Patrons of the bus and ferry system are not paying anywhere near the cost of the services provided them.
5. The bus system, which I understood was to help relieve traffic congestion, has indeed further complicated an already impossible commute situation and now also involves southbound traffic in the evening.

What possible rationale can there be to diverting the buses into special lanes to speed the people who are not paying their way past the endless line of cars winding down the Waldo in bumper to bumper stop and go driven by the people who made the entire system possible and who are paying the lion's share of the cost? How about a $1 per person donation to hire an attorney to file a class action suit against the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit and its directors to get the system back to some degree of sanity?

Arabs Held To Blame For Refugee Problem

Concerning Dr. Graham's comments: To say that the "pro-Jewish press never reports on the plight of the Arab refugees is a total misconception. Almost every article on the Mid-East will have reference to the refugee problem.

To say that the one million refugees were "driven from their homes" without referring to the statements of the Grand Mufti of Jeruselum before the 1948 war, exhorting the Arabs to leave the territory because the Arab armies will drive the new state into the sea, at which time they can return and take over all the land, is certainly showing your bias. The Arabs declared and started the war on Israel to wipe out the new state in 1948 when the refugees fled.

Every war, whether it's Vietnam, India-Pakistan, or the internal Sudanese war, produces a refugee problem, but reflect on who started the 1948 conflict. Without it, no refugees would exist. The Mayor of Haifa in 1948 asked the Arabs not to leave.

. . . Over one million Jews have fled from every Arab country where they have been persecuted. Does the U.N. ever discuss their plight?

To say that "the refugees have no seat in the U.N. so that the world has provided them with no recourse" is to completely disregard the almost total number of Arab countries and those whom they aid that almost completely control the U.N. and give support to the Arabs and their cause.

To imply that the area of Palestine was ruled by Arabs and therefore is entitled to representation is to completely disregard history. Previous to 1948, the area was governed by the British as a mandate from 1918 to 1948. Prior to that the non-Arab Turkish Ottoman Empire ruled it for almost six centuries. One would have to go back to the ninth century to find Arab rule over the land.

With its obvious bias and its lack of a meaningful peace-keeping force, how can the U.N. ever impose a peace in the area as Dr. Graham suggests?

The thing about this year's Christmas carols is that the women insist on calling the tune.

Capitol Soothsayer Sees Nixon In Another Turn-Around

WASHINGTON — This is an informed view of 1973. It is a view not from the White House where all the blinds are down and the rule is silence, but from one of the ablest administrator-economists who follows the trends at close range with a specialized staff and the requisite computer banks.

Into the forecast goes a healthy respect for President Nixon's capacity for making a 180-degree turn and doing just what he said he would never do. The surprise element could in mid-1973, in this educated crystal ball, produce a dramatic turnaround comparable to mid-1971 when the president clamped on wage and price controls and re-valued the currency. He is capable of stealing the Democrats' clothes while they are happily swimming in the warm current of spending welfare programs.

As for the economy, prospects look favorable to very good. The upward trend in the last quarter of 1972 will be sustained perhaps through the entire year. The drop in the unemployment rate just disclosed from 5.5 to 5.2 is likely to continue. It will bounce around the five per cent mark, possibly even falling below that barrier.

INFLATION DOESN'T look good. While the rate had begun to come down, recent price increases threaten to start it upward again and that is particularly true for food. With the $1.2 billion wheat sale to the Soviet Union, wheat stocks have been run down. This carries over into corn and in turn into beef.

Yet the administration can take comfort from the fact that the rate is so much lower than in other western nations. Whem Prime Minister Edward Heath comes here just after the inauguration, he will envy the American rate of 3.5 to four per cent a year as against Britain's eight per cent plus. In West Germany it is 6.3.

So on the economic side it is almost all on the upbeat. On the political side the opposite is true. Congress and the President will engage in a long and bitter wrangle over spending versus economy. The President will come in with a new budget tailored like the '74 budget with cuts deep enough to preclude a tax increase. That along with the $250 billion Nixon spending ceiling will be the battleground.

The Democratic attack will come through pushing programs such as Sen. Walter Mondale's child care bill and the aid to higher education that he has sponsored along with Sen. Claiborne Pell. The strategy will center on grants in aid to states and municipalities. Here is the sensitive political nerve as localities discover that with the Nixon economy they are not going to get the help that seemed programmed into the spending measures. The President's slash of half the $18 billion voted to clean up America's rivers is causing wide crumbling.

But the cuts will not be sufficient and by mid-year, say, the administration will face a painful dilemma. The choice will be either new taxes or more deficit spending, and with $100 billion in red ink already on the ledger, the latter course is all but ruled out.

THEN COMES the great turn-around scene comparable to Aug. 15, 1971, when the President took the steps — wage and price controls — that he had been saying for two years he would never take. He proposes to wrap all grants in aid programs in one big bundle and with no strings attached get the federal government entirely out of the picture. This would mean a whopping bonanza of perhaps $40 billion compared to which the revenue sharing now being dished out is peanuts.

This will spell the end of administration resistance to cutbacks in the welfare-reform measures. The economic policy will have collapsed, to paraphrase that often quoted line of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper. And the President can blame the Congress for the tax increases that will have to follow.

The seer has come up with one other possibility after careful study of the computerized crystal ball. That is a sizeable cut in the defense budget based on optimism over progress in disarmament in the SALT II talks with the Soviet Union. But the chances for this happening are rated at 10 per cent.

Meandering Streams Become Ugly Ditches 'To Conserve Soil'

You may find it hard to believe the government is spending large sums of your tax money converting beautiful natural streams into ugly ditches.

But that is exactly what the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing.

They call it "channelization."

TO CHANNELIZE a meandering creek or river, you move in with chain saws and bulldozers and strip its banks of trees and brush. Then you bring in huge draglines to deepen and straighten the stream bed, eliminating all the bends and looping curves that slow down the flow of water —and incidentally make the stream a thing of beauty.

Because a channelized stream carries off water more rapidly, nearby bottomlands which once were subject to flooding may become suitable for agriculture.

This presumably benefits the farmers who own those lands, since they can look to the government rather than themselves to foot most of the bill.

OF COURSE, there is some question about the consistency of the Department of Agriculture spending tax money to create new farm lands at the same time it is ladling out funds to farmers to take other croplands out of cultivation.

But that is not the biggest objection that has been raised by critics of channelization.

Environmental protection groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society, say channelization is doing infinitely more harm than good. Even the farmers who get new land may suffer, they say, from a lowering of the water table that causes wells and springs to dry up.

The principal victims of channelization projects, they say, are swamps and floodlands that have served for centuries as natural habitats for many types of wildlife.

FOR EXAMPLE: in one of its current projects, the Soil Conservation Service proposes to dig a big ditch through the Horse Range Swamp in South Carolina. Conservationists say it will destroy the Horse Range Swamp and adversely affect the nearby Four Holes Swamp, which the Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy have purchased to protect perpetually as a classic example of the fast-disappearing ecology of the back-water cypress swamp.

Concern about the effects of the project also has been expressed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and even by the Army Corps of Engineers, which is not noted as an ardent exponent of conservation.

Political pressure is building up to halt the Horse Range ditching. But the same battle will have to be fought in hundreds of other places all over America.

The SCS already has gutterized 8,000 miles of American streams, and has scheduled another 13,000 miles for similar "improvement." Its ultimate goal is to convert 175,000 miles of winding natural woodland streams into nude-banked ditches.

Because the result was so close, groups favoring fluoridation decided to try again. They qualified an initiative for the November ballot, putting the issue back before the people.

That time, it was turned down decisively, 29,133 "no" to 21,879 "yes."

The nearly 22,000 voters who had wanted fluoridation accepted the result. So did the water district directors. No fluoride was added.

TWELVE YEARS elapsed, during which many other communities fluoridated their water supplies. This year, water district directors decided to put the issue to the people again.

This time it passed: 46,105 "yes" to 35,901 "no."

But now it turns out that the anti-fluoridationists, who were all for majority rule when they were on the winning side, don't believe in it when they lose.

Last week one of their spokesmen, Wynn E. Westover, called on the water district board to have an "environmental impact" study made before carrying out the fluoridation mandated by the voters.

He claimed the district is obligated to notify customers of possible "side-effects" of adding fluoride to the water.

THIS IS nonsense. Environmental impact reports are for construction projects which may change the geography, or pollute air or water. Adding fluoride to the water is not polluting it. In fact, the principal objection of the anti-fluoridationists is that fluoridation is medicating the water. They claim that's what they don't believe in.

The water district directors showed absence of spine and good sense in asking the district's legal counsel to look into the "environmental impact" issue.

The district directors of a decade ago sensibly accepted the verdict of the majority as expressed at the polls. They didn't have to. They could have fluoridated the supply anyhow. But they believed in the democratic way.

The present directors should show as much gumption. The voters called for fluoridation by a plurality of more than 10,000. The people have spoken. The water district should get on with the program, and not be deterred by obstructionist, anti-democratic attacks.

Bird's Shoes? Well, Almost

Have you wondered how birds are able to keep their thin, stick-like feet from freezing in very cold weather? One reason is the elevated metabolism and the circulation of very warm blood through the feet. Birds have body temperatures in the range of 102 degrees. To fuel this fire requires much food. Which is why birds appreciate gifts of high calorie goodies, such as beef suet, during the winter.

Nature has put thick, leather-like "shoes" on her birds. These help insulate against the cold. In chilly weather, the bird will press his feet into his fluffed-out feathers, as we might put our cold hands under our sweater.

By EARL G. WATERS

A request to the University of California to view the employment contract between President Charles J. Hitch and the regents has been denied this writer.

As the basis for the denial it was stated, "According to Government Code Section 6254, subsection 'c,' an employment contract is not a public record, and disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Says who?

THAT POSITION, Mr. Hitch, is an unwarranted affront to this reporter and every taxpayer of this state who contributes to your salary and the support of the university.

The section referred to relates to records which are not required to be disclosed. Subsection "c" includes among such records, "Personnel, medical or similar files. . ."

It says nothing about employment contracts which require the expenditure of tax dollars.

The university is supported by tax dollars. All other moneys in its possession, regardless of whether they were private gifts or whatever source, become public money the moment they are accepted by the university.

All contracts by which public funds are expended that are executed by a state agency for construction, equipment, goods or services are public records. If they are not, there had better be some law changes pronto!

The salaries and other emoluments given to all professors and other employees are public. To take the position that the prsident's conditions of employment are to be excepted is untenable.

IT IS AN AMAZING position for the president of the state's seat of learning to take.

What is being hidden?

The inquiry was prompted by rumors floating about that Hitch has a "sweetheart" contract which provides much more than that normally given to presidents of other universities, public or private.

If this is not a fact, it should be scotched. Rather than to suggest the contract is not proper, this column sought to get the facts.

The emoluments given Hitch should be matched with those granted other college presidents. Perhaps the salary of $53,000, which is more than that paid the governor of California, is not enough. Then, again, it may be excessive when all other benefits granted at cost to the taxpayers are added up. No one will know until the contract is disclosed.

IT HAS BEEN leanred that this information is not in the possession of Director of Finance Verne Orr, despite the fact Hitch is asking Orr for more than $400 million to run the university next year.

Now, Mr. Hitch, you are respectfully requested to review your position and disclose this contract for the edification of the taxpayers. This request is made to avoid the embarrassment to you that would result if it becomes necessary to drag you into court.

Please be advised, Mr. Hitch, that we are prepared to do exactly that if you persist in denying this right to this reporter.

"No, you keep 'em. We can't fly 'em either."

Concerned For Welfare Of Missing Dog

On the night of Dec. 6, my dog accidentally got out of our fenced back yard. I raised this dog from a small puppy and I am extremely fond of him. He had a good home and exceptional care.

For the last six days I have tried in vain to locate him. . .All of my attempts to find my dog have been unsuccessful.

It has been suggested by many people that my dog is being kept by some household. If this is so I hope that it is only temporary until I can be located and identify him as my dog. If the home he has found is one where his keepers are fond of him also I would most certainly like to be consulted in this matter. Just knowing he is alive and well would put my mind at rest. I would possibly consider allowing whoever it is the privilege of my dog remaining with them. . .

Response To Emergency Calls Slow In Hub

I am wondering if anyone else is experiencing the difficulty I am, regarding emergency assistance in San Anselmo.

A few weeks ago, early one Sunday morning, I was awakened by a neighbor who was screaming for help. I immediately tried to alert our police department. It took seven minutes to give the particulars, over and over again, to the switchboard operator at the police department, and another 10 minutes before they responded with a patrol car.

Last Sunday evening, one of the coldest nights in our recent freezing weather, an elderly neighborhood woman fell down an outside stairway. A friend and I called for assistance from the San Anselmo Police Department, and then we stayed with the woman, seated on cold concrete steps, trying to keep the lady warm, and afraid to move her as the extent of her injuries was not known. It took 45 minutes for the police and ambulance to arrive.

We hear a lot nowadays about people not caring for other human beings, and turning their backs when a neighbor needs help. What about those of us who do care, and then find that we are not able to get the assistance we need. It is disheartening, to say the least, to "get involved" and not receive the protection we are paying taxes for. . .

District Discriminates Against Auto Drivers

How long are the commuters and taxpayers going to put up with the overt discrimination practiced by the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit District? Consider the special bus lane as an example:

1. The bridge and highway north of the bridge were paid for primarily by funds from auto commuters.

2. Funds to purchase the buses provided by the district came primarily from the auto commuter.

3. Funds to subsidize the loss operation of the bus system and ferry system came primarily from the auto commuter.

4. Patrons of the bus and ferry system are not paying anywhere near the cost of the services provided them.

5. The bus system, which I understood was to help relieve traffic congestion, has indeed further complicated an already impossible commute situation and now also involves southbound traffic in the evening.

What possible rationale can there be to diverting the buses into special lanes to speed the people who are not paying their way past the endless line of cars winding down the Waldo in bumper to bumper stop and go driven by the people who made the entire system possible and who are paying the lion's share of the cost? How about a $1 per person donation to hire an attorney to file a class action suit against the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit and its directors to get the system back to some degree of sanity?

Arabs Held To Blame For Refugee Problem

Concerning Dr. Graham's comments: To say that the "pro-Jewish press never reports on the plight of the Arab refugees is a total misconception. Almost every article on the Mid-East will have reference to the refugee problem.

To say that the one million refugees were "driven from their homes" without referring to the statements of the Grand Mufti of Jeruselum before the 1948 war, exhorting the Arabs to leave the territory because the Arab armies will drive the new state into the sea, at which time they can return and take over all the land, is certainly showing your bias. The Arabs declared and started the war on Israel to wipe out the new state in 1948 when the refugees fled.

Every war, whether it's Vietnam, India-Pakistan, or the internal Sudanese war, produces a refugee problem, but reflect on who started the 1948 conflict. Without it, no refugees would exist. The Mayor of Haifa in 1948 asked the Arabs not to leave.

. . . Over one million Jews have fled from every Arab country where they have been persecuted. Does the U.N. ever discuss their plight?

To say that "the refugees have no seat in the U.N. so that the world has provided them with no recourse" is to completely disregard the almost total number of Arab countries and those whom they aid that almost completely control the U.N. and give support to the Arabs and their cause.

To imply that the area of Palestine was ruled by Arabs and therefore is entitled to representation is to completely disregard history. Previous to 1948, the area was governed by the British as a mandate from 1918 to 1948. Prior to that the non-Arab Turkish Ottoman Empire ruled it for almost six centuries. One would have to go back to the ninth century to find Arab rule over the land.

With its obvious bias and its lack of a meaningful peace-keeping force, how can the U.N. ever impose a peace in the area as Dr. Graham suggests?

This year the gals are rewriting the Christmas story to make two of the three Wise Men women.

Instead of a Mr. Santa who comes down the chimney, we now have a Ms. Claus who goes through the roof.

The thing about this year's Christmas carols is that the women insist on calling the tune.

Capitol Soothsayer Sees Nixon In Another Turn-Around

WASHINGTON — This is an informed view of 1973. It is a view not from the White House where all the blinds are down and the rule is silence, but from one of the ablest administrator-economists who follows the trends at close range with a specialized staff and the requisite computer banks.

Into the forecast goes a healthy respect for President Nixon's capacity for making a 180-degree turn and doing just what he said he would never do. The surprise element could in mid-1973, in this educated crystal ball, produce a dramatic turnaround comparable to mid-1971 when the president clamped on wage and price controls and re-valued the currency. He is capable of stealing the Democrats' clothes while they are happily swimming in the warm current of spending welfare programs.

As for the economy, prospects look favorable to very good. The upward trend in the last quarter of 1972 will be sustained perhaps through the entire year. The drop in the unemployment rate just disclosed from 5.5 to 5.2 is likely to continue. It will bounce around the five per cent mark, possibly even falling below that barrier.

INFLATION DOESN'T look good. While the rate had begun to come down, recent price increases threaten to start it upward again and that is particularly true for food. With the $1.2 billion wheat sale to the Soviet Union, wheat stocks have been run down. This carries over into corn and in turn into beef.

Yet the administration can take comfort from the fact that the rate is so much lower than in other western nations. Whem Prime Minister Edward Heath comes here just after the inauguration, he will envy the American rate of 3.5 to four per cent a year as against Britain's eight per cent plus. In West Germany it is 6.3.

So on the economic side it is almost all on the upbeat. On the political side the opposite is true. Congress and the President will engage in a long and bitter wrangle over spending versus economy. The President will come in with a new budget tailored like the '74 budget with cuts deep enough to preclude a tax increase. That along with the $250 billion Nixon spending ceiling will be the battleground.

The Democratic attack will come through pushing programs such as Sen. Walter Mondale's child care bill and the aid to higher education that he has sponsored along with Sen. Claiborne Pell. The strategy will center on grants in aid to states and municipalities. Here is the sensitive political nerve as localities discover that with the Nixon economy they are not going to get the help that seemed programmed into the spending measures. The President's slash of half the $18 billion voted to clean up America's rivers is causing wide crumbling.

But the cuts will not be sufficient and by mid-year, say, the administration will face a painful dilemma. The choice will be either new taxes or more deficit spending, and with $100 billion in red ink already on the ledger, the latter course is all but ruled out.

THEN COMES the great turn-around scene comparable to Aug. 15, 1971, when the President took the steps — wage and price controls — that he had been saying for two years he would never take. He proposes to wrap all grants in aid programs in one big bundle and with no strings attached get the federal government entirely out of the picture. This would mean a whopping bonanza of perhaps $40 billion compared to which the revenue sharing now being dished out is peanuts.

This will spell the end of administration resistance to cutbacks in the welfare-reform measures. The economic policy will have collapsed, to paraphrase that often quoted line of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper. And the President can blame the Congress for the tax increases that will have to follow.

The seer has come up with one other possibility after careful study of the computerized crystal ball. That is a sizeable cut in the defense budget based on optimism over progress in disarmament in the SALT II talks with the Soviet Union. But the chances for this happening are rated at 10 per cent.

Meandering Streams Become Ugly Ditches 'To Conserve Soil'

You may find it hard to believe the government is spending large sums of your tax money converting beautiful natural streams into ugly ditches.

But that is exactly what the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing.

They call it "channelization."

TO CHANNELIZE a meandering creek or river, you move in with chain saws and bulldozers and strip its banks of trees and brush. Then you bring in huge draglines to deepen and straighten the stream bed, eliminating all the bends and looping curves that slow down the flow of water —and incidentally make the stream a thing of beauty.

Because a channelized stream carries off water more rapidly, nearby bottomlands which once were subject to flooding may become suitable for agriculture.

This presumably benefits the farmers who own those lands, since they can look to the government rather than themselves to foot most of the bill.

OF COURSE, there is some question about the consistency of the Department of Agriculture spending tax money to create new farm lands at the same time it is ladling out funds to farmers to take other croplands out of cultivation.

But that is not the biggest objection that has been raised by critics of channelization.

Environmental protection groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society, say channelization is doing infinitely more harm than good. Even the farmers who get new land may suffer, they say, from a lowering of the water table that causes wells and springs to dry up.

The principal victims of channelization projects, they say, are swamps and floodlands that have served for centuries as natural habitats for many types of wildlife.

FOR EXAMPLE: in one of its current projects, the Soil Conservation Service proposes to dig a big ditch through the Horse Range Swamp in South Carolina. Conservationists say it will destroy the Horse Range Swamp and adversely affect the nearby Four Holes Swamp, which the Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy have purchased to protect perpetually as a classic example of the fast-disappearing ecology of the back-water cypress swamp.

Concern about the effects of the project also has been expressed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and even by the Army Corps of Engineers, which is not noted as an ardent exponent of conservation.

Political pressure is building up to halt the Horse Range ditching. But the same battle will have to be fought in hundreds of other places all over America.

The SCS already has gutterized 8,000 miles of American streams, and has scheduled another 13,000 miles for similar "improvement." Its ultimate goal is to convert 175,000 miles of winding natural woodland streams into nude-banked ditches.

Bicycle Paths For Petaluma At Last In Planning Stage

Petaluma's long-awaited bicycle path system is finally in the planning stages after months of discussion.

Responses from a survey mailed to all residences along with water bills showed most Petalumans want a system for recreational use rather than as alternate transportation to the family car.

Consultant Arnold A. Johnson, whose services are provided by a state grant, will be working out the system along with city staff members and citizens. If everything goes smoothly, the paths could be in operation in 1973.

The bicycle survey brought a 22.5 per cent return or a total of 2,114 replies, which is considered good for Petaluma. The streets most often listed as favorites for riding were Washington Street, South McDowell Boulevard, Ely Road, Petaluma Boulevard, and Western Avenue.

THE DANGER of auto traffic was listed as the main reason for not using bicycles for local transportation. The high rate of bicycle thefts was a distant second as the deterrent.

Although the questionnaire had only a tiny space for written comments, many of the responses included them. Most cited the need for bicycle safety near schools and made very general comments, but one citizen demanded that all city employees be required to ride bicycles to work. For some it might be practical, but the comment brought only chuckles from public works employees who live in Santa Rosa and Forestville.

If a bicycle path system is installed, next year's residential development allotment board will have better ammunition to require paths from developers.

This year's board often questioned builders on the lack of trails, only to be told the suggestion was "ridiculous" since there was not central path for a link-up. Next year they may have to think of some other excuse.

LAST WEEK'S Old Adobe School district special election will go down in history as one of the least noticed and most costly in local history.

The Sonoma County Board of Elections estimated cost of the election at $1,500, which figures out to nearly $5 per vote since only 310 were cast. The other 4,574 registered voters should have gone to the polls if for no other reason than to get their money's worth.

60 Days Jail Time Is Given To Driver, 18

A Marin Superior Court judge has ordered 18-year-old Newton Jeffrey Wise of Tiburon to spend 60 days in jail for felony drunken driving during an accident in which he and four others were injured.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also fined Wise $500 and placed him on probation for two years on the charge resulting from a two-car collision near Redwood High School in Larkspur Sept. 23.

Police said a car driven by Wise went through a stop sign at Doherty Drive and Riviera Circle and collided with a car driven by Stanley G. Walker, 39, of Larkspur.

Both drivers, two passengers in Walker's car and one in Wise's were taken to a local hospital by ambulance after the wreck.

Best Hope For Vietnam May Be Long-Lasting Warce

WASHINGTON — It is obvious from the recent Kissinger talks in Paris that we have been unable to work out a true peace treaty in Vietnam.

Hallaby Hegelstein, a political science professor, maintains the most we can get out of Indochina is a "warce."

"What is a warce?" I asked him.

"IT IS NEITHER peace nor war; it is actually a combination of both. For some time now the world has needed a new word to describe the situation many countries are in. In the Middle East you do not have peace, nor do you have a fighting war. The English language has no word for this predicament so I invented one which I call 'warce.' "

"How could warce apply to Vietnam?"

"If the United States signs a treaty with Hanoi which the South Vietnamese refuse to ratify, you will have a state of warce. President Nixon may call it a peace, but he would only be kidding himself and the American people."

"What would the warce consist of?" I asked.

"You would probably have a cease-fire with some fighting on both sides. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will continue sporadic probing of the South Vietnamese defenses, and the South Vietnamese will probably make occasional attacks on Viet Cong strongholds. But both sides will probably be stalemated and the warce could continue for years."

"WELL, I GUESS a warce in Indochina is better than nothing," I said.

"It might be the coming thing. Since peace treaties are so hard to come by, I would advocate that nations sign warce treaties instead. It could save face on both sides. Many of our world leaders consider the signing of a peace pact a sign of weakness. But no one could criticize them at home if they said they had agreed to a warce."

"I imagine if he couldn't have it any other way, President Nixon would settle for a generation of warce," I said.

"The advantage of warce," Hegelsten said, "is that Congress wouldn't have to declare it. If the President decided he wanted to involve the country in a warce, he could do it on his own."

"And if he succeeded," I said, "he could be nominated for the Nobel Warce Prize."

"I BELIEVE the nation would thrive on a warce footing," Hagelstein said. "You wouldn't have to shut down your defense plants and put a lot of people out of work, and at the same time you would use very little of the stuff to kill people."

"And you could sell warce bonds to finance it," I added.

"It would also solve the military problem. In a period of peace, the armed forces find themselves in disrepute. But if we were at warce, our men in uniform would still be respected and there would be plenty of opportunity for promotion," Hegelstein said.

He added, "The world is not ready for peace and may never be. At the same time, war is not the answer to our problems. Therefore, we must condition ourselves to warce — whether they be warces of liberation, limited warces or even a World Warce. Vietnam may be the big test. If we can have a successful warce there, it will prove that it's possible to have a warce anywhere."

"That's a good thought to leave with people at this time of year, Professor."

"Thank you. Merry Christmas, and remember, warce on earth —good will to men."

World Cup Skiing

The opening meet of the World Cup ski season ended last week in the French Alpine town of Val D'Isere. About half of the American team participated in the meet. In World Cup competition, both men's and women's teams vie for points in straight downhill races and zigzag downhill races. Skiing is a relatively new sport. The first ski competition was believed to be held in Norway about 1875. Skiing became a part of the Winter Olympic Games in 1924. Before the World Cup season ends in March, 1973, skiers will have traversed slopes in Yugoslavia, Germany, Alaska, Japan, and California.

"What would the warce consist of?" I asked.

"You would probably have a cease-fire with some fighting on both sides. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will continue sporadic probing of the South Vietnamese defenses, and the South Vietnamese will probably make occasional attacks on Viet Cong strongholds. But both sides will probably be stalemated and the warce could continue for years."

"WELL, I GUESS a warce in Indochina is better than nothing," I said.

"It might be the coming thing. Since peace treaties are so hard to come by, I would advocate that nations sign warce treaties instead. It could save face on both sides. Many of our world leaders consider the signing of a peace pact a sign of weakness. But no one could criticize them at home if they said they had agreed to a warce."

"I imagine if he couldn't have it any other way, President Nixon would settle for a generation of warce," I said.

"The advantage of warce," Hegelsten said, "is that Congress wouldn't have to declare it. If the President decided he wanted to involve the country in a warce, he could do it on his own."

"And if he succeeded," I said, "he could be nominated for the Nobel Warce Prize."

"I BELIEVE the nation would thrive on a warce footing," Hagelstein said. "You wouldn't have to shut down your defense plants and put a lot of people out of work, and at the same time you would use very little of the stuff to kill people."

"And you could sell warce bonds to finance it," I added.

"It would also solve the military problem. In a period of peace, the armed forces find themselves in disrepute. But if we were at warce, our men in uniform would still be respected and there would be plenty of opportunity for promotion," Hegelstein said.

He added, "The world is not ready for peace and may never be. At the same time, war is not the answer to our problems. Therefore, we must condition ourselves to warce — whether they be warces of liberation, limited warces or even a World Warce. Vietnam may be the big test. If we can have a successful warce there, it will prove that it's possible to have a warce anywhere."

"That's a good thought to leave with people at this time of year, Professor."

"Thank you. Merry Christmas, and remember, warce on earth —good will to men."

World Cup Skiing

The opening meet of the World Cup ski season ended last week in the French Alpine town of Val D'Isere. About half m the American team participated in the meet. In World Cup competition, both men's and women's teams vie for points in straight downhill races and zigzag downhill races. Skiing is a relatively new sport. The first ski competition was believed to be held in Norway about 1875. Skiing became a part of the Winter Olympic Games in 1924. Before the World Cup season ends in March, 1973, skiers will have traversed slopes in Yugoslavia, Germany, Alaska, Japan, and California.

Nixon's Reason For Bombing Resumption

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said today President Nixon ordered resumption of full scale bombing of North Vietnam to prevent Hanoi from using peace talks as a cover for continuing the war.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters the President was determined to prevent any buildup of Communist forces under cover of peace negotiations.

In response to questions, Ziegler stopped short of saying that a buildup actually was in progress, however.

Ziegler said the President had promised "not to delay a settlement by one day if it's right but not to agree to a settlement one day before it is right," he added.

"We cannot allow the peace talks to be filibustered or delayed for the purpose of continuing the war in the south."

Ziegler was asked if the United States was conferring with the Soviet Union and China in efforts to get them to put pressure on Hanoi to resume the private discussions with Henry A. Kissinger.

Ziegler said, "You should assume we are proceeding in every way we can, using every avenue available to us."

Asked if Nixon had conferred with members of Congress before ordering a resumption of full scale bombing, Ziegler said he did not know.

The presidential spokesman said he still stood by his statement Monday that "the road to peace through negotiations is wide open," and "we stand ready to negotiate in good faith."

Ziegler said the United States expected a meeting between U.S. and North Vietnamese technicians to be held on Wednesday in Paris as scheduled.

Ziegler also said that a regular weekly session of the four-party Vietnam talks — also including Viet Cong and South Vietnamese representatives — would be held as scheduled on Thursday "unless we hear something from the other side."

On Capitol Hill, the President's actions brought new calls for legislation to end the war and a demand that presidential adviser Henry Kissinger be summoned to testify on the breakdown in peace talks.

Communist World Reacts Angrily To Air Strikes

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Communist worl reacted angrily today to President Nixon's decision to resume the all-out bombing of North Vietnam. The North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry said efforts to force a solution on U.S. terms would fail and the Viet Cong and Hanoi delegations in Paris echoed the statement.

Communist diplomats in London told UPI diplomatic correspondent K.C. Thaler that the resumed American bombing of Hanoi can be expected to slow down temporarily the process of rapprochement of the Soviet Union and China with the United States.

But they said they did not anticipate a freeze in this process of improving relations, which began earlier this year. They said one direct result of latest developments in the Vietnam conflict might be a delay in the projected Washington visit of Soviet Communist Party Chairman Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The Communist diplomats also said a certain hardening of the Peking and Moscow policy lines may make itself felt — though probably more in public statements censoring Nixon's latest Vietnam moves than in negotiations on concrete issues.

On Monday, Hanoi condemned the resumption of fullscale U.S. bombing and said it was suspending indefinitely the technical-level negotiations with U.S. representatives in Paris. However, a spokesman for the American talks delegation said it had received no formal notification of the suspension of the private talks.

In a later statement, the North Vietnamese said no decision had been taken yet whether or not to boycott the 171st session of the weekly Paris semipublic peace talks Thursday on Kleber Avenue.

Piotr Abrassimov, the Soviet Union's ambassador to France, said today in Paris the renewal of U.S. bombing strikes would not make Hanoi soften its attitude on a cease-fire accord.

Mill Valley Surgeon Found Dead

A Marin County surgeon, missing from his Mill Valley home since Sunday, was found dead yesterday in his auto near Occidental in Sonoma County, apparently of an overdose of drugs.

The body of Dr. George Ordway, 53, of 734 Lovell Avenue, was discovered about 4:25 p.m., lying on the back seat of the car, parked on Coleman Valley Road one mile east of Highway 1.

Don Noriel, Sonoma County Coroner's investigator, said notes found near the body indicated the surgeon intended to take his own life, but gave no reason for doing so.

Coleman, who practiced in San Rafael, had been reported missing yesterday to Mill Valley police by his wife, Doris. Mrs. Coleman told officers her husband had left home at 5 p.m. Sunday and failed to return.

His body was taken to the Guerneville Funeral Home, where an autopsy was planned.

Traffic Deaths

CHICAGO (UPI) —The number of traffic deaths in the United States this year is expected to reach 56,700, the highest total in history, the National Safety Council said Monday.

Larkspur Sets Northridge Open Space Plan Session

The Larkspur Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on the Northridge Open Space Plan next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Larkspur City Hall.

Mayors, councilmen and planning commissioners from Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley took their first look at a joint meeting on Nov. 15 at a preliminary open space plan for Northridge, delineating 1,347 acres of ridgelands, hillsides and canyons to be preserved.

The plan, paid for by the Marin Conservation League, the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department, and the three cities, estimated the fair market value at $2,898,808.

At the joint meeting, mayors of the three cities agreed to take the plan back to their councils and planning commissions, and bring back their recommendations to another joint session on Jan. 29. Larkspur is the first town to hold a public hearing on the proposal.

All cities in the county have been asked to make a "shopping list" of priorities for open space purchase by the county. The funds will come from $700,000 budged by supervisors in this fiscal year. A similar amount will be raised in future years by the 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation authorized by passage of the open space measure in last month's ballot.

The communities of Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley already have declared Northridge their number one priority for such purchase.

Death Is Caused By Meningitis

A 23-year-old Corte Madera resident, who died in a local hospital after complaining of severe back pain last month, was the victim of acute meningitis, the Marin County Coroner's office said today.

The type of meningitis which killed Fred Thompson was relatively noncommunicable, not the type that periodically causes panic and quarantining on Army posts, according to Keith C. Craig, coroner's investigator.

Thompson died Nov. 13 after becoming ill at his home on Willow Avenue. He had gone to the emergency room three times in the five days before his death to seek treatment for pain.

However, Craig said, the symptoms he complained of on those visits did not match those of a meningitis victim.

Ousted Stanford Prof Faces Harbor Count

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI Tuesday arrested H. Bruce Franklin, the ousted radical Stanford University professor, and two others on federal charges of harboring a state prison inmate who escaped in an ambush in which a guard was killed.

At about the same time, state authorities arrested Robert Allan Seabock, 23, in Palo Alto in the investigation of the guard's murder. Seabock was the fifth person to be arrested for the murder.

Franklin, 30, a Maoist and an English professor, early this year became the first tenured professor to be fired by Stanford in 70 years. He was discharged on charges of fomenting violence on campus.

He was arrested along with Morton Newman, 30, Menlo Park, Calif.; and Bruce W. Hobson, 23, Mountain View, Calif., on charges of harboring Ronald W. Beaty, a Chino Prison inmate.

Beaty escaped Oct. 6 while being driven by two unarmed guards from Chino for a court appearance in San Bernardino, Calif.

Two cars forced their auto off the road. Three men and a woman opened fire on the guards, killing one, Jesus Sanchez, and seriously wounding a second, who apparently was left for dead.

Beaty was recaptured Dec. 11 when his car was stopped on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge. Beaty and the others were said to be associated with Venceremos, a Maoist revolutionary organization active on the San Francisco peninsula.

Since his dismissal, Franklin has continued living in Menlo Park, and has been active in politics.

Hobson is a son of Mrs. Jean Stevens Hobson who was arrested along with Beaty. Their car contained numerous firearms, and she subsequently was charged with murder.

Previously arrested on murder charges in the case were Andrea Holman, 18, daughter of a Stanford University medical professor, and Benton D. Burt, 30, a former cellmate of Beaty's.

Cure Seen For Athlete's Foot

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An Army doctor says he believes an inoculation can be found to prevent athlete's foot.

Dr. Henry E. Jones, a lieutenant colonel, said Monday he came to the conclusion as the result of a study into jungle rot, a fungus disease much like ringworm, which produces athlete's foot.

Dr. Jones said experiments with 200 volunteers at a state penal institution convinced him 85 per cent were practically immune to ring worm.

He hopes to protect the other 15 per cent by isolating an extract from killed fungus.

PROBLEM SOLVING ON FOURTH STREET

Three-year-old Justin Young (left) tries to see past the mass of foam mattress his father, Ron Young of Mill Valley, is trying to pull into his Porsche. The problem was not unlike getting a size 10 foot into a size 7 shoe. But problems are Young's business, as attested by this side of the business card he handed Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean.

The push-and-pull struggle was a real attention-getter today in the 800 block of San Rafael's Fourth Street and the unidentified pedestrian (left) was but one of many to pause for a quizzical glance.

But success comes to all who persevere — as the reverse of Young's business card asserts. It's just a matter of planning and implementing, though in this case growth was hardly part of the solution, unless growth of the Porsche. A moment later Young and his son were on their way home to 123 Peralta Way, where all that remained was to get it out of the car.

Dredging Permission Given Despite Biologist Warning

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

HAYWARD — The Army Corps of Engineers today won permission to dredge highly polluted mud at Mare Island straits, despite a state biologist's warning that the pollution will be a threat to "millions upon millions" of fish.

The regional Water Quality Control Board, confronted by Army and Navy claims that national defense would be hurt if the dredging were not approved immediately, voted 6-1 to approve dredging one million cubic yards to be deposited in nearby Carquinez Strait.

The Mare Island strait is the only access to the Navy's shipyard there.

The only board member who voted against the military was Roger A. McConnell, a Portola Valley electrical engineer. Noting that no one disputed that the mud was grossly polluted with poisonous metals, he said the effect on water quality would be severe.

McConnell also argued that by backing down before the Army, the major dredger in San Francisco Bay, the board has set a bad precedent that will allow dredging of polluted mud elsewhere in the bay.

He added that no other dredger could have gotten board permission to bend the rules.

Michael Rugg, a state fish and game department biologist, objected that millions of fish have to traverse Carquinez Strait.

Rugg said the state standards for dredging polluted mud are based on guidelines set by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

A spokesman for the EPA however argued that the pollution's hazard to fish and wildlife "won't be that great." Davie R. Minard, an EPA oceanographer, told the board the dredging is warranted because silting of the strait presented the Navy with "An emergency situation."

Board member Barbara Eastman asked why the Navy could not, instead, move its ships at high tide. A Navy spokesman said the need to get a ship out of the shipyard could not be made dependent upon tides.

"We have to be able to move on immediate notice," said Capt. Frank Day, public works officer at the shipyard.

He also testified the dredging must begin by Jan. 3 to prevent further siltation of the 30-foot channel to the shipyard.

The board's executive officer Fred H. Dierker, told the board that it was a "judgmental decision," whether a real emergency threatened the shipyard.

He noted that Army had claimed that no additional funds were available to pay the higher cost of dumping the mud spoils on land. The Army, Dierker said, never documented this claim.

The board's action eliminated the prospect of a legal fight with the Corps, which last month said it would dredge the strait even without the regional board's approval.

The state and federal limits on dredging polluted mud were set after it was found the pollution worked its way into the food chain and through fish marketed for human consumption.

Marinwood CSD Fills Five Spots

Directors of the Marinwood Community Services District last night reappointed three members of the community fire commission and two members of the park and recreation commission.

Genevieve T. Bolding, district business manager and secretary, said that in addition, a third park and recreation commissioner, whose term is expiring, was replaced and the seat of a commission alternate was left vacant for the time being.

Renamed to the fire panel were Kenneth Katz, Kirk Beales and Thomas O'Haire, while Emily Dvorin and David Paoli were reappointed to the park and recreation group.

Park and recreation commissioner Leland Spencer, leaving the panel because of work commitments, was replaced by Bernard Nangle of 399 Miller Creek Road. The seat of alternate Walter Johnson, leaving the commission for identical reasons, was left vacant.

The board also approved a full-time fire cadet program at an additional cost of $600; conditionally authorized purchase of a chemical mixer pump for the community pool at $600, and opposed planned division of the Weiss property off Millstone Terrace because of the property's steep slope.

Board Fails To Pick Strawberry Director

Recreation Mgr. David Roberts said Director Manuel K. Lehua nominated James Andrews of 296 Ricardo Road to take the seat of Schaefer, who resigned recently, but his move wasn't seconded.

Director Thomas Miller then nominated Patricia M. Jeremiah, who lost out in a recent board election, and Arthur R. Senter seconded. Lehua, however, voted against Mrs. Jeremiah, leaving the matter in limbo until the next board session Jan. 2.

Roberts explained an appointment must be confirmed by a majority of the four persons now sitting on the panel. Director Jane Brown was absent last night.

Prior to the vote, Mrs. Jeremiah and the third candidate, Fred Holmes of 58 Bayview Terrace, spoke on their qualifications, while Lehua spoke in behalf of the absent Andrews.

Decline In German Measles Is Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The number of reported cases of rubella, known as German measles, declined 44 per cent during the first nine months this year in the United States, the Public Health Service (PHS) said Monday.

This follows a nationwide vaccination campaign begun in 1969 against the disease, which, when contracted by pregnant women, can cause birth defects in the children they bear.

Map For Wolfback Ridge Due Another Look Tonight

Edward R. Fitzsimmons' tentative map for a controversial subdivision on 160 acres of Sausalito's Wolfback Ridge, will again be before the city council when it meets at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Mayor Robin Sweeny and Councilman Stephen A. Fraser traveled to Washington in October to attempt to get Congress to include the property in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, but were unsuccessful.

In August, Fitzsimmons had asked the council to delay action on his map until the city had tried to persuade government officials to place the land in the national park.

Fitzsimmons, who owns the land in conjunction with Frank Lynch, has been trying to develop a subdivision on it for two years, but has been fought by people who want the ridge to remain as open space.

In other business, the council will consider proposed amendments to the strict houseboat ordinance which it recently adopted. A group of houseboat residents have proposed some changes and will present them tonight.

The council will also consider adoption of a noise control ordinance for the city.

Pollution Funds

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese industries and the government will spend at least $34.7 billion in the next 10 years to combat pollution in Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and nine other major cities, government officials reported today.

License Check Turns Up Grass

SANTA CRUZ (UPI) —The California Highway Patrol says a check on an out-of-state license plate led to the discovery Monday of $100,000 worth of marijuana in a camper truck.

Patrolmen said they stopped Conner Moyle Petrie III, 24, Monday because of the Oregon plate and searched the truck because he tried to elude them.

Petrie gave no address.

FOUR HEARTS

At the first table of the match, William Grieve, a member of my team, got to four hearts and made it. Incidentally, if you're puzzled by North's jump to three no-trump, relax: Grieve and his partner, George Rapee, use this response as a forcing raise of the original bid, not as a true no-trump bid.

Grieve tooc the queen of clubs, drew a few rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to dummy's kind. When this held, he returned the low spade from dummy.

CRAFTY RETURN

East stepped up with the queen of spades and craftily returned the queen of diamonds. If South held K-x-x of diamonds he might play low on the assumption that East had led from Q-J-x of diamonds. If so, East would lead a low diamond next, and thus might hornswoggle his way into getting three diamond tricks.

A GOOD PLOT

It was a good plot, but South had the nine of diamonds and could therefore afford to cover the queen of diamonds with the king. When this won, South was home.

At the other table of the match, Becker opened the South hand with one heart, and Los Angeles expert Lew Mathe overcalled with one spade! Don't take this overcall as a model; just admire it from a distance.

Don Krauss bid four spades with the East hand, and Becker could no longer play the hand at four hearts. He could have collected a penalty of 500 points, but he chose to bid on and was down one at five hearts.

ANSWER: Using standard methods, bid three hearts.

The hand is a shade too powerful for a shutout jump to four hearts.

Gun Makes It Through Check

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — After passing through stringent security checks and metal detectors, a criminal case defendant walked into court Monday and pulled a revolver from his briefcase.

Albert L. Zero, 44, calmly put the gun on the defense table as bailiff Robert King rushed to his side.

The gun turned out to be a harmless replica of a .357 Magnum which Zero, who was facing trial for allegedly brandishing a gun, planned to use in his defense.

Opening lead — ♣ 6

FOUR HEARTS

At the first table of the match, William Grieve, a member of my team, got to four hearts and made it. Incidentally, if you're puzzled by North's jump to three no-trump, relax: Grieve and his partner, George Rapee, use this response as a forcing raise of the original bid, not as a true no-trump bid.

Grieve tooc the queen of clubs, drew a few rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to dummy's kind. When this held, he returned the low spade from dummy.

CRAFTY RETURN

East stepped up with the queen of spades and craftily returned the queen of diamonds. If South held K-x-x of diamonds he might play low on the assumption that East had led from Q-J-x of diamonds. If so, East would lead a low diamond next, and thus might hornswoggle his way into getting three diamond tricks.

A GOOD PLOT

It was a good plot, but South had the nine of diamonds and could therefore afford to cover the queen of diamonds with the king. When this won, South was home.

At the other table of the match, Becker opened the South hand with one heart, and Los Angeles expert Lew Mathe overcalled with one spade! Don't take this overcall as a model; just admire it from a distance.

Don Krauss bid four spades with the East hand, and Becker could no longer play the hand at four hearts. He could have collected a penalty of 500 points, but he chose to bid on —

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K 4
♥ - K 9 6 5 4 2
♦ - 10 5 4
♣ - K 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Using standard methods, bid three hearts.

The hand is a shade too powerful for a shutout jump to four hearts.

Gun Makes It Through Check

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — After passing through stringent security checks and metal detectors, a criminal case defendant walked into court Monday and pulled a revolver from his briefcase.

The gun turned out to be a harmless replica of a .357 Magnum which Zero, who was facing trial for allegedly brandishing a gun, planned to use in his defense.

HERE ARE SOME "BRASS TACKS" ABOUT AUTOMOBILE BUYING

Automobile SELLING is highly competitive business. The dealer with lower overhead REALLY has a competitive advantage. He can use this advantage to give his custo ers better deals.

In Marin County overhead IS lower and you'll find BETTER deals than you can find "over the bridge" - AND the service is LOCAL!

HERE ARE SOME "BRASS TACKS" ABOUT AUTOMOBILE BUYING

Automobile SELLING is highly competitive business. The dealer with lower overhead REALLY has a competitive advantage. He can use this advantage to give his custo ers better deals.

In Marin County overhead IS lower and you'll find BETTER deals than you can find "over the bridge" - AND the service is LOCAL!

Scientists Track 'Hot' Molecules

The chemistry of living organisms is very complex, and biologists are forever looking for simple ways to follow the path of specific molecules within living systems. One valuable technique used by scientists at The Salk Institute in San Diego, is called radioactive labeling. It consists of making the molecules 'hot' by placing radioactive atoms in them and then simply following the radioactivity. Without radioactive labelling techniques, elaborate chemical analyses would be necessary, and whole areas of biology would be virtually impossible.

If, for example, a bacteriorolgist wants to know whether a certain protein can bind to the surface of his bacteria, he could grow the bacteria in a medium that contains a radioactive version of the protein, washing the medium away after a while, and then merely check for radioactivity on the surface of the cells. Or an endocrinologist may want to know how much hormone a cell produces under special conditions. He could provide the cell with radioactive versions of the ingredients for making the hormone.

Later, he could separate out those parts of the cells' products that should contain the hormone and measure the amount of radioactivity in those samples.

Radioactive labelling is most often done with atoms of carbon, hydrogen, or phosphorus, because they occur frequently in living organisms and because they have radioactive variants which are relatively safe for the scientists to work with. The biologists can usually buy radioactive forms of most of the organic compounds they need from commercial firms; the firms specify in each case the site of the radioactive atom within the molecule and the amount of radioactivity in the whole sample.

Depending on what information the experimenter wants, there are many ways of detecting the radiation. One simple way is to lay some photographic emulsion directly over a dish containing cells. If the cells contain radioactive molecules, the radiation will make a pattern of dots on the film.

The number and distribution of these dots give the biologist the information he wants. An even easier method is to hold a Geiger Counter over the dish, but this method gives less precise information — merely whether there is any radiation in or near the dish.

A more complex technique, but a very common one, involves using a machine called a scintillation counter. The researcher dissolves each of his samples in a vial of special liquid that gives off flashes of light (scintillations) whenever it is struck by radiation. The machine counts the number of flashes coming from each vial, and these numbers tell how much radioactivity is present in each of the samples — in other words, where the labelled molecules have gone during the experiment. A scintillation counter usually costs about $17,000.

These radioactive compounds are relatively safe, but they are not completely safe. Every biologist who works with them learns certain basic precautions — such as frequent washings, bright yellow labels for all containers with radioactive materials, care in cleaning up spills, and separate sinks for radioactive liquids.

The precautions vary somewhat for each of the three elements. Radioactive hydrogen, or tritium, is essentially harmless in the amounts normally used unless it is swallowed. The radiation from Carbon 14 will penetrate the skin at close range, so it is more dangerous. Radioactive phosphorus is the most dangerous of the three.

Each laboratory is also subjected to periodic safety checks. Each scientist wears a film badge which is checked after one month to see how much radiation he has been exposed to; each laboratory and sink is checked for radioactive contamination at frequent intervals.

The extra effort of these precautions is far less than the effort saved by radioactive labelling techniques; that is why The Salk Institute and virtually every other biological laboratory are equipped for handling radioactive experiments.

Writer's Cramp Makes Return Among Workers In Australia

In the past, writer's cramp was fairly common because most letters, books and business and legal documents were handwritten. The cramping was brought on by the repeated use of special groups of muscles laboring monotonously in the preparation of volumes of meticulous script, without rest or relaxation.

Seamstresses, barbers (scissors), milkers, and piano players also developed these cramps. Tyepwriters changed much of this and, until recently, writer's cramp has been on the wane.

BUT DOWN in Australia, the condition has developed among those whose jobs involve constant writing or keyboard telegraphy. Almost 14 per cent of male telegraphists in three large Australian cities were bothered on the job and half of them had similar symptoms when writing. Since the cramp involves impairment of a learned skill, the workers consider the condition to be an occupation cramp or craft palsy.

Incoordination of the arm ensues on attempting to write. Muscular cramping, weakness and stiffness, or pain follows. Many tell of tremor or jerking when using the involved arm. All of this makes writing difficult or nearly impossible.

The disability may worsen or remain the same unless the person learns to write with the other hand. The victims have no trouble using the arm for other purposes. Meanwhile, activities requiring fine skills of the upper extremities are not affected. The victims can play games and musical instruments and feed and dress themselves.

ALL OF THIS is highly suggestive of a neurotic illness because no abnormalities, including signs of weakness or nerve involvement, were found. Apparently when the same set of pulleys are used over and over again, the muscles rebel and refuse to cooperate. It is mind over matter and, more so, when the work is dull.

Writer's cramp is difficult to treat. Some physicians recommend changing the style of writing or shifting the way the pen or pencil is held. Enlarging the size of the letters may also help. One program advocates exercise to strengthen the hand. This is followed by teaching the person to write without manipulating the fingers via full arm strokes. But more recently, relaxation is advocated in conjunction with a program of using a pen with a wide soft felt point to draw simple shapes and progressing to adult script and a normal pen. Regardless of the method, psychotherapy is needed.

325 GALLSTONES

A reader writes: Could a person have 325 gallstones? Incidentally, who counts them after the operation?

REPLY

Yes, to your first question. These would be pebble-sized, of course. The auditor is the hospital pathologist who must examine and describe thoroughly all tissues removed by the surgeon.

VOICE LOSS

H. Writes: What would cause a person to suddenly lose his voice?

REPLY

Nervousness or a stroke. A more gradual loss follows infection, irritation, abuse of the voice, or a tumor on the vocal cords.

Marin Trio Cleared In Drug Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Charges have been dismissed against three Marin residents arrested in connection with a large seizure of cocaine but five other persons, including four who live in Marin, have been indicted on felony charges.

Due to enter pleas in U.S. District Court Dec. 29 are Thomas F. Steinberg, 23, and Frank J. Keicher, 21, both of Sausalito; Louis J. Katzberg, 25, of Mill Valley; Gregory J. McGuire, 26, of San Anselmo, and Stephen D. Moran, 21, of Palo Alto.

Dismissed because of lack of evidence were Katherine Steinberg, 19, and Maria Keicher, 21, and John R. Morris, 22, all of Sausalito.

Federal agents said they negotiated for the sale of five pounds of cocaine at a wholesale price of $80,000. The men were arrested early this month at the Hyatt House in Burlingame after being followed from a Sausalito residence.

Promotion For Sonoma Aide

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — C. Lawrence Andrew, deputy Sonoma County administrator, has been promoted to assistant county administrator.

The position has remained unfilled since March 1969 when David L. Nichols was promoted to administrator.

Andrew, who has been a deputy since 1969, has been on the administrator's staff since 1964. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Long Beach State College and master of arts degree from Golden Gate College.

Andrew will assume the new position on Jan. 1. The salary has not yet been set.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS
SAN RAFAEL SANITATION DISTRICT
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the San Rafael Sanitation District, San Rafael, California, will receive bids for the construction of Sewer Plant Expansion, Pump Station, Transmission and Collection Facilities in San Rafael, California. Each bid or proposal is to be in accordance with specifications and contract documents now on file with the District Administrator, City Hall, 1400 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, California, where they may be examined, and with Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins, 201 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Greenbrae, California. Copies of same may be obtained by General Contractors from Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins upon payment of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) which will be refunded upon return of the plans and specifications in satisfactory condition with ten (10) days of bid date.

Bidders are hereby further notified that pursuant to the Statutes of the State of California or local laws thereto applicable, it shall be mandatory upon the Contractor to whom the contract is awarded to pay not less than the general prevailing hourly wage rate, per diem wages and rates for legal holidays and overtime work in the locality in which the work is to be performed.

A schedule of the prevailing rates has been approved by the Board of Directors of the said Sanitation District, and is filed with the Secretary of said Board in the offices of the District Administrator, and said schedule is hereby referred to and by such reference incorporated herein and made a part hereof as fully as though set forth in length.

Each bid shall be made out on a form to be obtained at the office of said Engineer at the address hereinabove set forth; shall be accompanied by a certified, or cashier's check or bid bond for not less than ten percent (10%) of the amount bid, made payable to the order of the said San Rafael Sanitation District, shall be sealed and filed with the said District Administrator, at his office on or before 10 a.m., January 11, 1973, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The above mentioned check or bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder will enter into the contract if awarded to him, and will be declared forfeited if the successful bidder refuses to enter into said contract after being requested to do so by the said District Board.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a Faithful Performance Bond in the amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price and a Labor and Materials Bond in the amount of fifty percent (50%) of the contract price; said bonds to be secured from a surety company satisfactory to the District Board.

The project has been prepared as 3 units:

Bidders may bid on one or more of the units, it is not necessary that a bid be submitted for three units.

The grand total on each project will determine the low bidder.

Unit No. 2 - Pump Station No. 4.

Unit No. 3 - Transmission and Collection Facilities.

The District Board may let the project as one contract for all 3 units; one contract for each unit; or such combination of units that is in the best interests of the District.

The District Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to waive any informality in a bid, or to award a contract on the basis of the proposal which serves the best interest of the Sanitation District.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of forty-five (45) days after the date set for the opening thereof.

Date bids will be received: January 11, 1972

Dated this 6th Day of December, 1972

Scientists Track 'Hot' Molecules

The chemistry of living organisms is very complex, and biologists are forever looking for simple ways to follow the path of specific molecules within living systems. One valuable technique used by scientists at The Salk Institute in San Diego, is called radioactive labeling. It consists of making the molecules 'hot' by placing radioactive atoms in them and then simply following the radioactivity. Without radioactive labelling techniques, elaborate chemical analyses would be necessary, and whole areas of biology would be virtually impossible.

If, for example, a bacteriorolgist wants to know whether a certain protein can bind to the surface of his bacteria, he could grow the bacteria in a medium that contains a radioactive version of the protein, washing the medium away after a while, and then merely check for radioactivity on the surface of the cells. Or an endocrinologist may want to know how much hormone a cell produces under special conditions. He could provide the cell with radioactive versions of the ingredients for making the hormone.

Later, he could separate out those parts of the cells' products that should contain the hormone and measure the amount of radioactivity in those samples.

Radioactive labelling is most often done with atoms of carbon, hydrogen, or phosphorus, because they occur frequently in living organisms and because they have radioactive variants which are relatively safe for the scientists to work with. The biologists can usually buy radioactive forms of most of the organic compounds they need from commercial firms; the firms specify in each case the site of the radioactive atom within the molecule and the amount of radioactivity in the whole sample.

Depending on what information the experimenter wants, there are many ways of detecting the radiation. One simple way is to lay some photographic emulsion directly over a dish containing cells. If the cells contain radioactive molecules, the radiation will make a pattern of dots on the film.

The number and distribution of these dots give the biologist the information he wants. An even easier method is to hold a Geiger Counter over the dish, but this method gives less precise information — merely whether there is any radiation in or near the dish.

A more complex technique, but a very common one, involves using a machine called a scintillation counter. The researcher dissolves each of his samples in a vial of special liquid that gives off flashes of light (scintillations) whenever it is struck by radiation. The machine counts the number of flashes coming from each vial, and these numbers tell how much radioactivity is present in each of the samples — in other words, where the labelled molecules have gone during the experiment. A scintillation counter usually costs about $17,000.

These radioactive compounds are relatively safe, but they are not completely safe. Every biologist who works with them learns certain basic precautions — such as frequent washings, bright yellow labels for all containers with radioactive materials, care in cleaning up spills, and separate sinks for radioactive liquids.

The precautions vary somewhat for each of the three elements. Radioactive hydrogen, or tritium, is essentially harmless in the amounts normally used unless it is swallowed. The radiation from Carbon 14 will penetrate the skin at close range, so it is more dangerous. Radioactive phosphorus is the most dangerous of the three.

Each laboratory is also subjected to periodic safety checks. Each scientist wears a film badge which is checked after one month to see how much radiation he has been exposed to; each laboratory and sink is checked for radioactive contamination at frequent intervals.

The extra effort of these precautions is far less than the effort saved by radioactive labelling techniques; that is why The Salk Institute and virtually every other biological laboratory are equipped for handling radioactive experiments.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Writer's Cramp Makes Return Among Workers In Australia

In the past, writer's cramp was fairly common because most letters, books and business and legal documents were handwritten. The cramping was brought on by the repeated use of special groups of muscles laboring monotonously in the preparation of volumes of meticulous script, without rest or relaxation.

Seamstresses, barbers (scissors), milkers, and piano players also developed these cramps. Tyepwriters changed much of this and, until recently, writer's cramp has been on the wane.

BUT DOWN in Australia, the condition has developed among those whose jobs involve constant writing or keyboard telegraphy. Almost 14 per cent of male telegraphists in three large Australian cities were bothered on the job and half of them had similar symptoms when writing. Since the cramp involves impairment of a learned skill, the workers consider the condition to be an occupation cramp or craft palsy.

Incoordination of the arm ensues on attempting to write. Muscular cramping, weakness and stiffness, or pain follows. Many tell of tremor or jerking when using the involved arm. All of this makes writing difficult or nearly impossible.

The disability may worsen or remain the same unless the person learns to write with the other hand. The victims have no trouble using the arm for other purposes. Meanwhile, activities requiring fine skills of the upper extremities are not affected. The victims can play games and musical instruments and feed and dress themselves.

ALL OF THIS is highly suggestive of a neurotic illness because no abnormalities, including signs of weakness or nerve involvement, were found. Apparently when the same set of pulleys are used over and over again, the muscles rebel and refuse to cooperate. It is mind over matter and, more so, when the work is dull.

Writer's cramp is difficult to treat. Some physicians recommend changing the style of writing or shifting the way the pen or pencil is held. Enlarging the size of the letters may also help. One program advocates exercise to strengthen the hand. This is followed by teaching the person to write without manipulating the fingers via full arm strokes. But more recently, relaxation is advocated in conjunction with a program of using a pen with a wide soft felt point to draw simple shapes and progressing to adult script and a normal pen. Regardless of the method, psychotherapy is needed.

325 GALLSTONES

A reader writes: Could a person have 325 gallstones? Incidentally, who counts them after the operation?

REPLY

Yes, to your first question. These would be pebble-sized, of course. The auditor is the hospital pathologist who must examine and describe thoroughly all tissues removed by the surgeon.

VOICE LOSS

H. Writes: What would cause a person to suddenly lose his voice?

REPLY

Nervousness or a stroke. A more gradual loss follows infection, irritation, abuse of the voice, or a tumor on the vocal cords.

Marin Trio Cleared In Drug Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Charges have been dismissed against three Marin residents arrested in connection with a large seizure of cocaine but five other persons, including four who live in Marin, have been indicted on felony charges.

Due to enter pleas in U.S. District Court Dec. 29 are Thomas F. Steinberg, 23, and Frank J. Keicher, 21, both of Sausalito; Louis J. Katzberg, 25, of Mill Valley; Gregory J. McGuire, 26, of San Anselmo, and Stephen D. Moran, 21, of Palo Alto.

Dismissed because of lack of evidence were Katherine Steinberg, 19, and Maria Keicher, 21, and John R. Morris, 22, all of Sausalito.

Federal agents said they negotiated for the sale of five pounds of cocaine at a wholesale price of $80,000. The men were arrested early this month at the Hyatt House in Burlingame after being followed from a Sausalito residence.

Promotion For Sonoma Aide

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — C. Lawrence Andrew, deputy Sonoma County administrator, has been promoted to assistant county administrator.

The position has remained unfilled since March 1969 when David L. Nichols was promoted to administrator.

Andrew, who has been a deputy since 1969, has been on the administrator's staff since 1964. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Long Beach State College and master of arts degree from Golden Gate College.

Andrew will assume the new position on Jan. 1. The salary has not yet been set.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS
SAN RAFAEL SANITATION DISTRICT
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the San Rafael Sanitation District, San Rafael, California, will receive bids for the construction of Sewer Plant Expansion, Pump Station, Transmission and Collection Facilities in San Rafael, California. Each bid or proposal is to be in accordance with specifications and contract documents now on file with the District Administrator, City Hall, 1400 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, California, where they may be examined, and with Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins, 201 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Greenbrae, California. Copies of same may be obtained by General Contractors from Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins upon payment of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) which will be refunded upon return of the plans and specifications in satisfactory condition with ten (10) days of bid date.

Bidders are hereby further notified that pursuant to the Statutes of the State of California or local laws thereto applicable, it shall be mandatory upon the Contractor to whom the contract is awarded to pay not less than the general prevailing hourly wage rate, per diem wages and rates for legal holidays and overtime work in the locality in which the work is to be performed.

A schedule of the prevailing rates has been approved by the Board of Directors of the said Sanitation District, and is filed with the Secretary of said Board in the offices of the District Administrator, and said schedule is hereby referred to and by such reference incorporated herein and made a part hereof as fully as though set forth in length.

Each bid shall be made out on a form to be obtained at the office of said Engineer at the address hereinabove set forth; shall be accompanied by a certified, or cashier's check or bid bond for not less than ten percent (10%) of the amount bid, made payable to the order of the said San Rafael Sanitation District, shall be sealed and filed with the said District Administrator, at his office on or before 10 a.m., January 11, 1973, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The above mentioned check or bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder will enter into the contract if awarded to him, and will be declared forfeited if the successful bidder refuses to enter into said contract after being requested to do so by the said District Board.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a Faithful Performance Bond in the amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price and a Labor and Materials Bond in the amount of fifty percent (50%) of the contract price; said bonds to be secured from a surety company satisfactory to the District Board.

The project has been prepared as 3 units:

Bidders may bid on one or more of the units, it is not necessary that a bid be submitted for three units.

The grand total on each project will determine the low bidder.

Unit No. 1 - Marin Bay Wastewater Treatment & Reclamation Plant Enlargements
Unit No. 2 - Pump Station No. 4.
Unit No. 3 - Transmission and Collection Facilities.

The District Board may let the project as one contract for all 3 units; one contract for each unit; or such combination of units that is in the best interests of the District.

The District Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to waive any informality in a bid, or to award a contract on the basis of the proposal which serves the best interest of the Sanitation District.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of forty-five (45) days after the date set for the opening thereof.

Date bids will be received: January 11, 1972
Dated this 6th Day of December, 1972
Publication Dates: December 19, 1972, December 26, 1972.

Bus Cost Sharing Before Committee

The dispute between the County of Marin and Golden Gate Bridge District over a cost-sharing formula for local bus service will be before a district committee tomorrow.

The joint finance-auditing and transportation committee will meet at 9 a.m. in toll plaza offices. The district and county have been at odds for almost six months over how to share local bus costs, with their computations several hundred thousand dollars apart.

'Female Rat Pack' Trio Is Arrested

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Three teen-age girls, known as the "female rat pack," were held today on charges of robbery and assault.

Officers said the trio of 15 and 16 year olds were suspects in a dozen muggings in which elderly persons were the victims. They were arrested during an attempted purse snatching.

Share a friend with a friend.

Have the I-J delivered to the home of a special friend for less than a dime a copy. Isn't that a good example of imaginative gift-giving? It shows that you don't have to spend a bundle to let someone know you're thinking of them, not just on Christmas morning, but six days a week. They'll appreciate your gift each time they reach down on their doorstep and bring in this bright, well-written newspaper. It'll bring them the news of their neighborhood, of their town and of the whole world, edited with integrity and style.

The I-J will make a special welcome to a newcomer to Marin or to a serviceman or student far from home. Clip out the coupon below and send it in with your list of special friends. Share a friend with a friend this Christmas.

Bus Cost Sharing Before Committee

The dispute between the County of Marin and Golden Gate Bridge District over a cost-sharing formula for local bus service will be before a district committee tomorrow.

The joint finance-auditing and transportation committee will meet at 9 a.m. in toll plaza offices. The district and county have been at odds for almost six months over how to share local bus costs, with their computations several hundred thousand dollars apart.

'Female Rat Pack' Trio Is Arrested

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Three teen-age girls, known as the "female rat pack," were held today on charges of robbery and assault.

Officers said the trio of 15 and 16 year olds were suspects in a dozen muggings in which elderly persons were the victims. They were arrested during an attempted purse snatching.

RONALD WILLIAM KOPF
Achieves eagle rank

Kopf Due Eagle Rank Thursday

Ronald William Kopf, a senior at Redwood High School, will be awarded the rank of eagle scout in a court of honor at 8 p.m. Thursday at San Clemente school in Corte Madera.

Kopf, 17, is a scribe and assistant senior patrol leader in Troop 90. He has been in scouting four years. He has 21 merit badges and is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

In scouting he has six one-mile swimming awards and two 50-mile hiking awards.

His eagle project was to move 80 cubic yards of tanbark into two playgrounds at Granada Elementary School in Corte Madera.

His hobbies include mountaineering, backpacking and scuba diving. He is a certified scuba diver and is a member of the Sierra Club.

In school, he has been on cross country, wrestling and baseball at Redwood High School.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kopf of 159 Prince Royal Drive, Corte Madera.

Homes Needed For Children During Holidays

The Sonoma County Social Services Department is seeking homes for 19 children in time for the Christmas holidays.

Children range in age from 1 to 17, most of them teen-agers. Barbara McIver, foster home recruiter, said a special effort is being made to place the children this week so they need not spend the holidays in an institution.

She said 10 of the children must be placed in homes with other children while others may be placed in groups in homes without children. Persons interested in providing either temporary or long-term foster homes may contact Mrs. McIver at the social service department in Santa Rosa, she said.

Novato Planning Commission Hopeful Likes Industrial Parks

W. Stanley Nordstrom, a candidate for appointment to the Novato Planning Commission, advocates more industrial zoning near Gnoss Field and Hamilton Air Force Base.

"Hamilton Industrial Park is a great asset and should be expanded," he said the other day. The area south of Highway 37 and east of Highway 101 is suitable for light industry "such as Fairchild," Nordstrom said.

Nordstrom, manager of technical services, for the Multiwall Bag Division of Crown Zellerbach Corp., said he didn't want Novato to experience the fate of the San Francisco Peninsula.

"The first time I lived in California, on the peninsula, was in 1953, and it was a pretty area." Now, he said, "to me it's an abomination."

Nordstrom said he believes there should be some restriction on growth "but setting a hard and fast limit, I don't think that's quite the way to do it. We have to grow within our means to handle it."

He suggested that the city "go slow" on approval of more townhouses. "This is the only area in Marin that has had a lot, the first big group, and to me they have not proven themselves."

He said the proposed new Novato general plan "has some good points" but essentially is only a guideline "A plan is a plan until it becomes a fact," he said.

On open space, Nordstrom said: "I think a lot would have to be purchased," but people in Marin have been willing "to vote money for that and I don't think Novato people would be all that different."

Some of the area designated for open space in the proposed plan could be achieved if it were placed in agricultural preserves and owners given tax breaks, he said. Many land owners have been forced to develop because their taxes have gone up, Nordstrom said.

Nordstrom, a resident of Novato since 1966, is a member of the Domingo Canyon Homeowners Association. He and his wife, Mary Janice, live at 185 Montura Way. They have two daughters and a son.

Guilty Pleas To Receiving Stoler Goods

UKIAH (UPI) —George and Helen Wethern, owners of a ranch used as a Hell's Angel burying ground, pleaded guilty yesterday to charges of possessing stolen property and were placed on probation.

The couple was granted immunity earlier from narcotics charges in return for testifying against members of the outlaw motorcycle gang who allegedly buried three bodies on their ranch.

Wethern, a 260-pounder known as "Baby Huey," testified two weeks ago at a preliminary hearing in Richmond that he allowed the burials because of a "debt" he owed a gang member.

Four Angels are held and four others are sought on murder and accessory charges in the slaying of two Georgia men who were allegedly killed during a drug orgy in El Sobrante and later buried at Wethern's ranch.

The body of a young woman, still unidentified, was also excavated from the ranch on Oct. 30.

Correct Time Of Ferry Feeder Bus

The new ferry feeder bus service between San Rafael and Sausalito leaves Fourth and Hetherton streets at 6:35 a.m., not 6:40 as reported Friday on the basis of information provided by the Golden Gate Bridge District.

The time was changed after district directors approved the new weekday service. The bus leaves the Sausalito ferry terminal at 6:05 p.m., and makes freeway stops on both the morning and evening runs.

City Impounds Jetliner Over Unpaid Taxes

ATLANTA (UPI) —Officials of suburban College Park impounded a $3.7 million jetliner Monday because of Eastern Airlines' alleged failure to pay the city $55,000 in back taxes.

City marshal T. O. Smith pasted the attachment papers on the door of the DC9 Whisperjet which was undergoing engine repairs in a huge maintenance hangar at the Atlanta airport.

"They sure were surprised," said Smith of the Eastern officials.

Eastern issued a brief statement regretting its "honest differences of opinion" with College Park and promised to "pursue appropriate judicial remedies."

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again... Anacin.

Each year, doctors give up to 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend most than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin®.

The Golfing Routes Of Cerrudo, Leach

Ray Leach of Novato and Ron Cerrudo of Napa, two young men who make their livelihood by chasing little white balls all over large green fields, found that there is money to be made at out of the way places such as Tijuana and Morocco.

Leach, graduate of Brigham Young University who failed in a bid to qualify for a Professional Golfers Association playing card, won himself $1,600 for a fourth place finish in a pro golf tourney at Tijuana the other day. And then Sunday Cerrudo won himself a check for $13,000 and a gold dagger with 210 diamonds as winner of the International Grand Prix du Maroc, a little golfing affair put on by King Hassan.

That one tournament gave Cerrudo nearly half of what he had previously earned during the entire 1972 PGA tour, $27,348. Before his marriage and subsequent move to a condominium on the Silverado Country Club course in Napa, Cerrudo lived in San Rafael a short while. His parents still live here.

CERRUDO AND LEACH will both be trying to win some of the $25,000 purse in the Laguna Seca, Del Monte Hyatt Pro-Am Invitational (phew, I'm tired just saying the name) Dec. 27-30 on the Monterey Peninsula.

While Cerrudo has been playing on the PGA tour for six years, Leach will have to wait at least a year before he gets another chance to qualify to play with the big boys. But during that time he won't be sitting in an office or ringing door bells as an encyclopedia salesman. He'll be playing pro golf. It's called playing the satellite tour. And although it doesn't have the glamor of the big tour, there's a chance to make some good money and get pro experience at the same time.

RAY WILL BE COMPETING in the Western Golf Asociation's 21-week tour in Southern California, starting Jan. 8, and will also play in some of the Golf Professionals Association tournaments that spread throughout the state and spill into Nevada.

There are a half dozen of these satellite tournaments in the country, including a pair in Florida, one in Georgia and another in Texas.

"The purses for these tourneys will be from $25,000 to $50,000, with first place usually worth $5,000," said Leach. "I think my chances of winning are good." But he admits that of 130 or so golfers on the Western Golf Asociation tour, only 12 to 15 will make enough money, after paying all expenses, to call it a good living.

HE WAS INTRODUCED to the Golf Professionals Association, of which the Tijuana Open was part, by Jim Perron, pro at Fallbrook Country Club in San Diego County. Now the president of the GPA, Perron had been the head pro at Indian Valley Golf Club in Novato where Leach got his golfing start, in the early '50s.

Leach had a share of the second-round lead in the Tijuana tournament but slipped toward the end of the 54-hole test. "Coming down those last four or five holes I could really feel it," said Leach. "I realized I needed to be in this situation more."

Has Leach set any goals for himself for his first full year on the tour?

"MY FIRST GOAL would be to win a tournament, and then I would hope to make enough to cover the expenses."

Then he would try again to earn a PGA playing card to qualify for the big tour. Only 20 golfers, just one of every 25 who tried, made the grade last year at the PGA players tournament school. The odds are not very good.

Coach Fulcher Isn't Shy After Win Over Iowa '11'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)— Georgia Tech Coach Bill Fulcher, who has been walking a tightrope for two weeks, wasn't the least bit shy about the outcome of Monday night's Liberty Bowl.

"This has to go in the books as one of the great victories of Georgia Tech, perhaps of college football," he bubbled after his team's 31-30 upset of Iowa State before 50,021 and a national television audience.

"After all this ball club has gone through in the last few weeks," he added, "it is hard to find the right words to express just how I feel about the way it played tonight. Somehow I knew they would."

Fulcher never mentioned black quarterback Eddie McAshan, the senior star he booted off the team before Tech's final game of the season in a controversy over complimentary tickets.

"Didn't Jim Stevens do just great? Didn't he? He just got better as the game progressed," said Fulcher.

He referred to the junior substitute who stepped in for McAshan and tossed touchdown passes of 22, nine and three yards to Jim Robinson, Rob Healy and Kevin McNamara to win the game. Stevens also ran for a two-point conversion as he started only his second game for the Yellow Jackets.

Fulcher was hit with charges of racial bias by McAshan after he was unable to get extra tickets to the Georgia-Georgia Tech game. About 200 civil rights pickets marched outside the Liberty Bowl Stadium briefly at the beginning of Monday night's game

"It was just fantastic, fantastic," said Stevens in the steamy Tech dressing room. But he still seemed as calm as he seemed on his fourth-period pass to McNamara which gave Tech the victory with less than 12 minutes to play.

His antics barely overshadowed two touchdown passes by Iowa State quarterback GeorgeAmundson. Both went to end Ike Harris and the second was for five yards with less than two minutes in the game.

The short pass made the score 31-30 in favor of Tech. But Amundson rolled out for a two-point conversion pass attempt with only 1:36 to play and threw the ball out of the end zone under pressure from Tech's Tim Macy and Beau Bruce.

Pro Grid Front Offices In Christmas Housecleaning

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Football League's annual Christmas housecleaning began early this year as two head coaches were handed their walking papers Monday and at least five others wondered about their fate

Ed Khayat, a hero last season when he boosted the Philadelphia Eagles to victory in six of their last nine games after an 0-3 start under Jerry Williams, and Bob Hollway, a defensive whiz who never got his message across to the St. Louis Cardinals, were fired Monday.

The Eagles finished last in the National Conference this season with a 2-11-1 record while the Cardinals barely nosed them out for fourth in the NFC East with a 4-9-1 mark.

Left wondering about their future were Tommy Prothro of Los Angeles, Joe Schmidt of Detroit, J.D. Roberts of New Ojleans and Bill Peterson of Houston. Phil Bengtson of New England is an interim coach and will be replaced in all probability.

"Our loyal fans deserve to be in the game and deserve a winning team,' said Eagles' owner Leonard Tose in announcing the dismissal of Khayat and General Manager Pete Retzlaff. "There was no way this was a 2-11-1 team on merit."

Khayat said he was "sorry we weren't able to give the people of this area a winning football team. I believe they will have a winning football team in the near future."

Hollway admitted he was, "a little angry and a little disappointed" when notified of his dismissal. "I expected to fulfill the last year of my three-year contract," said the man who put together the "Purple People Eaters" at Minnesota before taking over for Charlie Winner at St. Louis. "A team has to have patience with a coach but apparently this team doesn't feel that way. I think I'm a winner as a football coach and I think I can go someplace else and help somebody else win."

Two other coaches are set for next season but the New York Jets' Weeb Ewbank, the only man ever to win titles in both the National and American Football Leagues, said the 1973 season will be his last after 44 years of coaching. Ewbank, now 65, will fulfill the second year of a two-year contract and might remain as general manager after next season. He currently holds both titles.

Alex Webster, who turned the New York Giants into one of the surprise teams of 1972, also had his contract renewed for another season. Webster took a club apparently going nowhere and directed it to an 8-6 season.

The annual disenchantment cries began to rise Monday following the end of the season. Star defensive end Elvin Bethea of the Houston Oilers threatened to quit if he was not traded and Pat Holmes, the Oilers' other end, also said he is contemplating retirement. Defensive tackle Mike Tilleman played out his option with Houston and probably will be traded.

Defensive end Gerry Philbin led a host of New York Jets players who said they were disenchanted with Ewbank, among them linebacker Larry Grantham, guard Dave Herman, quarterbacks Bob Davis and Al Woodall and safety Gus Hollomon and tight end Dave Parks says he's had it in New Orleans and has asked to be traded to a contender

AFTER TOURNEY WIN

A Big Year Is Seen By Golfer Cerrudo

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Ron Cerrudo thinks he's ready for a big year on the pro golf circuit in 1973 — and he's got a $13,000 check and a dagger with 210 diamonds to prove it.

The big-hitting Cerrudo, who never has quite reached predicted stardom, won $27,000 on the pro tour in 1972.

But he went across the Atlantic last week and captured the $60,000 International Grand Prix du Maroc, a tourney run by King Hassan which ended Sunday afternoon in Rabbat.

The former San Rafael resident fired 72 holes over a 7,500-yard golf course in three-under-par 289, then parred an extra hole to break a tie with fellow Californian Al Geiberger, who bogied

The dagger was presented by the king "as a special present."

The 27-year-old Cerrudo of Napa says a few visits to a psychiatrist and a slight change in the way he grips his club have convinced him he's ready to go for some of the big money on the pro trail.

But he says whatever happens, he'll be back to defend his title in Morocco.

"Everything was fantastic there," he says.

TEXAS TEAM SELECTS FRY

NTSU athletic director Fred McCain today acknowledged Fry's hiring and called the man who led SMU to a 7-4 mark this past season "extremely capable I think he has the ability to give us some excitement. He's certainly knowledgeable."

Fry, who led the Mustangs to a second place tie in the Southwest Conference, was in Denton Sunday and again Monday discussing the possibility of a job with NTSU officials.

"I think its a wonderful opportunity," Fry said. "It's a great challenge. I am impressed with the university officials. I am enthusiastic about the people. They want to put North Texas on top.'

Oakland Avoided Injuries

ALAMEDA (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders did about everything they wanted to in their 28-21 victory over the Chicago Bears

For one thing, nobody got hurt, which means that they'll go into Saturday's playoff battle at Pittsburgh in good physical shape.

For another thing, they got five passes to Fred Biletnikoff, giing him 58 catches for the year and the American Football League title.

And big Marv Hubbard moved for 41 yards, giving him 1,100 for the season and breaking Clem Daniels' old team record by one.

"Clem didn't work behind the kind of offensive line I have now," said Hubbard. "It's the best in football. I feel a little humble about Clem's record. Hubbard, who runs into people instead of around them, plays with such abandon that he was voted the William Gorman Award by his teammates as best exemplifying the pride and spirit of the team.

"We play Pittsburgh in the opening round Saturday and it's a short week for practice. Also we lose one day in travel," he noted.

The club resumed workouts today and will leave Thursday for Pittsburgh. They'll work out Friday at Three Rivers Stadium, site of the battle.

The Raiders traditionally don't like cold weather or artificial turf and the artificial turf at Three Rivers' Stadium lay frost-encrusted in 20 degree temperature Monday.

Oakland lost its season opener at Pittsburgh when a Daryle Lamonica-led comeback failed and the Steelers held on for the 34-28 win.

Ski Trip Slated To Squaw Valley

The Rohnert Park Recreation Department will offer a family ski trip to Squaw Valley Feb. 23-25.

The trip includes roundtrip bus transportation, two nights lodging at the Olympic Village Hotel, three meals and price reductions on ski lift tickets and equipment rental.

Cost based on triple occupancy, is $31.25 per person and on double occupancy is $33.25. Reservations with a $10 deposit must be made by Jan. 5 with recreation director James Pekkain. A minimum of 33 persons will be necessary to make the trip possible.

Celtics, Warriors, Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Golden State Warriors host pro basketball's hottest team tonight, which does not mean that the Los Angeles Lakers are coming to town.

The Boston Celtics bring a 263 record into the Oakland Coliseum Arena despite the fact that they have no starter over 6-9 and no scorer in the top 10.

But they have a 6-5 superstar who can go either at forward or guard in the person of John Havlicek and he is surrounded by a bunch of young players who seem to fit well together.

There is third year man Dave Cowens at center while guards Jo Jo White and Don Chaney are in their fourth and fifth year respectively.

The Warriors hope to have big forward Clyde Lee back in the lineup. He has been out with an arch injury.

Although Golden State was 32 on the latest road swing, Lee's absence was never felt more than in Sunday's 105-99 loss to Baltimore, which the Bullets won 105-99. Big Elvin Hayes rolled for 33 points and blocked 11 shots but the Warriors figure Lee could have slowed him down a bit.

Boston also has a big, tough forward in the person of newlyacquired Paul Silas. The Warriors hope Lee will be ready to battle him for the rebounds tonight.

The Celts contest opens a seven-game home stand for the Warriors, who hold a 19-11 record.

"They blew us off the court in Boston," Warriors center Nate Thurmond said Monday.

Niner QB Issue Is Undecided

Combined AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO — Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers and Tom Landry of Dallas are each positive who will start at quarterback in Saturday's playoff battle—for the opposition.

Nolan says "I name my starting lineup Thursday" when asked whether he will go with Steve Spurrier, the cool benchwarmer who took the team to a 5-3-1 mark after John Brodie wau hurt—or Brodie, who replaced the faltering Spurrier last Saturday and rallied the 49ers to a heartstopping 20-17 win over Minnesota.

But Nolan says that Landry will start the scrambling Roger Staubach ahead of the classic dropback thrower Craig Morton.

Nolan recalled in the 31-10 49er win over Dallas on Thanksgiving, his Prospector defensive line got to Morton nine times. "It's tougher to sack a scrambler like Staubach," he says.

Landry says "I haven't decided yet whether Staubach is ready to start in Morton's spot I'm going to wait until later in the week."

But he adds "there's no question in my mind that Nolan will start John Brodie. He has little choice after what Brodie did Saturday against Minnesota."

Although Nolan won't name a Saturday starter, he says the plays will be called from the bench.

"Brodie was permitted to call his own plays against Minnesota only because we were playing catch-up football," said Nolan. "We intend to keep Dallas guessing by calling plays from the bench. It worked the last time out. There's no reason to change."

Nolan also praised offensive guard Randy Beisler for the job he did on Minnesota's Alan Page. "That was one of the reasons our pass protection held up so well," he said.

Both Nolan and Brodie complained that Vic Washington did not receive enough credit for his run after taking a short pass from Brodie late in the contest. It appeared he would be trapped on the 20, but broke a pair of tackles and got down to the two, from where they scored three plays later on a pass to Dick Witcher

Nolan said rookie Windlan Hall will take over Saturday at strong safety for Mel Phillips, who broke his shoulder against the Vikings.

"He's small, but he's tough and likes contact," said Nolan. "Windlan did a good job as Phillips' replacement Saturday. If he should have any problems,

Pro Grid Front Offices In Christmas Housecleaning

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Football League's annual Christmas housecleaning began early this year as two head coaches were handed their walking papers Monday and at least five others wondered about their fate

Ed Khayat, a hero last season when he boosted the Philadelphia Eagles to victory in six of their last nine games after an 0-3 start under Jerry Williams, and Bob Hollway, a defensive whiz who never got his message across to the St. Louis Cardinals, were fired Monday.

The Eagles finished last in the National Conference this season with a 2-11-1 record while the Cardinals barely nosed them out for fourth in the NFC East with a 4-9-1 mark.

Left wondering about their future were Tommy Prothro of Los Angeles, Joe Schmidt of Detroit, J.D. Roberts of New Ojleans and Bill Peterson of Houston. Phil Bengtson of New England is an interim coach and will be replaced in all probability.

The Boston Celtics bring a 263 record into the Oakland Coliseum Arena despite the fact that they have no starter over 6-9 and no scorer in the top 10.

But they have a 6-5 superstar who can go either at forward or guard in the person of John Havlicek and he is surrounded by a bunch of young players who seem to fit well together.

There is third year man Dave Cowens at center while guards Jo Jo White and Don Chaney are in their fourth and fifth year respectively.

The Warriors hope to have big forward Clyde Lee back in the lineup. He has been out with an arch injury.

Although Golden State was 32 on the latest road swing, Lee's absence was never felt more than in Sunday's 105-99 loss to Baltimore, which the Bullets won 105-99. Big Elvin Hayes rolled for 33 points and blocked 11 shots but the Warriors figure Lee could have slowed him down a bit.

Boston also has a big, tough forward in the person of newlyacquired Paul Silas. The Warriors hope Lee will be ready to battle him for the rebounds tonight.

"They blew us off the court in Boston," Warriors center Nate Thurmond said Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO — Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers and Tom Landry of Dallas are each positive who will start at quarterback in Saturday's playoff battle—for the opposition.

Nolan says "I name my starting lineup Thursday" when asked whether he will go with Steve Spurrier, the cool benchwarmer who took the team to a 5-3-1 mark after John Brodie wau hurt—or Brodie, who replaced the faltering Spurrier last Saturday and rallied the 49ers to a heartstopping 20-17 win over Minnesota.

But Nolan says that Landry will start the scrambling Roger Staubach ahead of the classic dropback thrower Craig Morton.

Nolan recalled in the 31-10 49er win over Dallas on Thanksgiving, his Prospector defensive line got to Morton nine times. "It's tougher to sack a scrambler like Staubach," he says.

Landry says "I haven't decided yet whether Staubach is ready to start in Morton's spot I'm going to wait until later in the week."

But he adds "there's no question in my mind that Nolan will start John Brodie. He has little choice after what Brodie did Saturday against Minnesota."

Although Nolan won't name a Saturday starter, he says the plays will be called from the bench.

"Brodie was permitted to call his own plays against Minnesota only because we were playing catch-up football," said Nolan. "We intend to keep Dallas guessing by calling plays from the bench. It worked the last time out. There's no reason to change."

Nolan also praised offensive guard Randy Beisler for the job he did on Minnesota's Alan Page. "That was one of the reasons our pass protection held up so well," he said.

Both Nolan and Brodie complained that Vic Washington did not receive enough credit for his run after taking a short pass from Brodie late in the contest. It appeared he would be trapped on the 20, but broke a pair of tackles and got down to the two, from where they scored three plays later on a pass to Dick Witcher

Nolan said rookie Windlan Hall will take over Saturday at strong safety for Mel Phillips, who broke his shoulder against the Vikings.

"He's small, but he's tough and likes contact," said Nolan. "Windlan did a good job as Phillips' replacement Saturday. If he should have any problems,

A Fight Against Pros' Madness

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Shrine East-West Game, one of college football's oldest talent showcases, is fighting pro football madness here again.

PEOPLE KNOW

"But I'm not really too worried. We'll make out. There aretoo many people who know how important this game is," he added in an interview Monday.

The San Francisco 49ers and neighboring Oakland Riaders are both in the National Football League playoffs, opening this weekend. Playoff games have been held here three straight years.

49ERS

If the 49ers beat Dallas Saturday, the National Conference title game could be at Candlestick Park Dec. 31, the day after the Shriners' game and pageant there. The NFL has already asked permission for its teams to practice at Candlestick the morning of Dec. 30.

The 49ers' and Raiders' season ticket holders are potential East-West game customers. The postseason event that was once an automatic sellout is no longer that, and it has lost its major network television contract to boot.

Luckily, though, the number of East-West Game supporters grows every year — with the selection of the 56 college stars who play in it.

FIND OUT

"A lot of the boys don't have any idea what the game's about when they arrive. But they find out quickly," said Engle, who selects the East players each year.

The players, arriving here today, will visit the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children Wednesday morning.

The players in this year's game include All-Americans Calvin Jones of Washington, Otis Armstrong of Purdue and Brad Van Pelt of Michigan State. Many others made second and third-team All-American.

The East-West Game's prestige among college coaches has not waned.

Engle pulled a letter out of his pocket and said, "Don't tell on him."

The coach, on the committee of another college all-star game, wrote Engle this fall that the top players from his team would accept the invitation to play in the East-West Game.

"I did the same thing when I was at Penn State," Engle said. "I was coaching in another game, but I told my best player, Pete Liske, to go to the East-West Game.

"I knew that 20 years later he'd thank me for it."

Wooden's Return Is Predicted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA basketball coach John Wooden will return but even athletic director J.D. Morgan doesn't know when.

"It's a day-to-day situation," Morgan said Monday. "He'll be back with his team when his doctor says he can go back."

The 62-year-old Wooden, in his 25th season at UCLA, was released from St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., Sunday where he had been a week with a mild heart condition.

"He's well now I think," Morgan added, "but he underwent a series of tests at the hospital and that sapped his strength."

Speaking to the weekly meeting of the Southern California Basketball Writers, the athletic director said he could not amplify on Wooden's ailment.

"I just know what the doctor told us," he said. "I can't give you any technical information because you know what I know."

Assistant coaches Gary Cunningham and Frank Arnold, who guided UCLA to a 98-67 victory over UC Santa Barbara Saturday night, talked to their head coach at Wooden's home Monday, according to Morgan.

"John watched the delayed replay of the game on television and I guess he just wanted to let them (Cunningham and Arnold) know what he thought," Morgan said.

He added, "We're going to have to restrict John from interviews until he's stronger."

Firing Of Coach Khayat

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eddie Khayat had put in a long day, the kind which would've been extremely painful for most men.

Nobody likes being fired.

That's what happened to Eddie Khayat yesterday after a bit less than 15 months as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles. He had another year to run on a two-year contract, but Eagles' owner Leonard Tose told him he needn't bother. Pete Retzlaff, the Eagles' general manager who, like Khayat, once played for Philadelphia, was told the same thing.

Eddie Khayat got the news from Leonard Tose himself about a quarter to 10 yesterday morning.

Now more than six hours later, after talking to the media people and answering all the phone calls, Eddie Khayat was about to leave the Eagles' office in Philadelphia and drive back to his Cherry Hill, N.J. home.

"Rough day, wasn't it, Eddie?" someone said to the tall, straight 37-year-old Moss Point, Miss., native.

Eddie Khayat shook his head.

"I never had a bad day in my life," he said.

"Another thing is that you have to know my background. I've been in the NFL all my adult life, 16 years. I've seen it all. As a player I was waived, injured, on a last-place club, a championship club and a coupla runner-up clubs. This isn't the first time I've been cut. I was cut before I even played college football. That's right, cut by Ole Miss and Mississippi State before I played with Tulane.

"I didn't go straight to Tulane. I went to Millsaps College and Perkinson Junior College first. They don't even call it Perkinson anymore. It's since been renamed Gulf Coast Junior College. And when I got out of Tulane, I wasn't drafted by the Washington Redskins. I went to them as a free agent. So I've been around a little."

Enough to know that in any professional sport, a man can be a hero Monday and a bum on Tuesday.

In a way, that's what happened to Khayat.

Last year he was a hero.

He took over the Eagles from Jerry Williams after Philadelphia had been blown out of the ballpark in its first three ball games and finished with a strong 6-2-1 record over the last nine games.

Leonard Tose, the owner, became a victim of his own enthusiasm.

Visions of a possible playoff berth began dancing in front of him. Maybe even a trip to the Super Bowl. Why not?

They finished with a sorry 2-11-1 log that entitled them to the cellar in the NFC's East Division on merit.

There were no tears when Khayat was informed his services were no longer required Monday.

He was having a post-season meeting with his players when the call came saying Tose wished to see him. It says something for Kmayat's character that even after he was told he was finished, he went back to his players, concluded the meeting and then said goodbye to them, as did Retzlaff.

Upstairs in the Eagles office later, one by one the majority of the Philadelphia players came by to say a few private words to Ed Khayat, shake his hand, wish him well. You could see how his players felt about him. And him about them.

"The association a coach has with his players is something, well, you simply can not know unless you happen to be the coach or one of the players," said Khayat. "I can't tell you how close I was to these boys. I wouldn't say I'm very emotional, but I'd also have to say that was one thing, the relationship, that has to touch a man. You go through a lot together, a coach and his players. You all bleed and sweat and fight for the same thing."

Eddie Khayat ran into a lot of criticism when he first took over the Eagles and decreed they had to wear their hair and sideburns a certain length. He became a symbol of The Establishment and the longhairs all snickered at him.

The fact is with Eddie Khayat's "rule" about the length of hair the Eagles won last year; this year they didn't. What does it all prove? Nothing, really.

Basketball Teams Come Back To Earth

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Coast basketball teams have come back to earth with a thud after acting as though they were in orbit over the weekend.

Santa Clara, for instance, was the underdog of four teams at the Utah Classic and won it. But Monday Santa Claraflopped at Creighton 86-73.

Three other Coast teams also tasted defeat far from home.

Oklahoma City took care of California 95-84 despite 22 by the Bears' Rickie Hawthorne while Denver nipped Stanford 77-74 although big Rich Kelley tallied 24 for the Cards. San Francisco State fell 89-64 at Northern Illinois.

Un action on the Coast, Seattle ran its record to 4-1 with an 84-65 win over Portland with Rod Derline getting 28 for the victors.

It was Lewis and Clark 71 and Simon Fraser 70 and Montana State 98 Hayward State 72.

Meanwhile, latest UPI ratings showed UCLA still the unanimous No. 1 pick and Long Beach State in sixth. USF clings to 19th place.

Long Beach State goes on display in the East tonight at the Nassau Classic. Stanford Stanfordat Colorado State; Oregon at tough Providence; and San Jose State clal on Purdue. San Diego State is at DePaul; San Francisco State at Minnesota and Pepperdine at John Brown.

WHA Raiders' Ward Is Leading Scorer

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Ron Ward spent the week helping out.

He picked up a pair of goals, but his nine assists gave him an 11-point week and further cemented his hold on the World Hockey Association scoring lead. Ward now has 28 goals and 30 assists for 58 points in 33 games with the New York Raiders.

Chris Bordeleau of Winnipeg remains in second place with 26 goals and 21 assists for 47 points. Terry Caffery of New England moved from a tie for seventh to sole possession of third place, with two goals and seven assists for a nine-point week. He has 16 goals and 29 assists for 45 points.

The victory put Annemarie ahead in the world standings with 50 points, 10 more than Miss Rouvier, who fell as she crossed the finish line and pulled a tendon in her left ankle. Miss Proell was timed at 1:29.58 minutes.

MADONNA DI CAMPIGLIO, Italy — David Zwilling of Austria carved his way to victory in the World Cup giant slalom today, coming from third place after the first leg to move into the lead of the World Cup competition.

Jim Hunter of Canada, 4-10ths of a second in front after the first leg, fell within sight of the finish line as Adolf Roesti of Switzerland took second place behind Zwilling's combined time of three minutes, 42.99 seconds.

Baseball

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers announced Monday that second baseman Jim Lefebvre, 29, who was recently released by the club, has signed a three-year contract with the Lotte Orions baseball team of Tokyo, Japan.

Lefebvre, an eight-year Dodger veteran who was the National League Rookie of the Year in 1965, will reportedly become the highest paid American athlete in the history of Japanese baseball, Dodger officials said. Specific terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Hockey

CHICAGO — Owners of the new Kansas City franchise in the National Hockey League have until Jan. 25 to come up with plans for a suitable arena or lose their franchise.

The NHL's Finance Committee received plans Monday from the Kansas City group for possible construction of an arena at Union Station in downtown Kansas City. But league officials said some "details and transactions" remained incomplete.

Boxing

TACOMA, Wash. — Sugar Ray Seales, who won the Olympic gold medal last summer in the light-welter weight division, will make his professional boxing debut in Tacoma Jan. 11 against Gonzales Rodriquez, a 141-pounder from Tiajuana, Mexico, matchmaker George Yelton said Monday.

The Cowboys have lost linebacker Chuck Howley and tackle Bob Lily, the mainstay of Dallas' "Doomsday" defense, has been hampered by injuries all season.

Niners' defensive tackle Earl Edwards also has been limping in practice due to an ankle injury, but he said "it's feeling much better" and he probably will start Saturday.

Firing Of Coach Khayat

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eddie Khayat had put in a long day, the kind which would've been extremely painful for most men.

Nobody likes being fired.

That's what happened to Eddie Khayat yesterday after a bit less than 15 months as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles. He had another year to run on a two-year contract, but Eagles' owner Leonard Tose told him he needn't bother. Pete Retzlaff, the Eagles' general manager who, like Khayat, once played for Philadelphia, was told the same thing.

Eddie Khayat got the news from Leonard Tose himself about a quarter to 10 yesterday morning.

Now more than six hours later, after talking to the media people and answering all the phone calls, Eddie Khayat was about to leave the Eagles' office in Philadelphia and drive back to his Cherry Hill, N.J. home.

"Rough day, wasn't it, Eddie?" someone said to the tall, straight 37-year-old Moss Point, Miss., native.

Eddie Khayat shook his head.

"I never had a bad day in my life," he said.

"Another thing is that you have to know my background. I've been in the NFL all my adult life, 16 years. I've seen it all. As a player I was waived, injured, on a last-place club, a championship club and a coupla runner-up clubs. This isn't the first time I've been cut. I was cut before I even played college football. That's right, cut by Ole Miss and Mississippi State before I played with Tulane.

"I didn't go straight to Tulane. I went to Millsaps College and Perkinson Junior College first. They don't even call it Perkinson anymore. It's since been renamed Gulf Coast Junior College. And when I got out of Tulane, I wasn't drafted by the Washington Redskins. I went to them as a free agent. So I've been around a little."

Enough to know that in any professional sport, a man can be a hero Monday and a bum on Tuesday.

In a way, that's what happened to Khayat.

Last year he was a hero.

He took over the Eagles from Jerry Williams after Philadelphia had been blown out of the ballpark in its first three ball games and finished with a strong 6-2-1 record over the last nine games.

Leonard Tose, the owner, became a victim of his own enthusiasm.

They finished with a sorry 2-11-1 log that entitled them to the cellar in the NFC's East Division on merit.

There were no tears when Khayat was informed his services were no longer required Monday.

He was having a post-season meeting with his players when the call came saying Tose wished to see him. It says something for Kmayat's character that even after he was told he was finished, he went back to his players, concluded the meeting and then said goodbye to them, as did Retzlaff.

Upstairs in the Eagles office later, one by one the majority of the Philadelphia players came by to say a few private words to Ed Khayat, shake his hand, wish him well. You could see how his players felt about him. And him about them.

"The association a coach has with his players is something, well, you simply can not know unless you happen to be the coach or one of the players," said Khayat. "I can't tell you how close I was to these boys. I wouldn't say I'm very emotional, but I'd also have to say that was one thing, the relationship, that has to touch a man. You go through a lot together, a coach and his players. You all bleed and sweat and fight for the same thing."

Eddie Khayat ran into a lot of criticism when he first took over the Eagles and decreed they had to wear their hair and sideburns a certain length. He became a symbol of The Establishment and the longhairs all snickered at him.

The fact is with Eddie Khayat's "rule" about the length of hair the Eagles won last year; this year they didn't. What does it all prove? Nothing, really.

COAST ROUNDUP

Basketball Teams Come Back To Earth

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Coast basketball teams have come back to earth with a thud after acting as though they were in orbit over the weekend.

Santa Clara, for instance, was the underdog of four teams at the Utah Classic and won it. But Monday Santa Claraflopped at Creighton 86-73.

Three other Coast teams also tasted defeat far from home.

Oklahoma City took care of California 95-84 despite 22 by the Bears' Rickie Hawthorne while Denver nipped Stanford 77-74 although big Rich Kelley tallied 24 for the Cards. San Francisco State fell 89-64 at Northern Illinois.

Un action on the Coast, Seattle ran its record to 4-1 with an 84-65 win over Portland with Rod Derline getting 28 for the victors.

It was Lewis and Clark 71 and Simon Fraser 70 and Montana State 98 Hayward State 72.

Meanwhile, latest UPI ratings showed UCLA still the unanimous No. 1 pick and Long Beach State in sixth. USF clings to 19th place.

Long Beach State goes on display in the East tonight at the Nassau Classic. Stanford Stanfordat Colorado State; Oregon at tough Providence; and San Jose State clal on Purdue. San Diego State is at DePaul; San Francisco State at Minnesota and Pepperdine at John Brown.

WHA Raiders' Ward Is Leading Scorer

He picked up a pair of goals, but his nine assists gave him an 11-point week and further cemented his hold on the World Hockey Association scoring lead. Ward now has 28 goals and 30 assists for 58 points in 33 games with the New York Raiders.

Chris Bordeleau of Winnipeg remains in second place with 26 goals and 21 assists for 47 points. Terry Caffery of New England moved from a tie for seventh to sole possession of third place, with two goals and seven assists for a nine-point week. He has 16 goals and 29 assists for 45 points.

Banquet Time For Marin Rod-Gunners

By AL GIDDINGS

The Marin Rod and Gun Club is beginning to put together its annual stag banquet for Saturday, Jan. 27. The get acquainted "Good Time Hour" starts at 6 p.m. at the clubhouse at Point San Quentin. Dinner will be served at 7:30, and during the evening entertainment will be presented. You better get your reservations as soon as possible. This event is always a sellout! Write P.O. Box 900, San Rafael, 94902.

THINGS HAVE been generally slow throughout Marin County with the extremely cold weather, rains and wind. Bill Boyle of the Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge had one sale of bait for each of three straight days this past week. But with the weather breaking, fishing for stripers and sturgeon should really pick up.

We've had enough heavy rains to wash out the delta, putting the bait for these fish right in San Pablo. The fresh water should keep the bullheads, crabs and sharks generally out of the bay. This gives your baits time to be found by the stripers and sturgeon as the fresh water doesn't bother them at all. I know many of you would like to catch a sturgeon. Ghost shrimp sell for about $3 per dozen; they are well worth the price.

But don't under estimate the bay shrimp which are sold live and fresh. They are also a top bait. But, you should use a 4/0 hook and load the hook with from 4 to 6 of these little morsels. Big baits catch big fish. Even an anchovy is a good possibility, but use the whole fish. Joe Mello, the Santa Venetia fish champ, says he had taken a couple using salmon roe. Sturgeon feed heavily on herring roe, so I'd bet salmon roe would be a hot bait.

KEITH FRASER called to report he was out Sunday in the rain fishing outside of the Marin Islands in the outgoing tide with Tom Miller. They saw two boats, each with two men aboard land two sturgeon. Estimated weights were 60 and 110 pounds. They also saw three jump, but couldn't get a hookup. You'd better get out there quick!

THE PAIR OF predacious poachers that found easy pickin's purloining prime salmon from the Department of Fish and Game's Station on the Noyo River has been broken up.

The DFG says one of two river otters that had developed a penchant for pirating fish from the state's salmon trapping and egg collecting facility was trapped last week as she attempted to pursue her proclivity for procuring provisions from the fish pens.

Problems arose at the station several weeks ago when a pair of predacious river otters found out how to sneak into the tanks where the fish are held for artificial spawning and pick off a piscatorial treat for their dinners.

THE NOYO RIVER station is the State's sole source for silver salmon eggs which are the basis for the DFG's extensive silver salmon stocking program. Fisheries biologists understandably took a dim view of the otters' midnight forays at the station and they called on wildlife experts in the Department to help them with their problem.

Beaver traps were set up near the underwater entrance to the holding tanks and last week one of the otters was snared, alive and unhurt. The female otter was taken to a remote area along the Big River and released. There she probably will have to work a little harder for her dinner, but she won't be dining at the expense of the DFG's silver salmon program.

NBA Kings' Win Aided By Green

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Veteran Johnny Green was pulled from the Kansas City-Omaha bench in the third quarter Monday night to neutralize Portland scoring ace Sidney Wicks. Green ignited the Kings to a 113-95 win over the Trail Blazers in the night's only National Basketball Association game, played at Kansas City.

Wicks, who finished with 23 points, had been mainly responsible for the Blazers' 51-49 halftime lead.

Green entered the game with 6:31 left in the third period, when the Kings had a one-point edge, 65-64. He scored seven points in the remainder of the quarter and held Wicks in check.

KC-Omaha's Nate Williams shone in the fourth when he scored 13 points.

NBA high-scorer Nate Archibald hit 30 points and dealt off 15 assists before going out with four minutes remaining.

Hot Stars Rip Dallas In ABA Play

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Shooting nearly 80 per cent in the first period, the Utah Stars built up an insurmountable margin and took their eighth straight victory with a 146-126 win over the Dallas Chaparrals Monday night.

Utah's Willie Wise led the scoring with 32 points as the Stars rolled to a 44-26 first period lead and spread to 75-56 at intermission.

At one point during the first quarter, Utah led 33-7 before Dallas came to life.

The Chaps' James Silas scored 31 points in a losing effort to match Wise's output. He was followed by Joe Hamilton's 23 counters.

The Stars, following their hot shooting first quarter, evened out to 63 per cent shooting for the first half and 60.4 overall, while Dallas finished the night with 48 per cent.

CAGE PROSPECTS

Redwood Always Title Contender

By LEW CODDINGTON

(First in a series on Marin County Athletic League varsity basketball prospects.)

For the first time within memory, Redwood High School will not have the most feared basketball team in the Marin County Athletic League.

But nobody ever went broke betting on the Giants, and the league's coaches anticipate that Redwood once again will have a title contender by the time the MCAL season begins Jan. 5.

Certainly, the names on the roster have a ring of greatness about them — Boro, Hennessy, Trobbe. The trouble is that the first names don't match up — Steve, Neil, Steve. And there lies the crux of the Giants' problem, for the names were made famous by the older brothers of the little-used players now on Redwood's roster.

"We're very inexperienced," warned coach Dick Hart. "We're not as deep, not as big, not as good at shooting," as last year's team, which went 24-3 overall and finished second in the MCAL at 11-3 after winning three straight titles and 45 straight league games.

"We make up for the lack of experience with outstanding hustle, however," said Hart. "We're kind of a surprise team."

The Giants are missing all-league center Steve McGee, all-league forward Tim Hennessy and honorable mention guard San Farb from last year's powerhouse.

Two stars return. Mike Connor, a 6-foot-2 wing man in the one-guard offense, plays the game with intelligence and consistency and has been honorable mention all-league two years in a row. Darrell Elder, 6-6 junior center, can be an intimidating force in the middle.

"For my money, Connor is the best all-round athlete in Redwood's history," said Hart.

Katsumi Johnson, a senior guard who didn't play last year, will run the offense after shaking off the effects of a hand injury which kept him out of the lineup the past two weeks.

Beyond Connor, Elder and Johnson come the mystery players who, if they develop, could thrust the Giants toward the title.

Steve Boro, a 6-3 senior forward up from the junior varsity, is the younger brother of former Redwood star John. Neil Hennessy, a 6-2 forward, is Tim's younger brother. Steve Trobbe, a 6-5 sophomore, is the younger brother of Scott. Dave Payne, a 6-2 forward, and Mark Kilmer, a sophomore guard, are other young Giants bidding for key roles.

Berra Looks to Football Field

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Even before the World Series began New York Mets manager Yogi Berra was looking forward to seeing some football games.

His son Timmy plays flanker back for the University of Massachusetts eleven. His youngest of three sons, Dale, is quarterback for Montclair High School. Yogi's oldest son, Larry, 22, says his baseball career as a Mets' farm team catcher is over. He recently underwent a second operation on a knee he reinjured while playing for the Marion, Va., Mets in the Appalachian League.

Redwood, Vacaville Cagers Play

Redwood High School will open the Yuba City Invitational Basketball Tournament Thursday at 4 p.m., against Vacaville High. The Giants will be defending the championship they have won the last two years.

In five years of Yuba competition, Redwood finished first (twice), second, third and fourth.

Redwood beat Yuba City in the finals last year, but coach Dick Hart says he knows very little about the other teams who will be contending for the title. Liberty of Brentwood and Livermore High in addition to Redwood and the host team should be the tourney's strong teams, according to Hart.

Friday, the Giants will either play Mira Loma of Sacramento, or Livermore in semi-final action.

Santa Clara's Stewart Picked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The Northern California basketball writers have named Santa Clara Center Mike Stewart the area's Player of the Week for leading the Broncs past Providence in the finals of the Utah Classic.

Stewart scored 57 points and grabbed 20 rebounds as the Broncs took a pair of upset wins and Coach Carroll Williams admitted he was happy that the pivot man was named the player of the tourney.

University of San Francisco finally tasted defeat when host Kansas edged the Dons 60-58 in the finals of the Jayhawk Classic. Coach Bob Gaillard told the writers Monday that he thought the tip-in which beat his team was a questionable call, sort of "a semi-dunk."

Iowa Coach Tabbed

AMES, Iowa (UPI)—Harold Nichols, who guided Iowa State University to the National Collegiate Athletic Association wrestling title, was named 1972 wrestling coach of the year Monday.

HAYWARD BOXER

Foreman A Year Behind Plans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm about a year behind schedule in fighting for the heavyweight championship," says a confident George Foreman. "The chance came later than I expected."

Battling in Jamaica on Jan. 22, Foreman talked better than he boxed in the Los Angeles visit.

His jab was sharp against a sparring mate, but he showed a slowness apparently from inactivity. Manager Dick Saddler said Foreman had been working only two days prior to the Southern California visit.

Asked if he thought the negotiations for a possible rematch between Frazier and Muhammed Ali had hurt his own chances for a title fight, Foreman replied:

"Nothing can hurt me. I'll set it all straight once I have Joe Frazier in the ring. Anybody else talking then will be just a contender like me, or like I was."

Foreman carries a 37-0 record including 34 knockouts. Both he and his manager, Dick Saddler, were asked if some of those were "stiffs."

Saddler replied, "Well, George knocked them stiff."

The challenger gets $340,000 guaranteed for this try at tye championship while Frazier gets more than double that amount.

As the challenger sat in his dressing room, he had a top advisor wrapping his hands — Archie Moore, the venerable former light heavyweight king who acts as Foreman's advisor.

It remained doubtful if the young heavyweight could duplicate the moves and pound for pound striking ability of his advisor in Moore's prime.

"We're all working together to bring about a change," said Archie who must be in his mid-50's although he guards his true age.

Foreman was asked about criticism that he hasn't been fighting top caliber opposition and replied, "If people think I've been fighting guys of low caliber, tell them nothing is going to change. He's just got the championship."

The bout brings together two former United States heavyweight champions of the Olympic Games, Frazier winning in 1964 and Foreman four years later.

Banquet Time For Marin Rod-Gunners

By AL GIDDINGS

The Marin Rod and Gun Club is beginning to put together its annual stag banquet for Saturday, Jan. 27. The get acquainted "Good Time Hour" starts at 6 p.m. at the clubhouse at Point San Quentin. Dinner will be served at 7:30, and during the evening entertainment will be presented. You better get your reservations as soon as possible. This event is always a sellout! Write P.O. Box 900, San Rafael, 94902.

THINGS HAVE been generally slow throughout Marin County with the extremely cold weather, rains and wind. Bill Boyle of the Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge had one sale of bait for each of three straight days this past week. But with the weather breaking, fishing for stripers and sturgeon should really pick up.

We've had enough heavy rains to wash out the delta, putting the bait for these fish right in San Pablo. The fresh water should keep the bullheads, crabs and sharks generally out of the bay. This gives your baits time to be found by the stripers and sturgeon as the fresh water doesn't bother them at all. I know many of you would like to catch a sturgeon. Ghost shrimp sell for about $3 per dozen; they are well worth the price.

But don't under estimate the bay shrimp which are sold live and fresh. They are also a top bait. But, you should use a 4/0 hook and load the hook with from 4 to 6 of these little morsels. Big baits catch big fish. Even an anchovy is a good possibility, but use the whole fish. Joe Mello, the Santa Venetia fish champ, says he had taken a couple using salmon roe. Sturgeon feed heavily on herring roe, so I'd bet salmon roe would be a hot bait.

KEITH FRASER called to report he was out Sunday in the rain fishing outside of the Marin Islands in the outgoing tide with Tom Miller. They saw two boats, each with two men aboard land two sturgeon. Estimated weights were 60 and 110 pounds. They also saw three jump, but couldn't get a hookup. You'd better get out there quick!

THE PAIR OF predacious poachers that found easy pickin's purloining prime salmon from the Department of Fish and Game's Station on the Noyo River has been broken up.

The DFG says one of two river otters that had developed a penchant for pirating fish from the state's salmon trapping and egg collecting facility was trapped last week as she attempted to pursue her proclivity for procuring provisions from the fish pens.

Problems arose at the station several weeks ago when a pair of predacious river otters found out how to sneak into the tanks where the fish are held for artificial spawning and pick off a piscatorial treat for their dinners.

THE NOYO RIVER station is the State's sole source for silver salmon eggs which are the basis for the DFG's extensive silver salmon stocking program. Fisheries biologists understandably took a dim view of the otters' midnight forays at the station and they called on wildlife experts in the Department to help them with their problem.

Beaver traps were set up near the underwater entrance to the holding tanks and last week one of the otters was snared, alive and unhurt. The female otter was taken to a remote area along the Big River and released. There she probably will have to work a little harder for her dinner, but she won't be dining at the expense of the DFG's silver salmon program.

NBA Kings' Win Aided By Green

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Veteran Johnny Green was pulled from the Kansas City-Omaha bench in the third quarter Monday night to neutralize Portland scoring ace Sidney Wicks. Green ignited the Kings to a 113-95 win over the Trail Blazers in the night's only National Basketball Association game, played at Kansas City.

Wicks, who finished with 23 points, had been mainly responsible for the Blazers' 51-49 halftime lead.

Green entered the game with 6:31 left in the third period, when the Kings had a one-point edge, 65-64. He scored seven points in the remainder of the quarter and held Wicks in check.

KC-Omaha's Nate Williams shone in the fourth when he scored 13 points.

NBA high-scorer Nate Archibald hit 30 points and dealt off 15 assists before going out with four minutes remaining.

Hot Stars Rip Dallas In ABA Play

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Shooting nearly 80 per cent in the first period, the Utah Stars built up an insurmountable margin and took their eighth straight victory with a 146-126 win over the Dallas Chaparrals Monday night.

Utah's Willie Wise led the scoring with 32 points as the Stars rolled to a 44-26 first period lead and spread to 75-56 at intermission.

At one point during the first quarter, Utah led 33-7 before Dallas came to life.

The Chaps' James Silas scored 31 points in a losing effort to match Wise's output. He was followed by Joe Hamilton's 23 counters.

The Stars, following their hot shooting first quarter, evened out to 63 per cent shooting for the first half and 60.4 overall, while Dallas finished the night with 48 per cent.

CAGE PROSPECTS

Redwood Always Title Contender

By LEW CODDINGTON

(First in a series on Marin County Athletic League varsity basketball prospects.)

For the first time within memory, Redwood High School will not have the most feared basketball team in the Marin County Athletic League.

But nobody ever went broke betting on the Giants, and the league's coaches anticipate that Redwood once again will have a title contender by the time the MCAL season begins Jan. 5.

Certainly, the names on the roster have a ring of greatness about them — Boro, Hennessy, Trobbe. The trouble is that the first names don't match up — Steve, Neil, Steve. And there lies the crux of the Giants' problem, for the names were made famous by the older brothers of the little-used players now on Redwood's roster.

"We're very inexperienced," warned coach Dick Hart. "We're not as deep, not as big, not as good at shooting," as last year's team, which went 24-3 overall and finished second in the MCAL at 11-3 after winning three straight titles and 45 straight league games.

"We make up for the lack of experience with outstanding hustle, however," said Hart. "We're kind of a surprise team."

The Giants are missing all-league center Steve McGee, all-league forward Tim Hennessy and honorable mention guard San Farb from last year's powerhouse.

Two stars return. Mike Connor, a 6-foot-2 wing man in the one-guard offense, plays the game with intelligence and consistency and has been honorable mention all-league two years in a row. Darrell Elder, 6-6 junior center, can be an intimidating force in the middle.

"For my money, Connor is the best all-round athlete in Redwood's history," said Hart.

Katsumi Johnson, a senior guard who didn't play last year, will run the offense after shaking off the effects of a hand injury which kept him out of the lineup the past two weeks.

Beyond Connor, Elder and Johnson come the mystery players who, if they develop, could thrust the Giants toward the title.

Steve Boro, a 6-3 senior forward up from the junior varsity, is the younger brother of former Redwood star John. Neil Hennessy, a 6-2 forward, is Tim's younger brother. Steve Trobbe, a 6-5 sophomore, is the younger brother of Scott. Dave Payne, a 6-2 forward, and Mark Kilmer, a sophomore guard, are other young Giants bidding for key roles.

Decision On Mill Valley Fire Station Is Delayed

Despite a tongue-lashing from City Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker for "negative attitudes," the Mill Valley City Council last night voted 4-1 to postpone any decision on the long-argued East Mill Valley fire station until Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, city staff members were instructed to look into whether a new state law limiting taxation would leave the city without funds to man the station if it is built, and whether a developer's offer to build a new station and lease it to the city is legal.

Tom W. Newton, director of community development, said a citizens' advisory committee on Dec. 12 recommended the council hire architect Matthew R. Mills of San Francisco to prepare preliminary plans for the building, at an estimated fee of $9,000. In October, Mills warned the council that the station probably would cost more than the $275,000 bond issue that city voters had approved for the station.

Boessenecker last night blasted renewed suggestions that the city solve its problems by contracting with the Alto Fire District to serve East Mill Valley. He demanded that "if you feel Alto should serve us, for God's sake de-annex us. . .The reason we live in Mill Valley is that we want Mill Valley to serve us."

He said the Alto contract would cost at least $60,000 a year, and that the idea had been carefully considered and rejected before the bond election was held. When Mayor Jean S. Barnard countered that manning the proposed station with five firemen would cost $60,000, Boessenecker retorted that was "poppycock" and lashed at "the negative approach of my colleagues."

"It seems to me squandrous to spend more money just to say we can do it ourselves," retorted Councilman Robert E. Capron.

Councilman Robert E. Burton warned that the expense of manning the new station might run the city afoul of recently enacted Senate Bill 90, which put a freeze on local agency tax rates.

Developer Bradford H. McNutt injected a new element into the argument when he said his firm would be willing to build a new fire station on Shelter Point and lease it to the city.

Planning Commissioner Paul E. Rosenthal charged that "a delightfully clubby situation is developing" and called for the city to advertise for lease proposals rather than accept a single offer. Planning Commission Chairman Ivan S. Poutiatine and Councilman Burton asked McNutt to detail his offer in writing before the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council also asked City Atty. Leland S. Jordan to investigate the consequences of the Legislature's tax freeze.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala, Burton and others favored having architect Mills begin working on preliminary plans as soon as possible so he could give more accurate cost estimates on the proposed building. He said he could complete the drawings 60 days after being hired.

Curfew Rule Is Invoked By Mill Valley Council

Four Mill Valley city councilmen invoked a standing curfew policy at 12:25 a.m. today, leaving last night's regular meeting agenda half finished.

Councilmen Gerald J. Hood moved to adjourn, citing the council's agreement not to take up any new agenda matters past midnight. With only Mayor Jean S. Barnard dissenting, the council adjourned to 8 p.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Barnard unsuccessfully argued that several agenda items had been "hanging fire for a long time."

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham announced that the Thursday meeting would begin with a brief, closed session to discuss possible litigation, which had not been on last night's agenda.

The Mill Valley City Council Also:

ENVIRONMENT — Adopted a resolution that the city will require interim environmental impact reports on all new private developments as outlined in the Friends of Mammoth vs. Mono County decision. The state is to provide new rules covering the impact reports within 120 days, under Assembly Bill 889.

BOOSTERS — Unanimously approved citizen Samuel Schneider's proposal to create a business improvement committee of three businessmen and four other citizens to encourage retail trade in the city while enhancing the city's charms — without any expenditure of city funds or staff time.

BALLOON — After applicant Stuart A. Archer failed for the third meeting to appear on behalf of his request to use city property as launching site for a hot air balloon, denied the request.

WINWOOD LANE — After lengthy debate, rescinded the council's Nov. 6 decision to bar auto traffic from the lane, and referred it back to the planning commission for recommendations.

LIGHT — Approved an agreement with Pacific Gas and Electric Co. to install 30 new street lights on Camino Alto between East Blithedale Avenue and Miller Avenue, at a cost of $12,417.42.

CONSULTANT — Approved proposals by Tom V. Newton, director of community development, on procedures for hiring a consultant to work on the city's general plan. A committee will screen applicants' letters due by Jan. 8 and recommend the three top choices for council decision.

OPEN SPACE — Set Jan. 15 for a council hearing on the interim open space plan recommended by the planning commission.

DRAINAGE — Authorized City Engineer Stanley M. Bala to call for bids on work on Nelson Avenue at Ryan Street, at an estimated cost of $11,040.

LAGOON — Acting on citizen complaints that Shelter Ridge grading work was causing siltation of the lagoon nearby, instructed city staff to inspect the area this afternoon at low tide.

Delta Is Checking Skyjack Device

The device is designed to detect weapons and explosives and went into operation temporarily at the airline's terminal at New York's Kennedy Airport on Monday.

The 3,000-pound X-ray and fluoroscope instrument will be used to inspect hand luggage without opening it. It will not replace metal detectors now in use, but will be used in conjunction with them.

Mill Valley Council Appoints Two To Planning Commission

Louis G. Millin was appointed to one vacant seat on the Mill Valley Planning Commission last night, and Marlene Kaulum was reappointed to the commission by the Mill Valley City Council.

The appointments by unanimous vote followed a closed session at which the councilmen interviewed candidates for the seats.

Millin, president of Enchanted Knolls Homeowners Association, succeeded Commissioner Paul E. Rosenthal, whose second term expired today. Council policy is that no commissioner may serve more than two full terms, Mayor Jean S. Barnard explained.

Mrs. Kaulum was appointed to the commission six months ago, and will be serving her first full, three-year term.

Councilmen postponed filling several other vacancies on city commissions, and sounded a call for more applicants.

These included the parks and recreation commission seat of Dr. James Knez, whose term will expire Feb. 1; the arts commission seat of Pat Ostler, whose term will expire Feb. 15; the human rights miniboard seat of Frances Adams, who has resigned, and the youth commission, whose adult member Mary J. Stetson has resigned.

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham pointed out that the youth commission applicants need not be Mill Valley residents, but must live within the Tamalpais High School attendance area.

Agnew Supporters Little Too Early

His office has repudiated as unsanctioned the group's fund-raising efforts toward an Agnew presidential candidacy in 1976.

Council Backs Away From North Ridge Advisory Unit

Mill Valley city councilmen last night shied away from creating a North Ridge citizens advisory committee before Feb. 5, but voted to make a field trip through the proposed open space area on Jan. 6 or 7.

Appointment of the advisory committee was on the council agenda last night. The councilmen, planning commission members and citizens wrangled for more than an hour over whether owners of some of the property involved should serve on the panel.

The name of Dr. J. Alfred Rider, who owns 200 or more acres in the proposed open space area, was mentioned repeatedly. Councilman Robert E. Burton and others objected to his membership "on anything having to do with boundaries."

The council finally decided to tell the volunteer committee of five women members of the Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club to continue present work on its inventory of the possible acreage for the preserve. The women will lead the council and city officials on a jeep tour of the land on Jan. 6 or 7. The date will be firmly set at the council's Jan. 2 meeting, it was decided.

Mayor Jean S. Barnard warned that a major crossroads in the North Ridge campaign was scheduled for the Jan. 29 meeting of Mill Valley, Larkspur and Corte Madera city councils.

The three councils will propose overall boundaries for the open space area at that meeting, and "it will be quite a monkeywrench" if Mill Valley proposes any idea other than outright public ownership of the land, Mrs. Barnard argued. Rider favors development of part of his acreage and negotiated public use of the remainder short of outright fee title transfer, several speakers said.

Councilman Robert E. Capron resolved the dispute with a complicated motion that the city council should essentially wait until Feb. 5 to appoint a committee — including landowners — to advise the council whether to press for outright acquisition of the land, or other means of public access to the acreage.

Capron's motion was unanimously adopted.

Hope In Korea

DONGDUCHON, South Korea (UPI) —Bob Hope entertained 3,000 American GIs today and said his current tour is his last planned overseas trip to entertain U.S. servicemen in Asia and the Pacific area.

Ford Experimental Safety Car Delivered To The Government

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ford officially presented its experimental safety car to the federal government today, acknowledging that there is no certainty it could survive real-life crashes.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe accepted the Experimental Safety Vehicle (ESV), built for the government for a token cost of $1.

Plans for further testing call for a 50-mph barrier crash test on the car next year. Ford has subjected developmental versions of the car to 21 crash tests.

However, Harold C. MacDonald, a Ford vice president in charge of the Product Development Group, pointed out that available test manikins did not provide a realistic measurement of human responses.

"Until a representative test device is developed, such specifications are going to be largely meaningless," he said.

"It is essential to remember that these government limits — intended to describe 'survivability levels' for physical stress on car occupants during impacts—have not yet been proved to relate to real-world experience stress during crashes."

The most obvious special feature of the one-of-a-kind vehicle is its front bumper which extended far beyond that of a conventional bumper. The front end of the car was built, MacDonald said, to accomodate about 35 per cent of the crash energy absorbed in a front impact.

It contains a "controlled-collapse apron" located over the front wheels also to deflect the crash's impact.

Other protective features include "roll cages" which were to preserve the structure of the inside of the car in the event of roll-over collisions, air bag for the driver and passengers and a controlled-collapse steering column.

Pentagon Criticized For Secrecy In Lavelle Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A House subcommittee has criticized what it called "incredible" Pentagon secrecy surrounding the case of Air Force Gen. John D. Lavelle, relieved of his Vietnam command in a dispute over bombing policy.

The House Armed Services Investigating subcommittee, in a report issued Monday, questioned whether this secrecy was aimed at protecting Lavelle or someone else.

"One might be excused," the report said, "for entertaining an uneasy feeling that someone other than General Lavelle could be receiving the benefits of this secrecy."

Lavelle was relieved of command of the 7th Air Force in Vietnam March 31, following reports that bombing raids against North Vietnam went beyond policies set by the administration and that records of the raids were falsified. Lavelle later retired from the service.

The administration policy during the period in question required that only "protective reaction" strikes could be made north of the 20th Parallel. This meant that pilots were not supposed to attack unless fired upon.

Lavelle was relieved of command of the 7th Air Force in Vietnam March 31, following

Man Treated Then Booked At County Jail

A fight between a man and his former wife ended last night with his being treated at Marin General Hospital, then booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

Edmund Thomas Biagini, 31, of Inverness was released from county jail on $500 bail to appear Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to San Rafael police, Biagini was visiting his former wife, Judith Kay Biagini, 32, at 45 Woodland Avenue, Apt. 21, where she was staying with a friend, Dalrie Vail. The fight started and he knocked her down and repeatedly kicked her with his boots, police reported.

Her friend hit him across the forehead with a crowbar, and called police. Biagini was treated at Marin General Hospital and then taken to jail.

Decision On Mill Valley Fire Station Is Delayed

Despite a tongue-lashing from City Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker for "negative attitudes," the Mill Valley City Council last night voted 4-1 to postpone any decision on the long-argued East Mill Valley fire station until Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, city staff members were instructed to look into whether a new state law limiting taxation would leave the city without funds to man the station if it is built, and whether a developer's offer to build a new station and lease it to the city is legal.

Tom W. Newton, director of community development, said a citizens' advisory committee on Dec. 12 recommended the council hire architect Matthew R. Mills of San Francisco to prepare preliminary plans for the building, at an estimated fee of $9,000. In October, Mills warned the council that the station probably would cost more than the $275,000 bond issue that city voters had approved for the station.

Boessenecker last night blasted renewed suggestions that the city solve its problems by contracting with the Alto Fire District to serve East Mill Valley. He demanded that "if you feel Alto should serve us, for God's sake de-annex us. . .The reason we live in Mill Valley is that we want Mill Valley to serve us."

He said the Alto contract would cost at least $60,000 a year, and that the idea had been carefully considered and rejected before the bond election was held. When Mayor Jean S. Barnard countered that manning the proposed station with five firemen would cost $60,000, Boessenecker retorted that was "poppycock" and lashed at "the negative approach of my colleagues."

"It seems to me squandrous to spend more money just to say we can do it ourselves," retorted Councilman Robert E. Capron.

Councilman Robert E. Burton warned that the expense of manning the new station might run the city afoul of recently enacted Senate Bill 90, which put a freeze on local agency tax rates.

Developer Bradford H. McNutt injected a new element into the argument when he said his firm would be willing to build a new fire station on Shelter Point and lease it to the city.

Planning Commissioner Paul E. Rosenthal charged that "a delightfully clubby situation is developing" and called for the city to advertise for lease proposals rather than accept a single offer. Planning Commission Chairman Ivan S. Poutiatine and Councilman Burton asked McNutt to detail his offer in writing before the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council also asked City Atty. Leland S. Jordan to investigate the consequences of the Legislature's tax freeze.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala, Burton and others favored having architect Mills begin working on preliminary plans as soon as possible so he could give more accurate cost estimates on the proposed building. He said he could complete the drawings 60 days after being hired.

Curfew Rule Is Invoked By Mill Valley Council

Four Mill Valley city councilmen invoked a standing curfew policy at 12:25 a.m. today, leaving last night's regular meeting agenda half finished.

Councilmen Gerald J. Hood moved to adjourn, citing the council's agreement not to take up any new agenda matters past midnight. With only Mayor Jean S. Barnard dissenting, the council adjourned to 8 p.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Barnard unsuccessfully argued that several agenda items had been "hanging fire for a long time."

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham announced that the Thursday meeting would begin with a brief, closed session to discuss possible litigation, which had not been on last night's agenda.

The Mill Valley City Council Also:

ENVIRONMENT — Adopted a resolution that the city will require interim environmental impact reports on all new private developments as outlined in the Friends of Mammoth vs. Mono County decision. The state is to provide new rules covering the impact reports within 120 days, under Assembly Bill 889.

BOOSTERS — Unanimously approved citizen Samuel Schneider's proposal to create a business improvement committee of three businessmen and four other citizens to encourage retail trade in the city while enhancing the city's charms — without any expenditure of city funds or staff time.

BALLOON — After applicant Stuart A. Archer failed for the third meeting to appear on behalf of his request to use city property as launching site for a hot air balloon, denied the request.

WINWOOD LANE — After lengthy debate, rescinded the council's Nov. 6 decision to bar auto traffic from the lane, and referred it back to the planning commission for recommendations.

LIGHT — Approved an agreement with Pacific Gas and Electric Co. to install 30 new street lights on Camino Alto between East Blithedale Avenue and Miller Avenue, at a cost of $12,417.42.

CONSULTANT — Approved proposals by Tom V. Newton, director of community development, on procedures for hiring a consultant to work on the city's general plan. A committee will screen applicants' letters due by Jan. 8 and recommend the three top choices for council decision.

OPEN SPACE — Set Jan. 15 for a council hearing on the interim open space plan recommended by the planning commission.

DRAINAGE — Authorized City Engineer Stanley M. Bala to call for bids on work on Nelson Avenue at Ryan Street, at an estimated cost of $11,040.

LAGOON — Acting on citizen complaints that Shelter Ridge grading work was causing siltation of the lagoon nearby, instructed city staff to inspect the area this afternoon at low tide.

GAS MILEAGE

A Most Unusual Race Is Staged

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ALTON, Ill. — How far can you go on a gallon of gas?

The idea was to squeeze as much distance as you could out of a few drops of fuel — Shell's Super variety.

The winning vehicle, designed and run by a team of researchers at the refinery, came through with (and you won't believe this) 297.730 miles to the gallon — or, to put it another way, based on the weight of the vehicle, 306.662 ton miles per gallon.

They actually drive only 14 miles. But in theory, they would use only 10 gallons to go coast-to-coast across the U.S.

The route covered was along a substantially flat road beside nearby Piasa Creek. The "car" — and the term has to be used lightly — was a highly modified 1959 Opel, the requirement being that the contestants use as a source of power the engine which came with the chassis.

Beyond that, anything went. The engine was mounted midstream in the car and a chain drive used to carry the engine's power to the closely mounted wheels in the rear.

"Gears might have been better than the chain," says B.E. Visser, one of the two engineers who modified the car — the other was John Martin — "but they would have been far too costly." The engine had a 10-to-1 compression ratio, and special lubricants were used.

No car looked less like a winner. It was probably the hardest-riding vehicle around and had absolutely no suspension. Its four aircraft tires were inflated to 180 pounds. "You go over an oil spill in the road," smiles Mr. Martin, who drove the car, "and the car goes bump."

Obviously, this has absolutely nothing to do with what the average motorist can expect to get out of the car he drives. They're different creatures, entirely.

The only purpose of the Shell Mileage Marathon is to show how much movement human engineering and ingenuity can squeeze out of a few drops of gasoline.

In this case, the team of Visser and Martin consumed 134 grams of fuel or, to put it another way, five ounces, on the test run.

No one could drive a car this way on the highway. The idea is to accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast. That said, the Visser-Martin car has covered about one mile.

"We figure on four accelerations a mile," explains Visser, who, by the way, was chairman of this year's marathon, "hitting the throttle hard and getting up to 15 or 16 miles an hour, then coasting down to 8 or 9, then stepping on it again." It took about two minutes for each acceleration-and-coast period, or eight minutes a mile.

"A wide-open throttle is the most efficient," declares Visser, so we step right to the floor." In effect, what they did was run a very short drag race, plus a lot of coasting.

The runner-up team, which held the record for the past five years, had, until recently, been known as the Three Blind Mice: R. C. Trokey, J. M. Jones, and D. C. Carlson. Carlson no longer is with Shell. Last year, the trio checked out at almost 250 miles a gallon in a highly modified 1959 Fiat with over 50,000 miles on the odometer.

This year, because of a broken starter cable which had to be repaired en route and other causes, they lost the cup.

"Ah, but wait till next year," they sigh.

The Shell Mileage Marathon began in 1939 because of an argument between two employees of the Wood River lab who disagreed on how far a gallon of gasoline would move a passenger car.

The argument will likely never be settled. It did, however, spark an annual competition between workers in the lab who, although the "race is not sanctioned by anyone, maintain that it is a world record. No one seems to dispute the claim. Only Wood River lab workers compete.

The first race, in 1939, was won by R. J. Greenshields, later director of research, when he cozxed almost 50 miles per gallon from a 1933 Plymouth coupe. The races were discontinued during the years of World War II and again between 1959 and 1964.

When resumed in 1964, new classifications and regulations were added. In 1966, a Sportman's Division was added to encourage anyone who simply wanted to enter the family car without making modifications.

Viet Peace Still Major Stock Woe

The stock market opened lower and was beset by trader selling pressure throughout the morning. Again, investor disappointment over the breakdown in the secret Vietnam peace negotiations was the main cause of the sell off. A report the prime interest rate soon may rise also encouraged selling.

Amerada Hess was the most active issue, up ⅛ at 44 ¾ on 139,300 shares, including a block trade of 123,500 shares at 44, off ⅝.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were lower in moderate trading.

Increase In Hotel Earnings

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I have been given conflicting advice on what to do with my shares of Hyatt Corp. (OTC). Which should I do, hold or sell? — L.H.

A. In my opinion shares should be held. Not only are earnings expected to grow by about a 20 per cent rate over the next few years but an upward adjustment in the multiple is possible. Approximately 50 per cent of earnings are derived from the hotel business, the remainder from a hotel service operation, a hospital chain, motels and a 27 per cent interest in a Florida land company.

Hyatt's concentration is in the luxury hotel field, a relatively stable area. The company operates 25 hotels with 8,000 rooms and another 15 with 8,000 rooms are under construction or planned. Occupancy levels are up substantially over the 1971 rate and at least two of the company's hotels are operating at near capacity. Dilution from conversion of long-term debt would be immaterial because of interest savings.

Q. I have wondered for some time why Chesebrough-Pond's (NYSE) stock doesn't split. I bought it at 21+ and it is now about 87; it could split 4 ways. Lately Standard Oil of New Jersey hasn't been listed at all on the New York Stock Exchange. Is this a mistake or it is off the market? — M.D.

A. Jersey Standard is still trading actively, but under its new title, Exxon. The decision to change the corporate name was made in order to avoid confusion with the three other Standard Oil companies. At the same time the company's retail gasoline units dropped their various brand names to adopt the Exxon acronymn.

Chesebrough last split in 1964, when the shares were trading at about 60. At that time a 3-for-1 split brought the price back to the 20 level. Now trading almost 30 points higher than before the 1964 distribution, the stock is certanly a split candidate.

If and when directors propose a split, I would not anticipate an exchange greater than three shares for one.

San Rafael Lumber Firm Will Build Warehouse At Black Point

Davis

Brackett

Kelleher Lumber Sales at 15 Bay Street in San Rafael will take over the 5.5-acre property of Service Lumber Co. at Black Point next March and build a new 25,000-square-foot warehouse there.

Donald J. Kelleher, wwho heads Kelleher Lumber, said he will use the new Black Point facilities for his warehouse needs and retain his office in San Rafael on Bay Street.

Service Lumber Co., which has been in operation for about 29 years (first in San Francisco, then in Sausalito and the last eight years at Black Point), will then become the Kelleher Lumber Co.

Richard Bob Gehring of Healdsburg, who has owned Service Lumber Co. since 1944, will retire when Kelleher takes over next March.

CHARLES R. DAVIS of Novato, operations officer at Crocker Bank's 16th and Mission office, has been appointed operations officer at the bank's Market-Fourth branch in San Francisco.

Davis is a 19-year veteran with Crocker Bank. He was named operations officer of the bank's Tennessee Street office in Vallejo in 1961 and served in that capacity in Sacramento, Fresno and Eureka. In 1970, Davis was named assistant manager of the bank's Novato branch, and was transferred to San Francisco this year as operations officer at 16th and Mission.

ROBERT (BOB) BRACKETT, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.R. Brackett of Terra Linda, has been named associate director of publicity at Del Webb's Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas. He was formerly publicity director at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel in Stateline, Nev.

The 26-year-old graduate of San Jose State University rejoins the Del Webb organization after two years of service in the United States Army. Brackett is a 1964 graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and attended College of Marin.

LOCH LOMOND Live Bait Shop at Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor will be sold to new owners at the end of this month.

William S. Boyle of Santa Venetia, who has owned it about a year and a half, will sell to D. Keith Fraser of San Rafael and Arthur Donati of Corte Madera. Fraser is a teacher and coach at Terra Linda High School, and Donati works for a computer firm.

The new owners will call their shop the Loch Lomond Live Bait and Tackle Shop.

R.R. BUFFI of San Rafael has been appointed senior research associate, computer and systems division, at the Chevron Research Co. in Richmond.

Buffi wn his master's degree in mathematics from Stanford University in 1955, spend two years with the United States Army, and joined Chevron Research in 1957. In his new psotion, Buffi will direct the activities of the computer operations and programming section and will act as a consultant on computer techniques.

AXEL MIKKELSEN of San Rafael has been named director of passenger marketing in the Bay Area for Pan American World Airways.

WILLIAM BUSH, San Rafael realtor, was elected a director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards during the annual convention in Hawaii last month. He will serve a three-year term. He will tkae office during special ceremonies at NAREB's midwinter meeting in New Orleans Jan. 26 to 30, 1973.

HENRY L. HICKS, Novato realtor, announced the following four additions to the sales staff of Henry L. Hicks & Associates:

E. Don King, who just retired from Standard Oil Co. of California after 41 years, joined Hicks as an associate.

Joseph L. Schweitzer, former manager of the Novato branch of Bush Realty Inc., also joined as an associate, to specialize in Novato residential, land and income producing properties.

ANNEX MOTORS in San Rafael reported the sale of 51 Volvos in November, the best ever retail month for the dealer. In the 10-state western sales area, Volvo sales hit a new record, with 1,128 new cars sold, a 36 per cent increase over the same month in 1971.

Council Backs Away From North Ridge Advisory Unit

Mill Valley city councilmen last night shied away from creating a North Ridge citizens advisory committee before Feb. 5, but voted to make a field trip through the proposed open space area on Jan. 6 or 7.

Appointment of the advisory committee was on the council agenda last night. The councilmen, planning commission members and citizens wrangled for more than an hour over whether owners of some of the property involved should serve on the panel.

The name of Dr. J. Alfred Rider, who owns 200 or more acres in the proposed open space area, was mentioned repeatedly. Councilman Robert E. Burton and others objected to his membership "on anything having to do with boundaries."

The council finally decided to tell the volunteer committee of five women members of the Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club to continue present work on its inventory of the possible acreage for the preserve. The women will lead the council and city officials on a jeep tour of the land on Jan. 6 or 7. The date will be firmly set at the council's Jan. 2 meeting, it was decided.

Mayor Jean S. Barnard warned that a major crossroads in the North Ridge campaign was scheduled for the Jan. 29 meeting of Mill Valley, Larkspur and Corte Madera city councils.

The three councils will propose overall boundaries for the open space area at that meeting, and "it will be quite a monkeywrench" if Mill Valley proposes any idea other than outright public ownership of the land, Mrs. Barnard argued. Rider favors development of part of his acreage and negotiated public use of the remainder short of outright fee title transfer, several speakers said.

Councilman Robert E. Capron resolved the dispute with a complicated motion that the city council should essentially wait until Feb. 5 to appoint a committee — including landowners — to advise the council whether to press for outright acquisition of the land, or other means of public access to the acreage.

Capron's motion was unanimously adopted.

Ford Experimental Safety Car Delivered To The Government

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ford officially presented its experimental safety car to the federal government today, acknowledging that there is no certainty it could survive real-life crashes.

Transportation Secretary Joha A. Volpe accepted the Experimental Safety Vehicle (ESV), built for the government for a token cost of $1.

Plans for further testing call for a 50-mph barrier crash test on the car next year. Ford has subjected developmental versions of the car to 21 crash tests.

However, Harold C. MacDonald, a Ford vice president in charge of the Product Development Group, pointed out that available test manikins did not provide a realistic measurement of human responses.

"Until a representative test device is developed, such specifications are going to be largely meaningless," he said.

"It is essential to remember that these government limits — intended to describe 'survivability levels' for physical stress on car occupants during impacts—have not yet been proved to relate to real-world experience stress during crashes."

The most obvious special feature of the one-of-a-kind vehicle is its front bumper which extended far beyond that of a conventional bumper. The front end of the car was built, MacDonald said, to accomodate about 35 per cent of the crash energy absorbed in a front impact.

It contains a "controlled-collapse apron" located over the front wheels also to deflect the crash's impact.

Other protective features include "roll cages" which were to preserve the structure of the inside of the car in the event of roll-over collisions, air bag for the driver and passengers and a controlled-collapse steering column.

Pentagon Criticized For Secrecy In Lavelle Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A House subcommittee has criticized what it called "incredible" Pentagon secrecy surrounding the case of Air Force Gen. John D. Lavelle, relieved of his Vietnam command in a dispute over bombing policy.

The House Armed Services Investigating subcommittee, in a report issued Monday, questioned whether this secrecy was aimed at protecting Lavelle or someone else.

"One might be excused," the report said, "for entertaining an uneasy feeling that someone other than General Lavelle could be receiving the benefits of this secrecy."

Lavelle was relieved of command of the 7th Air Force in Vietnam March 31, following reports that bombing raids against North Vietnam went beyond policies set by the administration and that records of the raids were falsified. Lavelle later retired from the service.

The administration policy during the period in question required that only "protective reaction" strikes could be made north of the 20th Parallel. This meant that pilots were not supposed to attack unless fired upon.

Lavelle told his boss, Gen. John D. Ryan, Air Force chief of staff, and also told the hearing, that he ordered four to eight strikes against missile sites and other targets without U.S. planes having first been fired on. But he denied giving any orders to his men to file false reports.

The report reached no formal, overall conclusion on the Lavelle case. It implied some support for him by noting his 32-year career in the Air Force and questioning whether he would have jeopardized that record by extending bombing policy on his own or whether there was "tacit approval of General Lavelle's actions by his superiors..."

Commenting on the report, House Armed Services Committee chairman F. Edward Hebert said in New Orleans that "the committee did not draw any conclusions—the report speaks for itself." But he added that "what Lavelle did should have been done six years ago and the war would have been over."

The report also said the Pentagon refused to turn over files on the case. It said "the incredible secrecy with which some (Pentagon) representatives have surrounded this case suggests that the files may have been thoroughly sanitized by this time."

Man Treated Then Booked At County Jail

A fight between a man and his former wife ended last night with his being treated at Marin General Hospital, then booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

Edmund Thomas Biagini, 31, of Inverness was released from county jail on $500 bail to appear Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to San Rafael police, Biagini was visiting his former wife, Judith Kay Biagini, 32, at 45 Woodland Avenue, Apt. 21, where she was staying with a friend, Dalrie Vail. The fight started and he knocked her down and repeatedly kicked her with his boots, police reported.

Her friend hit him across the forehead with a crowbar, and called police. Biagini was treated at Marin General Hospital and then taken to jail.

Council Will Help Fund Study Of Dollar Estate

Preservationists last night won another victory in their battle to preserve the Robert Dollar estate in San Rafael as the San Rafael City Council pledged to help fund a feasibility study of the economic consequences of acquisition of the site.

Councilmen told representatives of Marin Heritage, a preservationist group, that the city will provide up to $1,000 on a matching fund basis to probe acquisition and possible uses of the historic estate on Mission Avenue.

The council asked the group to prepare a contract outlining the scope and method of the study for review on Jan. 2.

Mary C. Dekker, chairman of the group formerly known as the San Rafael Historic Preservation Committee, said the estate's recent inclusion in the National Registry of Historical Places qualified it for federal funding of up to $1,000 for the feasibility study.

Inclusion in the registry also qualifies the mansion and grounds for entry into 200 federal acquisition assistance programs, she said. She suggested that the mansion be turned into a museum or community cultural center.

Other representatives of Marin Heritage urged the council to help acquire the site as midtown open space for use by citizens throughout Marin, saying conversion of the facility into a cultural center would spur business by drawing tourists.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini said he would have to be convinced the property would pay its own way before he would vote to help finance acquisition. "The people who want to buy it must come up with most of the money," he said.

Preservationists have long fought plans by attorney Thomas R. Schaal to develop the property. Though previous development proposals by Schaal have been rejected by both the planning commission and the city council, the attorney has again filed for permits to proceed with development plans.

Schaal's latest proposal calls for a 72-unit apartment building and the renovation and relocation of the Dollar mansion on the site. The planning commission will consider the permit application at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 9.

In a related matter, the council postponed action on a proposal by Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan for an historic preservation ordinance which would create a five-member board charged with listing and preserving historic sites in the city.

The San Rafael City Council also:

CHARTER — Witnessed Boy Scout officials presenting the charter of San Rafael Explorer Post 303, a police cadet group, to Police Chief Joseph Brusatori.

BURGLAR ALARMS — Approved an ordinance regulating installation and variety of burglar and fire alarms in the city to insure quality control.

TERRA LINDA — Said one laborer and one maintenance supervisor will be hired to handle additional public works duty when Terra Linda is annexed to the city on Jan. 1. Public Works Director Norris M. Rawles had asked for four additional men.

BUNGALOW AVENUE — Upheld an appeal by Gary David of planning commission approval of a parking variance for a proposed house at 279 Bungalow Avenue. The council felt the design of a driveway would create traffic hazards and congestion.

FIRING — Affirmed after closed session the firing of police officer James Jackson for fraudulently trying to collect pay for a training session he failed to attend.

ASSESSMENT DISTRICTS — Set 8 p.m., Feb. 5, as the time of public hearings for the formation of the Bahia de Rafael Industrial Park and Mont Marin Open Space assessment plans for utility undergrounding assessment districts at Rafael Racquet Club Estates and in Villa Real.

OPEN SPACE — Said portions or all of the city's $2.5 million in open space bonds may be sold next spring.

RIGHTS COMMISSION — Struck from the agenda a request by the county Human Rights Commission for two city liaison officers after executive director Gerald J. Hood failed to appear for a second time.

BEAUTIFICATION — Heard Gary Bush, state highway district landscape architect, say the state will provide matching funds of about $9,000 for landscaping and erection of a city welcome sign at Second and Irwin streets "by the middle of 1973."

IMPACT REPORTS — Said the city will maintain its policy of requiring environmental impact reports for some development in spite of 120-day moratorium on such reports by the state legislature.

BIDS — Called for bids for a public toilet room addition to the San Rafael Library, and said bids will be opened at 3 p.m. Jan. 8 in city hall.

EXPENSE — Approved additional expense of $3,450 for a concrete stairway at 771 South San Pedro Road in connection with the San Pedro Road widening project.

CHULA VISTA — Approved a request by James Y. Meyers for two wood retaining walls at 85 Chula Vista Drive.

STOP SIGNS — Said stop signs will be placed on Lucas Drive at Montevideo Way southbound, and on Regina Way at Elda Drive.

BANKING — Called for bids by city banks on implementing a new city banking procedure that consolidates banking accounts maintained by the finance department.

LABOR RELATIONS — Approved a labor relations resolution which provides for majority representation of employee bargaining units and bans strikes by miscellaneous employees. Striking by safety personnel is already prohibited by state law.

SMOKING — Prohibited smoking in council chambers during council meetings.

FIRE COMMISSION — Said a seat on the city's fire commission, vacated by the death of Harry A. Barbier, will be filled by Jan. 2.

REDEVELOPMENT — Heard Redevelopment Agency Director and Asst. City Mgr. William J. Bielser declare the city's redevelopment plan was filed with the county assessor, the secretary of state and the state board of equalization last Wednesday. The action freezes assessed valuation in the redevelopment area retroactive to March, 1972, Bielser said.

CITIZENS COMMITTEE — Asked citizens wishing to apply to the city's 60-member citizens committee on the general plan to do so within the next 30 days.

APPOINTMENT — Appointed Robert C. Cary, Monty J. Martin, David M. Salaun and Clyde C. Zimmerman as auxiliary police officers.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Jan. 2.

Fund Lack Seems To Rule Out Park Purchase In Canal Area

The pleas of San Rafael's Canal area residents for a central city park at 310-340 Canal Street appeared to be in vain last night as the San Rafael City Council declared there is no money to buy the site. (Other San Rafael City Council stories, page 1)

The council took no action on residents' demands it acquire the site and instead accepted a parks commission report which says the parcel is uniquely situated for park purposes but that there are no funds.

The council's action came amid charges by one canal resident that inadequate planning had turned the neighborhood into a "high-priced ghetto".

"The planning department is a rubber-stamp for development," declared Ben Brinkworth of 349 Canal Street, suggesting that high-salaried planners should be replaced with a "clerk and an approval stamp."

Brinkworth said he opposed plans for a 96-unit apartment development on the parcel, citing density and traffic congestion. The planning commission has deferred action on the proposal for the six-structure development pending city council review of neighbors' objections.

Brinkworth, who has led the fight for a park on the 2.5-acre parcel, said there is "zero open space" in the Canal area and claimed that thousands of residents have been grossly over looked by the planning department and commission.

He said an alternative 17-acre park site at the corner of Canal Street and Kerner Boulevard was marshland and nothing more than a "pie in the sky" proposal.

The parks commission has recommended that the 17-acre site be considered for acquisition instead of the 2.5-acre parcel.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini, angered at Brinkworth's denunciation of city planners, said current city personnel had nothing to do with decisions made long ago that have left the Canal area in a congested condition.

"A park in the canal area is the council's and the park commission's highest priority," he said. "But that site (310-340 Canal Street) would cost about $350,000 for 2.5 acres alone." Bettini said the eventual merger of the city's sanitation district with the Ross Valley Sanitation District will leave about 25 acres of sanitation district land in the Canal area in open space.

The mayor rejected suggestions by residents and colleague Lawrence E. Mulryan that redevelopment funds be used to acquire the 2.5-acre site. "If we included this type of park in redevelopment, all the board of supervisors would vote against the plan," he said.

Mulryan said the site was appropriate for park purposes and urged redevelopment monies be considered for its acquisition regardless of the board of supervisors.

GAS MILEAGE

A Most Unusual Race Is Staged

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ALTON, Ill. — How far can you go on a gallon of gas?

Here, in Illinois, just across the Mississippi River from St. Louis and a ston'e throw from the Shell Oil Co.'s huge Wood River Refinery, a most unusual race was held recently.

The idea was to squeezé as much distance as you could out of a few drops of fuel — Shell's Super variety.

The winning vehicle, designed and run by a team of researchers at the refinery, came through with (and you won't believe this) 297.730 miles to the gallon — or, to put it another way, based on the weight of the vehicle, 306.662 ton miles per gallon.

They actually drive only 14 miles. But in theory, they would use only 10 gallons to go coast-to-coast across the U.S.

The route covered was along a substantially flat road beside nearby Piasa Creek. The "car" — and the term has to be used lightly — was a highly modified 1959 Opel, the requirement being that the contestants use as a source of power the engine which came with the chassis.

Beyond that, anything went. The engine was mounted midstream in the car and a chain drive used to carry the engine's power to the closely mounted wheels in the rear.

"Gears might have been better than the chain," says B.E. Visser, one of the two engineers who modified the car — the other was John Martin — "but they would have been far too costly." The engine had a 10-to-1 compression ratio, and special lubricants were used.

No car looked less like a winner. It was probably the hardest-riding vehicle around and had absolutely no suspension. Its four aircraft tires were inflated to 180 pounds. "You go over an oil spill in the road," smiles Mr. Martin, who drove the car, "and the car goes bump."

Obviously, this has absolutely nothing to do with what the average motorist can expect to get out of the car he drives. They're different creatures, entirely.

The only purpose of the Shell Mileage Marathon is to show how much movement human engineering and ingenuity can squeeze out of a few drops of gasoline.

In this case, the team of Visser and Martin consumed 134 grams of fuel or, to put it another way, five ounces, on the test run.

No one could drive a car this way on the highway. The idea is to accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast. That said, the Visser-Martin car has covered about one mile.

"We figure on four accelerations a mile," explains Visser, who, by the way, was chairman of this year's marathon, "hitting the throttle hard and getting up to 15 or 16 miles an hour, then coasting down to 8 or 9, then stepping on it again." It took about two minutes for each acceleration-and-coast period, or eight minutes a mile.

"A wide-open throttle is the most efficient," declares Visser, so we step right to the floor." In effect, what they did was run a very short drag race, plus a lot of coasting.

The runner-up team, which held the record for the past five years, had, until recently, been known as the Three Blind Mice: R. C. Trokey, J. M. Jones, and D. C. Carlson. Carlson no longer is with Shell. Last year, the trio checked out at almost 250 miles a gallon in a highly modified 1959 Fiat with over 50,000 miles on the odometer.

This year, because of a broken starter cable which had to be repaired en route and other causes, they lost the cup.

"Ah, but wait till next year," they sigh.

The Shell Mileage Marathon began in 1939 because of an argument between two employees of the Wood River lab who disagreed on how far a gallon of gasoline would move a passenger car.

The argument will likely never be settled. It did, however, spark an annual competition between workers in the lab who, although the "race is not sanctioned by anyone, maintain that it is a world record. No one seems to dispute the claim. Only Wood River lab workers compete.

The first race, in 1939, was won by R. J. Greenshields, later director of research, when he cozxed almost 50 miles per gallon from a 1933 Plymouth coupe. The races were discontinued during the years of World War II and again between 1959 and 1964.

When resumed in 1964, new classifications and regulations were added. In 1966, a Sportman's Division was added to encourage anyone who simply wanted to enter the family car without making modifications.

Viet Peace Still Major Stock Woe

The stock market opened lower and was beset by trader selling pressure throughout the morning. Again, investor disappointment over the breakdown in the secret Vietnam peace negotiations was the main cause of the sell off. A report the prime interest rate soon may rise also encouraged selling.

Amerada Hess was the most active issue, up ⅛ at 44 ¾ on 139,300 shares, including a block trade of 123,500 shares at 44, off ⅝.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were lower in moderate trading.

Increase In Hotel Earnings

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I have been given conflicting advice on what to do with my shares of Hyatt Corp. (OTC). Which should I do, hold or sell? — L.H.

A. In my opinion shares should be held. Not only are earnings expected to grow by about a 20 per cent rate over the next few years but an upward adjustment in the multiple is possible. Approximately 50 per cent of earnings are derived from the hotel business, the remainder from a hotel service operation, a hospital chain, motels and a 27 per cent interest in a Florida land company.

Hyatt's concentration is in the luxury hotel field, a relatively stable area. The company operates 25 hotels with 8,000 rooms and another 15 with 8,000 rooms are under construction or planned. Occupancy levels are up substantially over the 1971 rate and at least two of the company's hotels are operating at near capacity. Dilution from conversion of long-term debt would be immaterial because of interest savings.

Q. I have wondered for some time why Chesebrough-Pond's (NYSE) stock doesn't split. I bought it at 21+ and it is now about 87; it could split 4 ways. Lately Standard Oil of New Jersey hasn't been listed at all on the New York Stock Exchange. Is this a mistake or it is off the market? — M.D.

A. Jersey Standard is still trading actively, but under its new title, Exxon. The decision to change the corporate name was made in order to avoid confusion with the three other Standard Oil companies. At the same time the company's retail gasoline units dropped their various brand names to adopt the Exxon acronymn.

Chesebrough last split in 1964, when the shares were trading at about 60. At that time a 3-for-1 split brought the price back to the 20 level. Now trading almost 30 points higher than before the 1964 distribution, the stock is certanly a split candidate.

If and when directors propose a split, I would not anticipate an exchange greater than three shares for one.

Davis

Brackett

Kelleher Lumber Sales at 15 Bay Street in San Rafael will take over the 5.5-acre property of Service Lumber Co. at Black Point next March and build a new 25,000-square-foot warehouse there.

Donald J. Kelleher, wwho heads Kelleher Lumber, said he will use the new Black Point facilities for his warehouse needs and retain his office in San Rafael on Bay Street.

Service Lumber Co., which has been in operation for about 29 years (first in San Francisco, then in Sausalito and the last eight years at Black Point), will then become the Kelleher Lumber Co.

Richard Bob Gehring of Healdsburg, who has owned Service Lumber Co. since 1944, will retire when Kelleher takes over next March.

CHARLES R. DAVIS of Novato, operations officer at Crocker Bank's 16th and Mission office, has been appointed operations officer at the bank's Market-Fourth branch in San Francisco.

Davis is a 19-year veteran with Crocker Bank. He was named operations officer of the bank's Tennessee Street office in Vallejo in 1961 and served in that capacity in Sacramento, Fresno and Eureka. In 1970, Davis was named assistant manager of the bank's Novato branch, and was transferred to San Francisco this year as operations officer at 16th and Mission.

ROBERT (BOB) BRACKETT, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.R. Brackett of Terra Linda, has been named associate director of publicity at Del Webb's Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas. He was formerly publicity director at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel in Stateline, Nev.

The 26-year-old graduate of San Jose State University rejoins the Del Webb organization after two years of service in the United States Army. Brackett is a 1964 graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and attended College of Marin.

LOCH LOMOND Live Bait Shop at Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor will be sold to new owners at the end of this month.

William S. Boyle of Santa Venetia, who has owned it about a year and a half, will sell to D. Keith Fraser of San Rafael and Arthur Donati of Corte Madera. Fraser is a teacher and coach at Terra Linda High School, and Donati works for a computer firm.

The new owners will call their shop the Loch Lomond Live Bait and Tackle Shop.

R.R. BUFFI of San Rafael has been appointed senior research associate, computer and systems division, at the Chevron Research Co. in Richmond.

Buffi wn his master's degree in mathematics from Stanford University in 1955, spend two years with the United States Army, and joined Chevron Research in 1957. In his new psotion, Buffi will direct the activities of the computer operations and programming section and will act as a consultant on computer techniques.

AXEL MIKKELSEN of San Rafael has been named director of passenger marketing in the Bay Area for Pan American World Airways.

Mikkelsen is part of a new executive team headed by M. R. (Dick) Denton, managing director at Pan American's San Francisco office.

WILLIAM BUSH, San Rafael realtor, was elected a director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards during the annual convention in Hawaii last month. He will serve a three-year term. He will tkae office during special ceremonies at NAREB's midwinter meeting in New Orleans Jan. 26 to 30, 1973.

HENRY L. HICKS, Novato realtor, announced the following four additions to the sales staff of Henry L. Hicks & Associates:

E. Don King, who just retired from Standard Oil Co. of California after 41 years, joined Hicks as an associate.

Joseph L. Schweitzer, former manager of the Novato branch of Bush Realty Inc., also joined as an associate, to specialize in Novato residential, land and income producing properties.

ANNEX MOTORS in San Rafael reported the sale of 51 Volvos in November, the best ever retail month for the dealer. In the 10-state western sales area, Volvo sales hit a new record, with 1,128 new cars sold, a 36 per cent increase over the same month in 1971.

Council Will Help Fund Study Of Dollar Estate

Preservationists last night won another victory in their battle to preserve the Robert Dollar estate in San Rafael as the San Rafael City Council pledged to help fund a feasibility study of the economic consequences of acquisition of the site.

Councilmen told representatives of Marin Heritage, a preservationist group, that the city will provide up to $1,000 on a matching fund basis to probe acquisition and possible uses of the historic estate on Mission Avenue.

The council asked the group to prepare a contract outlining the scope and method of the study for review on Jan. 2.

Mary C. Dekker, chairman of the group formerly known as the San Rafael Historic Preservation Committee, said the estate's recent inclusion in the National Registry of Historical Places qualified it for federal funding of up to $1,000 for the feasibility study.

Inclusion in the registry also qualifies the mansion and grounds for entry into 200 federal acquisition assistance programs, she said. She suggested that the mansion be turned into a museum or community cultural center.

Other representatives of Marin Heritage urged the council to help acquire the site as midtown open space for use by citizens throughout Marin, saying conversion of the facility into a cultural center would spur business by drawing tourists.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini said he would have to be convinced the property would pay its own way before he would vote to help finance acquisition. "The people who want to buy it must come up with most of the money," he said.

Preservationists have long fought plans by attorney Thomas R. Schaal to develop the property. Though previous development proposals by Schaal have been rejected by both the planning commission and the city council, the attorney has again filed for permits to proceed with development plans.

Schaal's latest proposal calls for a 72-unit apartment building and the renovation and relocation of the Dollar mansion on the site. The planning commission will consider the permit application at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 9.

In a related matter, the council postponed action on a proposal by Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan for an historic preservation ordinance which would create a five-member board charged with listing and preserving historic sites in the city.

The San Rafael City Council also:

CHARTER — Witnessed Boy Scout officials presenting the charter of San Rafael Explorer Post 303, a police cadet group, to Police Chief Joseph Brusatori.

BURGLAR ALARMS — Approved an ordinance regulating installation and variety of burglar and fire alarms in the city to insure quality control.

TERRA LINDA — Said one laborer and one maintenance supervisor will be hired to handle additional public works duty when Terra Linda is annexed to the city on Jan. 1. Public Works Director Norris M. Rawles had asked for four additional men.

BUNGALOW AVENUE — Upheld an appeal by Gary David of planning commission approval of a parking variance for a proposed house at 279 Bungalow Avenue. The council felt the design of a driveway would create traffic hazards and congestion.

FIRING — Affirmed after closed session the firing of police officer James Jackson for fraudulently trying to collect pay for a training session he failed to attend.

ASSESSMENT DISTRICTS — Set 8 p.m., Feb. 5, as the time of public hearings for the formation of the Bahia de Rafael Industrial Park and Mont Marin Open Space assessment plans for utility undergrounding assessment districts at Rafael Racquet Club Estates and in Villa Real.

OPEN SPACE — Said portions or all of the city's $2.5 million in open space bonds may be sold next spring.

RIGHTS COMMISSION — Struck from the agenda a request by the county Human Rights Commission for two city liaison officers after executive director Gerald J. Hood failed to appear for a second time.

BEAUTIFICATION — Heard Gary Bush, state highway district landscape architect, say the state will provide matching funds of about $9,000 for landscaping and erection of a city welcome sign at Second and Irwin streets "by the middle of 1973."

IMPACT REPORTS — Said the city will maintain its policy of requiring environmental impact reports for some development in spite of 120-day moratorium on such reports by the state legislature.

BIDS — Called for bids for a public toilet room addition to the San Rafael Library, and said bids will be opened at 3 p.m. Jan. 8 in city hall.

EXPENSE — Approved additional expense of $3,450 for a concrete stairway at 771 South San Pedro Road in connection with the San Pedro Road widening project.

CHULA VISTA — Approved a request by James Y. Meyers for two wood retaining walls at 85 Chula Vista Drive.

STOP SIGNS — Said stop signs will be placed on Lucas Drive at Montevideo Way southbound, and on Regina Way at Elda Drive.

BANKING — Called for bids by city banks on implementing a new city banking procedure that consolidates banking accounts maintained by the finance department.

LABOR RELATIONS — Approved a labor relations resolution which provides for majority representation of employee bargaining units and bans strikes by miscellaneous employees. Striking by safety personnel is already prohibited by state law.

SMOKING — Prohibited smoking in council chambers during council meetings.

FIRE COMMISSION — Said a seat on the city's fire commission, vacated by the death of Harry A. Barbier, will be filled by Jan. 2.

REDEVELOPMENT — Heard Redevelopment Agency Director and Asst. City Mgr. William J. Bielser declare the city's redevelopment plan was filed with the county assessor, the secretary of state and the state board of equalization last Wednesday. The action freezes assessed valuation in the redevelopment area retroactive to March, 1972, Bielser said.

CITIZENS COMMITTEE — Asked citizens wishing to apply to the city's 60-member citizens committee on the general plan to do so within the next 30 days.

APPOINTMENT — Appointed Robert C. Cary, Monty J. Martin, David M. Salaun and Clyde C. Zimmerman as auxiliary police officers.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Jan. 2.

Fund Lack Seems To Rule Out Park Purchase In Canal Area

The pleas of San Rafael's Canal area residents for a central city park at 310-340 Canal Street appeared to be in vain last night as the San Rafael City Council declared there is no money to buy the site. (Other San Rafael City Council stories, page 1)

The council took no action on residents' demands it acquire the site and instead accepted a parks commission report which says the parcel is uniquely situated for park purposes but that there are no funds.

The council's action came amid charges by one canal resident that inadequate planning had turned the neighborhood into a "high-priced ghetto".

"The planning department is a rubber-stamp for development," declared Ben Brinkworth of 349 Canal Street, suggesting that high-salaried planners should be replaced with a "clerk and an approval stamp."

Brinkworth said he opposed plans for a 96-unit apartment development on the parcel, citing density and traffic congestion. The planning commission has deferred action on the proposal for the six-structure development pending city council review of neighbors' objections.

Brinkworth, who has led the fight for a park on the 2.5-acre parcel, said there is "zero open space" in the Canal area and claimed that thousands of residents have been grossly over looked by the planning department and commission.

He said an alternative 17-acre park site at the corner of Canal Street and Kerner Boulevard was marshland and nothing more than a "pie in the sky" proposal.

The parks commission has recommended that the 17-acre site be considered for acquisition instead of the 2.5-acre parcel.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini, angered at Brinkworth's denunciation of city planners, said current city personnel had nothing to do with decisions made long ago that have left the Canal area in a congested condition.

"A park in the canal area is the council's and the park commission's highest priority," he said. "But that site (310-340 Canal Street) would cost about $350,000 for 2.5 acres alone." Bettini said the eventual merger of the city's sanitation district with the Ross Valley Sanitation District will leave about 25 acres of sanitation district land in the Canal area in open space.

The mayor rejected suggestions by residents and colleague Lawrence E. Mulryan that redevelopment funds be used to acquire the 2.5-acre site. "If we included this type of park in redevelopment, all the board of supervisors would vote against the plan," he said.

Mulryan said the site was appropriate for park purposes and urged redevelopment monies be considered for its acquisition regardless of the board of supervisors.

CHRISTMAS IN THE HOLY LAND — 1972

As Christmas 1972 comes to the Holy Land, the changes wrought in the nearly 2,000 years since Jesus walked there obscure some of the paths He trod. Yet there remains many of the landmarks — like the Mount of Olives viewed from above the walled city of old Jerusalem — that still evoke memories of His words and works.

Safe Apollo Landing Ends Moon Program

Scientists Believe Cargo Most Valuable Returned

ABOARD USS TICONDEROGA (UPI) — The last men of Apollo landed safely in the South Pacific today with the moon prize they sought and a treasure of souvenirs marking the end of an era in which man conquered the moon.

Three orange and white striped parachutes lowered Apollo 17's command module into the gentle seas at 2:25 p.m. EST in full view of television cameras aboard the recovery ship.

The bullseye landing was a fitting finale to the last Apollo moonflight.

"America is stable one," exclaimed Cernan after the spacecraft hit the water. That meant the capsule did not overturn as many previous Apollos have.

"The crew is go," Cernan said.

The aircraft carrier Ticonderoga stood by to retrieve the astronauts and start them on the way home to Houston Thursday to join their families and friends for the Christmas holidays.

The moon explorers slashed into upper fringes of earth's atmosphere traveling 6.8 miles a second and decelerated quickly to a gentle parachute landing in just 13 minutes. It may be decades before men fly that fast again.

As the last Apollo mission neared earth, the space agency announced that the moon explorers had on board their spaceship 50 Apollo-17 silver medallions, 24 moon flag pins, 10 sets of wings, 25 American flag lapel pins, more than 2,000 flags, 440 Apollo patches and other assorted memorabilia, in addition to a dozen personal mementoes each. The agency said the distribution of the souvenirs would be announced after the explorers' return.

The astronauts will be back home in Houston Thursday, in time to spend the Christmas holidays with their families.

HOME DESTROYED

Shelter, Clothing Sought By Lagunitas Fire Victims

By MARY LEYDECKER

While most Marin residents bustled about, finishing up Christmas shopping today, one little family from Lagunitas was desperately trying to find such necessities as shelter and clothing.

Patricia Evansco, young mother of three children, lost virtually everything she owned Saturday in a fire which destroyed the old building next to the Lagunitas post office, in which she rented an apartment.

"We have nothing," she said yesterday.

Like many people who have gone through a tragedy, Mrs. Evansco remembered what seemed like little things first.

"My daughter (Denise, 10) had earned some money and bought a Barbie camper. . . that went along with everything else," she said sadly.

Since the fire, which also burned two other apartments, Mrs. Evansco has been staying with her mother in Richmond, while the children are with relatives and friends.

To compound her problems, Mrs. Evansco's car had the transmission fail, and she is having difficulty getting back and forth to Marin. She works at Purcell's shoe repair shop in Fairfax, where she is especially needed because of the owner's recent death.

Yesterday, Mrs. Evansco made rounds of official agencies, trying to find some help, but the picture was not encouraging.

He said he thought his agency could help Mrs. Evansco with such items as bedding, "but we don't have enough money for large items like furniture."

He said the Department of Public Social Services was going to give Mrs. Evansco $100 for clothing for herself and the children, since she had been receiving aid to supplement her small income. The welfare department may also be able to help with some furnishings.

Braden said Mrs. Evansco had been living in county-leased housing and it might be possible to find her another such unit but, in the meantime, she faces the same discouraging picture

Staggered Hub Sewer Repair Plan

By PAT PERRY

In an effort to save the life of downtown San Anselmo, the Ross Valley Sanitary District board last night decided to stagger its plans to dig up the city's central streets for sewer installation over two years. (Another sanitary district story, page 3.)

The first phase, to begin next summer, will be to install the 36-inch diameter sewer trunkline from Bolinas Avenue as far as Tunstead Avenue. The 14-foot-deep trench for the project will be constructed in the westerly lanes of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard between Ross Avenue and Tunstead, and mean only a three-day disruption to the downtown area in crossing Tunstead.

The second phase won't start until the summer of 1974. Then, in a concentrated all-out effort the rest of downtown San Anselmo Avenue — the city's major shopping area — will be dug up block-by-block for about 14 days.

Directors told District Engineer J. Warren (Ed) Nute to get an estimate of costs for double and triple shift working for the San Anselmo Avenue stretch "so maybe it can be done in two working weeks and the merchants could take a two-week vacation."

The concessions were in response to appeals from the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, which claimed the district's original plans to dig up downtown for some five months next summer "would kill the town."

At a meeting with Nute on Nov. 17, San Anselmo businessmen claimed 50 per cent of them would go out of business if the five-month project schedule went through. They asked the district to investigate alternate methods of getting the job done.

Last night, Nute presented the staggered plan, to the board. He thought the 14-day all-out effort on San Anselmo Avenue in 1974 might satisfy some of the businessmen's fears, and suggested it would give the merchants and the city time to work out some extra parking on the land at the corner of Sir Francis Drake and Center boulevards.

The district itself might face possible trouble too, he warned, since it must file an environmental impact statement for the project. In addition to the impacts on the environment, the statement must consider the social and economic impacts, he advised.

Admitting the businessmen "do have a point" in their concerns over the fragile nature of the town's recent revival, Nute warned directors: "When we come to the environmental impact report we do have to consider these kinds of things, you might have to assign a social cost . . . how many people would go out of business . . . things like this would be very hard to tell."

The sewer trunkline has been ordered by the Regional Water Quality Control Board to eliminate bypass sewers which pollute creeks and to replace the 1920s era, 21-inch concrete pipe through the Ross Valley.

The sewer trunkline will be installed through Ross along Shady Lane next spring at a cost now estimated at $425,000, hooking up with the San Anselmo section at Bolinas Avenue.

Admitting they were troubled at the potential impact on downtown San Anselmo, the sanitary district directors quizzed Nute on ways to lessen the blow.

Director George C. Davison asked if the contractor could assign several crews . . . "tell him he's going to have to go to work in more than one location, start in two or three places. We

Revamping Of Expense Account Spending Asked By Councilman

By NELS JOHNSON

Expense account spending by San Rafael city officials may be far more costly than expense vouchers reveal, a San Rafael councilman declared last night as he proposed a revamping of handling such spending.

A $3 luncheon may cost the city as much as $19, according to Councilman John A. Miskimen, who attributed the hidden cost to the added expense incurred by city processing of expense checks. "It costs about $16 every time you write a check," he told startled colleagues.

Finance Director John B. Averett confirmed the revelation, saying studies of corporate finance procedure in big business have shown the cost of a $3 voucher mushrooms as it is processed and consumes time and effort of financial officials.

Miskimen suggested that the council eliminate the possibility of such iceberg expenses by alloting each councilman a flat monthly fee of about $20 for expenses incurred in day-to-day activities, and council colleagues agreed to study the proposal during budget hearings in June.

Miskimen — a member of the city's finance committee who has been studying city financial matters in the wake of Independent-Journal accounts of city expense procedures — also suggested that the city's method of reviewing claims at council meetings is meaningless.

"The city has already taken a legal obligation to purchase an item when we see a claim," he said. The councilman suggested the council meet on a weekly basis to approve "cash revolving account" expenses before they are made. Presently, the revolving account vouchers represent expenses already made in the preceding two weeks, he said.

Miskimen said the council finance committee is now provided with a summary sheet documenting revolving expenses "although we did not used to be" provided with a summary.

He called for careful review of all staff expenditures by the city manager and finance director, and declared that the finance director "should operate outside the normal chain of command of the city manager."

"We have to give the city treasurer and finance director (Averett fills both positions) a clear understanding that he is to refer to the finance committee any suggested changes for the handling of funds," Miskimen said. "Any impropriety he may even suspect" in expense account spending should be referred to the finance committee, he said.

Averett told the I-J last September that he had no authority to overrule expenses by city leaders. If funds are available in a particular account for an expense approved by City Mgr. James H. McCown, the city treasurer must issue reimbursements, Averett said then.

"Everyone should have someone checking on his expenditures," Miskimen said. Currenty, McCown and finance committeemen (Miskimen and Councilman Fred E. Jensen) approve their own expenses.

The councilman said it was not his intent to discourage

Truman Kidney Ills Reported Improved

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Doctors treating Harry S Truman said today the seriously ill former President's kidney function improved and he was aware that people were around him.

"He follows people's movements with his eyes, but has not spoken to them," said Research Hospital spokesman John Dreves at a morning medical briefing.

"Kidney output has increased during the last 24 hours," he said. "He continues to receive adequate nutrition even though protein intake remains curtailed."

Dreves said Truman, 88, had his second straight restful night and "seems more alert this morning."

At 9 a.m. EST, Truman's blood pressure was 140 over 60, pulse was 80, respiration was 24 and his temperature was 97 degrees.

Late Monday night, Dreves said Truman's kidney function had dropped to less than 10 per cent effective.

Dreves added, "10 per cent is the critical point. Below 10 per cent is inadequate." He said he could not be more specific.

Reporters asked him how the 88-year-old former President was able to hold on day after day and Dreves said, "That's just President Truman. I can't define that."

Dreves said, "fluid in his lungs has not increased. His heart is weak but essentially unchanged. He is still semiconscious and in no apparent pain. His vital signs remain stable and within normal limits."

The 33rd President, who was hospitalized Dec. 5 with a weak heart, hardening of the arteries and lung congestion, developed serious kidney trouble six days ago and medicine has failed to improve them. A kidney machine was ruled out as being too dangerous in view of his weak heart.

Doctors reduced Truman's liquid food intake Monday by a third, from 1,500 cubic centimeters to 1,000—slightly more than a quart—to reduce the workload on his kidneys.

U.S. Command Confirms Raids Continues Over Hanoi, Haiphong

SAIGON (UPI) — The United States has carried out the heaviest bombing raids of the war against the Hanoi-Haiphong area, Hanoi Radio reported today. It said the strikes were in their third day and a U.S. Command spokesman confirmed they were still going on.

The raids Monday night and today, Saigon time, were the most costly of the war. Two $8 million B52s were shot down, apparently by Russian-made SAM missiles, and one $15 million F111 was shot down apparently by ground fire.

Hanoi Radio said six crewmen of a B52 were captured when the bomber was shot down near the North Vietnamese capital. The U.S. Command said seven fliers were rescued and eight were missing.

There were indications the United States had used all 100 of its available B52s against the Hanoi area, the first time the big planes have bombed in the immediate area of Hanoi. In addition scores of fighterbombers from Thailand and from U.S. 7th Fleet carriers flew through rain clouds and gale winds to hit the north.

Although there were no official figures available it appeared that the Monday night - Tuesday morning raid could have been the single largest of this or any war.

In World War II the Allies mounted a number of 1,000 plane raids against Germany—raids which eclipsed the German attack on London known as the "Blitz"—but those planes carried between 2.5 and 6 tons of bombs each.

Military observers estimated the B52s, which carry 30 tons of bombs each, and the fighter-bombers which can carry eight tons each hit the Hanoi-Haiphong area with upwards of 6,000 tons of bombs.

By coincidence, the raids occurred as Le Duc Tho, the man who negotiated on a ceasefire agreement with Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, had just returned to Hanoi, a North Vietnamese spokesman said in Paris.

Radio Hanoi quoted the North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry as claiming "hundreds of plane sorties, including B52 strategic bombers" repeatedly hit North Vietnam from 1915 hours of Dec. 18, 1972, to the morning of today, Dec. 19. Subsequent broadcasts spoke of the bombings being in the third day.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedham said the U.S. planes were striking targets in North Vietnam that had not been hit previously. He declined to cite any specific targets. Electrical plants, truck parks and warehouses in the cities of Hanoi and Haiphong were not struck at least in the past because of the high concentration of civilians in those areas.

Also not attacked in the past were North Vietnam's Defense Ministry in downtown Hanoi and the Gia Lam Airport, used for both military and civilian aircraft.

Friedheim said that during the eight-week bombing halt that ended Monday many transport lines, bridges and oil pipelines north of the 20th Parallel had been repaired and put back into service. He indicated such targets were being hit again to take them out of service.

Council Deadlocks Again On Filling Barbier Seat

The San Rafael City Council last night again failed to fill the council seat vacated by the death of Harry A. Barbier after a second closed session on the matter produced no change in deadlocked ballots cast previously. (Other San Rafael City Council stories, page 39.)

Instead, the council called a special election — to coincide with the expiration of Barbier's term on April 17 — to fill the seat.

The council last night took no formal vote on appointment of a fifth member, but determined after an informal discussion that only the voters could decide the matter.

No councilman shifted from votes made on Dec. 4, when planning commissioner Thomas R. O'Toole received two votes and John A. Starkweather, president of the Dixie School District board, and Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, received one vote apiece.

Other candidates who applied for the post are: Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; Carl J. Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School; Gar C. May, an optometrist and James Dougan and Albert J. Boro, San Rafael planning commissioners.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Policeman Indicted

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A grand jury yesterday charged a suspended policeman with beating and shooting George C. Freeman, assistant chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America, when their cars bumped together in the Lincoln Tunnel.

Freeman was cleared of counter charges that he tried to run down the off-duty patrolman, John V. Reig, 21.

The grand jury named Reig in an eight-count indictment charging with with assault with intent to kill and unlawful possession of a firearm. Reig was suspended 17 days after the Nov. 11 incident.

Terrorism Action

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. General Assembly sidetracked a U.S. effort last night to set up the machinery for combatting world terrorism by voting instead to create a committee to study the problem.

It was the Assembly's final political action of 1972.

By a vote of 76-35, with 17 abstentions, the Assembly established a 35-nation committee to consider terrorism. The move killed any prospect for early action on the issue.

Another Killing

BELFAST (UPI) — Three gunmen kidnaped and killed a member of the Northern Ireland police authority late yesterday, increasing the death toll there in the past eight days to 12. Gunmen wounded two other persons in separate shooting incidents earlier in the day.

Police said they found the body of William Johnston in the back seat of an abandoned car on a country road near the border dividing Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Pilgrim Protection

TEL AVIV (UPI) — A military source said today Israel would take security precautions "as strong and as good as we are able" to guard Christian pilgrims against Arab guerrilla attacks in the Holy Land during the Christmas season.

The statement came as the Tourism Ministry predicted an estimated 20,000 visitors would be thronging to Bethlehem on Jordan's occupied West Bank for Christmas Eve and Day.

"I have no intention of frightening tourists or pilgrims," the military source said. "But it is clear that we have to take more precautions than usual" during the holiday season.

More Heroin Lost

NEW YORK (UPI) — With 80 pounds of the famous "French Connection" heroin admittedly missing, the Police Department yesterday found a discrepancy in its records leaving another 15 pounds unaccounted for.

A former police official said the difference of 15 pounds between what his report on the 1962 drug case said and the amount turned into the police laboratories was caused by his estimating and not weighing the total amount of heroin confiscated.

The heroin in question was seized Feb. 24, 1962, in a Bronx raid which helped break a smuggling ring that became the basis of a novel and the Academy Award-winning movie, "The French Connection."

New Wage Pitch

DETROIT (UPI) — A Phase III wage-price — the primary objective of which would be the elimination of all controls and the return to "the discipline of the competitive market" — was proposed today by General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg.

As envisioned by Gerstenberg, Phase III would set "sensible and understandable" criteria for both wages and prices — 5½ per cent for annual increases in wages and 2½ per cent per year for prices.

Only price or wage hikes that exceed these criteria would be subject to review by a review board of presidentially appointed government officials. Once inflation is moderated, he said, controls would be terminated.

Tragedy For Senator

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — Nealia Biden, whose husband Joseph R. Biden Jr. claimed she was the driving force behind his election last month as the second youngest member in the history of the Senate, died yesterday in a traffic accident.

Amy Biden, 1, the couple's youngest of three children, was also killed when the station wagon driven by Mrs. Biden was struck in the side by a truck loaded with corn cobs and slammed 150 feet into a stand of trees.

The truck turned over and Biden campaign literature and corn cobs littered the suburban highway. State police said the truck driver, Curtis C. Dunn, 33, of Avondale, Pa., escaped injury.

The other children were hospitalized — Joseph III, 3, with leg injuries and Hunter, 2, with head injuries.

Soviet Budget Talk

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Supreme Soviet (parliament) debated a 1973 budget today calling for expenditures of $219.6 billion and emphasis on civilian spending instead of military.

The Communist Party's ruling central committee already has endorsed it.

Thus approval by the 1,517 members of the two houses of parliament was a foregone conclusion. The Supreme Soviet has not rejected a government proposal in 40 years.

No Pay Hikes For Sweepers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Board of Supervisors reversed itself Monday and decided not to boost the pay of San Francisco's 187 streetsweepers.

"This issue has generated tremendous public comment and discontent," Supervisor Peter Tamaras declared before the 10-0 vote.

Previously the board had voted to boost the pay for sweepers to $25 a day in six months.

Developer Lawsuits Are Settled

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —In a $58.5 million settlement of six lawsuits, Boise-Cascade Corp. agreed Monday to refund purchase costs on demand and make promised improvements on 20 "recreational" subdivisions in California and Nevada.

"It is a complete settlement as far as we are concerned," said California Attorney General Evelle Younger, who filed some of the suits.

"Those who want out are getting out and others who didn't want out but wanted improvements are getting those."

He said the company agreed to return $24 million to buyers who want cash, to spend $21.5 million on administration and maintenance of the properties, and to spend another $13 million to complete certain portions of the projects.

Boise-Cascade was accused in two federal suits and four state suits of misrepresenting the lots in some cases with questionable advertising.

Boise-Cascade sold about $360 million in recreational lots at 19 projects in California and one at Incline, Nev., between 1967 and last July, when it discontinued its realty business.

Younger said the settlement will need approval from six different courts but no difficulty is anticipated. Then, he said, notice will be sent out from the courts advising buyers of their choices.

Younger said Boise-Cascade will put $32.5 million in a trust fund to augment the agreement, which was announced jointly with District Attorneys William O'Malley of Contra Costa County and Harold Berliner of Nevada County.

The attorney general said that after agreement was reached between the company and state that Boise-Cascade's selling practices were illegal, "they acted in a very responsible manner."

George McGown, vice president of Boise Cascade and general manager of its realty group, insisted the settlement was not a determination of wrongdoing on Boise Cascade's part or by its salesmen.

He said the disbursements will fall within reserves created earlier this year as part of a $200 million extraordinary charge and will not be deducted from current or future earnings. The write-off, announced in July, resulted primarily from the company's decision to get out of land sales.

Nixon Picks Mother Of Five For Cabinet

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Anne Armstrong, an attractive brunette mother of five who holds a Phi Beta Kappa key, rides horses and speaks Spanish, has been appointed to the highest government post any woman has held in 12 years.

President Nixon Monday named Mrs. Armstrong, who celebrates her 45th birthday next week, to be a presidential counselor.

The post is of cabinet rank, and the highest job held by any woman since Oveta Culp Hobby was Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower administration.

"It is a tremendous honor to be appointed counselor to the President, and I look forward to the challenge such a position offers," Mrs. Armstrong said.

She will assume her new duties Jan. 19 when her tenure ends as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

In another administration change, the Washington Post reported today that John G. Veneman was resigning as undersecretary of health, education and welfare to re-enter California politics. His replacement in the No. 2 HEW post, the newspaper said, will be Frank C. Carlucci, deputy budget director.

Veneman may run for lieutenant governor of California, the report said. Carlucci formerly headed the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Mrs. Armstrong is a native of New Orleans. She is a graduate of the exclusive Foxcroft School in Virginia's foxhunting district and Vassar College where she earned the Phi Beta Kappa key for academic excellence.

She has lived with hus husband Tobin Armstrong on the Armstrong Ranch in south Texas for the past 22 years, winning two terms on the local school board and serving in a variety of state GOP posts including national committeewoman.

Reagan Puts Signature On Tax Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Reagan and the Democratic leaders of the Assembly went their separate philosophical ways today after formal signing of the $1.1 billion school finance and property tax relief bill which they cosponsored.

Reagan signed the massive tax bill yesterday in Los Angeles with Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and state Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles topping the list of state officials joining the Republican governor in the smiling ceremonies.

The bill gives local schools their biggest-ever increase in state support and cuts the average homeowner's property tax by about $140 a year. That is paid for by a one cent per dollar increase in the sales tax and a 1.4 per cent hike in bank and corporation tax rates.

Now Reagan's top tax advisers are working on his proposal to give most of the state's estimated $700 million surplus back to taxpayers in an income tax cut or rebate.

Moretti and other Democratic leaders are talking about other new programs the surplus could buy. And they see an income tax hike, not a cut, in the future if the state Supreme Court rules that the Reagan-Moretti tax bill hasn't done enough to equalize the differences between California's richest and poorest school districts.

But they were unanimous in praise of the bipartisan tax bill they hammered out together in the bill-signing ceremonies at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Reagan called the bill "a great victory for the legislative process" and said it "represents the first decisive victory in several decades to reform California's antiquated tax structure."

"This landmark legislation not only reduces the heavy property tax burden on our beleaguered homeowners, but even more important, it guarantees that homeowners taxes will be held down in the years to come," Reagan said.

Moretti, from Van Nuys, said final passage of the measure after months of negotiation "shows what can be achieved when various political factions want to work together."

Nominee For Post Knocks Press Probe

DALLAS (UPI) —Texas oilman William P. Clements, President Nixon's nominee for deputy secretary of defense, said Monday reporters should have "dug a little deeper" before publishing details about a six-year-old suit accusing him of conspiracy and fraud.

Clements called the reports "unfair and misleading" and denied that his drilling company was involved in any conspiracy to hide $7 million in profits on an Argentine oil well contract.

The suit, filed in 1966, names Clements, Southeastern Drilling Co., and three other officials and stockholders of Southeastern as defendants. Southeastern is a subsidiary of Sedco, Inc., which Clements owns.

The suit claims the defendants netted $25 million on contracts for drilling 1,000 Argentina oil wells, but that they then claimed a profit of only $18 million. The $7 million discrepancy is important because Clements promised to give two men involved in the deal 20 per cent of the net profits.

"If only the reporters had dug a little deeper they could have easily found out about the entire transaction," Clements said.

The suit has gone through one trial and two appeals and apparently is due for another trial in federal court in the spring.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the Nixon administration knew about the suit before they named Clements to the No. 2 post in the Pentagon.

"It was our opinion nothing contained in these actions would in any way disqualify Mr. Clements from serving in the administration," Ziegler said.

Clements said he did not expect the suit to hinder his confirmation by the Senate "because the actual facts of the case have been known for years."

The suit was filed by Antonio A. Diaz, a Buenos Aires businessman, who also was supposed to receive a certain share of the profits. But Clements said two other men involved in the deal, Charles R. O'Neal of Washington and William N. Dillin of Corpus Christi, Tex., were behind recent reports of the lawsuit. Both men have since given up their U.S. citizenship.

"The source of this information is two disgruntled American malcontents both of whom have had sizeable tax liens against them," Clements, 55, said.

"All parties agreed to take the audit of Price-Waterhouse as the final word on what the profits were," he said.

Car Pool Lanes May Be Booted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The chairman of the State Toll Bridge Authority says a special meeting may be held before January 1 to vote on whether to discontinue the special car pool lanes on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Chairman Frank J. Walton says the lanes for car pools of three or more persons have done little to reduce congestion during early morning commute hours.

The experiment was started March 1. The center lanes of the span approach were first free to car pools but a $1-a-month fee was added later.

Lucas Valley Development Is Planned

Owners of a vast stretch of undeveloped land in Upper Lucas Valley have prepared a general plan calling for a 745 unit development, landowner representative Albert Bianchi has announced.

Proposed are 180 single-family residences, 425 townhouse units and 140 garden apartments on 2,732 acres owned by the Alfred Luiz and Edward J. Grady families, he said. Some 370 units are proposed for the 1,118-acre Grady property and 375 units for the 1,614-acre Luiz property, he said.

The parcels are located beyond Marinwood on both sides of Lucas Valley Road.

Bianchi said that the proposed general plan, drawn by the Sausalito planning firm of Sasaki and Walker, would leave about 93 per cent of the acreage in open space and includes a "convenience village center" or country-store shoppers' facility.

The Marin County Planning Commission will consider the general plan at 9 a.m. Jan. 8.

Bianchi said that Lucas Valley homeowners, long concerned with the future of the property, had expressed "substantial agreement" to the proposed general plan. Homeowners at a meeting on Monday called for a greater housing mix, fewer apartment units, and asked that development be limited to low-lying areas.

Bianchi, who said up to 1,350 units currently were allowed on the land under current agricultural zoning, said most units are proposed for areas lying below the 240-foot level of the area, which is marked with picturesque hillsides and ridges.

Joan Fernandez, board member of the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association, said her group "agreed in concept" with the proposal but is urging that the 370-unit density proposed for the Grady property be halved. "We think that 370 units is too high a density on that difficult terrain," she said.

She said the association will meet again with Bianchi and planning consultants prior to the Jan. 8 hearing.

Homeowners have been seeking to rezone the property to planned residential development to limit development of the area, she said.

Agency Is Firm On Plant's Buffer Zone

The Ross Valley Sanitary District board last night stood firm in its decision to condemn 41 acres of land around its sewage treatment plant on the San Quentin Peninsula, despite pleas from a Larkspur businessman who intends to develop a restaurant and museum in the neighboring Remillard brick kiln. (Another sanitary district story, page 1.)

Robert H. Lee, a Larkspur city councilman, suggested 41 acres was "excessive" as a buffer zone for the proposed new subregional treatment plant.

"You only need 10 acres, I've never seen a treatment plant that had 30 acres as a buffer zone," he complained.

But the board remained adamant. President Eugene Ostaggi said the land surrounding the plant would prevent "someone looking down upon it and imagining odors."

Already the Ross Valley Sanitary District's plant on the peninsula handles sewage from the entire Ross Valley basin, he said, "over half the population of Marin county.

"It's a very important thing . . . if we don't take care of these people the regulatory bodies will make sure we do."

Lee said the treatment plant and his proposed restaurant "could live together compatibly" (the Remillard brick kiln is included in the lands to be compulsorily purchased by the district in its condemnation suits ordered Nov. 20.)

Referring to Larkspur's recent rezoning of the peninsula for a mammoth apartment and commercial development on the T.I. Properties holdings at the Hutchinson Quarry and Remillard lands, member Peter A. Ribar added:

"This subregional treatment plant is a necessity for all of Central and southern Marin. We are going to take ultra-conservative measures to see that service is provided — it's an essential governmental service regardless of T.I. Properties or any restaurant."

Director George C. Davison said it was natural that the sanitary district "is on the defensive". Claiming that the treatment plant was there first, he said he didn't think housing was compatible next to "the sewage of 150,000 people."

The district will have a big public investment to protect he said, and didn't want to face possible law suits from neighboring commercial and housing interests.

The Ross Valley Sanitary District board also:

INSURANCE — Agreed to pay an additional $976 on its annual insurance policy premium with Pacific Indemnity for comprehensive liability coverage, paying up to $2 million in bodily injury and $1,100,000 in property damage.

CORTE MADERA — Noted indignantly that the Corte Madera Sanitary District hadn't answered its letter of complaint about septic sewage and excess flow and the only way they learned the town had installed a chlorinator was by reading it in the Independent-Journal; heard from District engineer J. Warren Nute that Corte Madera has been pumping twice the permitted flow under its contract with the district, and decided to wait until the end of the month for an answer.

CONTRACT — Agreed to pay Nute $30,000 for engineering studies, and $6,000 for design for the installation of the state-mandated trunk sewer line through Ross to be constructed next spring at a cost of $425,000, deviating from its original route along the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project because the project was delayed by the Valentine suit against Ross; the original creekside route would have cost $362,000 said Nute.

JOINT POWERS — Delayed acting on a joint powers agreement that the San Rafael Sanitation District had already signed because the Southern Marin sewerage agency (Improvement District "A") hasn't ratified it yet; the agreement is for consolidation of sewage treatment for all of Southern and Central Marin, in the proposed subregional plant on the San Quentin Peninsula.

PERMITS — Heard from District Mgr. Ned J. Ongaro that the state Regional Water Quality Control Board has assigned the district 1,099 new single-family sewer connection permits for 1972.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to its next regular meeting on Jan. 2 at 8 p.m. at the district office.

Deadline On Out Of Town Mail At Hand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U. S. Postal Service says time is diminishing for cards and letters to reach their destinations before Christmas.

In fact, Postmaster General E. T. Klassen said Monday that the only out of town mail delivery that can be guaranteed now is airmail.

Klassen said the flow of mail has been good and the "Christmas Communication Center" believes that if persons who still have local mail send it no later than Thursday, than all holiday mail should be delivered before Christmas.

Fisher Hits Casino With A Big Suit

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Eddie Fisher filed a $2 million breach of contract suit against Caesars Palace Hotel Monday, charging he was only paid for three weeks of a 17-week engagement in 1968.

Fisher is seeking $1 million in damages plus an additional $1 million on grounds the contract also stipulated he could not perform at any other resort in the Las Vegas area until the contract expired Oct. 5, 1972.

Rainy, Warm Holiday Seen For North Bay

The temperatures will rise and the rain will continue to fall and the outlook for Marin and Southern Sonoma counties is for a wet and warm Christmas.

The weatherman predicts a new storm front moving in from the Hawaiian Islands which is expected to dump even more rain on the soggy Bay Area tonight.

This week's series of abnormally high tides combined with rainfall caused flooding of Lowry's Yacht Harbor in San Rafael at high tide this morning, and cut the harbor's electricity supply.

Last night at about 8:30 o'clock, the state Division of Highway's Petaluma office reported three minor landslides on Shoreline Highway near Bolinas. The rocks and mud were cleared "almost immediately" said officers, and caused no problem to travelers.

Temperatures are 30 and 40 degrees higher this week than they were in last week's record-breaking freeze. The overnight low of 57 degrees in San Rafael compares to the reading of 24 degrees on Monday night last week.

Heavy rain fell over both counties last night, dumping 1.4 inches on the Tamalpais Valley; 1.19 inches on Bolinas; 1.05 inches in Sausalito, and an inch on Mill Valley. By noon today the rain was drying up, leaving a warm moist fog smothering the hills.

There are those who blame the moon landing for the contrary weather of the past two weeks.

However, these pundits can find little to back up their theories. When Apollo 11 went up in July 1969 the weatherman predicted a hot spell, but clippings from the Independent-Journal indicate it never materialized.

Last year Apollo 16's landing came during one of the driest years on record in Marin — but it was dry well before and after the April landing.

At the time of today's landing the weather was far from gorgeous in Marin and Southern Sonoma. . .but it may well have been balmy in Tahiti, and the astronauts zipped over there too.

must keep the time limit down."

Director A.N. Nipper asked if Nute's estimate of 14 days for the 1974 stage included weekends, and when Nute said it didn't, suggested an intervening weekend thrown in with two working weeks might cut down the project from three to two weeks disruption.

Nute said the deep trench, which will require shoring, would be dug and closed up again block by block, but Nipper said:

"If blocks are closed it will damage the blocks that aren't closed just as seriously; why not put a crew in each of three blocks?"

Nute said that method "would be quite a mess."

Directors responded that the town will be "quite a mess" either way.

Director Peter A. Ribar also worried about the extra cost of double shifts. Nute said running double shifts on the second-phase on San Anselmo Avenue in 1974 would increase the estimated cost of that section from $105,000 to $131,000, with construction starting at about 5 a.m. and ending at 9 p.m.

He had talked to contractors about night shifts — as suggested by the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, but the costs would be prohibitive; it would be dangerous, and would necessitate returns during daylight to pour concrete.

Board president Eugene Ostaggi said the district would agree to the two-phase construction period, and would let two separate contracts, one for the stretch from Bolinas Avenue to Tunstead in 1973, and a second from Tunstead to Sanders Avenue in 1974.

Nute was instructed to investigate costs of two or three crews working simultaneously, and report back to the board's Jan. 2 meeting. After that he will meet with the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce and report the district's actions.

Youngsters Are Dug Out

Two Novato youngsters, trapped in mud along the highway bypass project in Novato, were rescued yesterday afternoon by workmen from the Freeman-Sondgroth Construction Co., co-contractors on the project.

Bobby Yoe, 7, and his sister, Carrie, 9, of 8 Harkle Road were in mud up to their waists "and beyond," and workmen dug them free with shovels, according to Fire Chief Jack W. Kidder.

The youngsters were uninjured, Kidder said. The incident, reported at 3:25 p.m., occurred on the new stretch of road between Harkle Road and Franklin Avenue.

Two Differ On Firing Of Fireman

An Alto fireman, discharged yesterday, has declared his dismissal reprisal for union activity, a claim rejected by the fire chief.

Chief Carl Heynen Jr. said Ray Giacomino, 28, a probationary employee, lost his job because he didn't seem to fit in," not because of union activity.

Heynen said Giacomino's charges against the department are those of a "disgruntled" man. Giacomino had said he was dismissed because of his efforts to win collective bargain rights for Alto firemen.

Heynen said Giacomino was notified yesterday morning, after working for the department about six or seven months, that he was being dismissed. He had been on a one-year probationary period, the chief said.

Yesterday afternoon, according to the chief, a letter arrived from Local 400 of the Civil Service Association, asking a meeting with commissioners to discuss the possibility of the Alto firemen becoming unionized.

Chief Heynen said at least one other of the department's 12 firemen was also interested in seeing a union formed but "that is their prerogative."

Giacomino claimed it was the letter that had prompted his firing.

The district's fire commissioners will probably discuss the union matter at a meeting on Jan. 4, the chief said.

Fairy Tales Set For Mill Valley

The Pyramus and Thisby Co. of Berkeley will perform fairy tales, animal stories and Mother Goose rhymes at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Old Mill School in Mill Valley.

The performance by the company, formerly the children's theater wing of the Berkeley Repertory Theater, will be sponsored by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts.

Rezoning To Double City Size

The Rohnert Park City Council last night rezoned 680 acres for future development that will double the size of the city.

Shapell Industries of Northern California received zoning for houses, apartments, townhouses and a small shopping center on the 680 acres north of Hinebaugh Creek.

City Clerk Kathryn Logue said plans also include three elementary school sites, a junior high school, a 9.6-acre community park and 40 to 50 acres of small parks, open space and trails.

Developer James Rogers said work would begin soon on the first phase of single-family homes.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

FEES — Approved a $75 increase in the bedroom tax to be used for public improvements such as a library and fire station. Tax on a three-bedroom home will be $350, with $250 allotted for parks, $25 for a football stadium and $75 for improvements.

PLANNING — Appointed Arthur Hollingsworth to replace James Cronin on the planning commission in January. Councilman Vernon P. Smith abstained, saying Cronin should have been reappointed.

CONFLICT — Heard Smith question whether Planning Commissioner Raymond Goff has a conflict of interest since he holds a real estate license. He said he would prepare a suggested policy statement next month on such matters.

REZONING — Approved the request of Codding Enterprises for zoning on 5.5 acres at Rohnert Park Expressway and South Santa Rosa Avenue to permit a motel, service station and coffee shop.

REVENUE — Agreed to hold the $27,800 received from federal revenue sharing until budget delib-erations next year to decide how it should be spent.

PARK — Asked the County of Sonoma to join in a grant application to the state to buy land in the Sonoma Mountains for a regional park.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting Jan. 2 at 7 p.m.

as anyone looking for low-cost housing in Marin.

"We just have to go to the public for help" in such cases, Braden said. He added the Red Cross would act as a collection point for clothing, toys, furniture or housing leads for the family.

(Two other tenants burned out in the fire which started about 10 a.m. have said they do not need help. Braden reported.

Braden said the Red Cross "does not receive the support it did years ago" and that public money available to such disaster victims has also been tightened up.

Twenty-nine-year-old Mrs. Evansco and her sons, Tony 6, and Frankie 11, and 10-year-old Denise are victims of changing times, he said.

He added that various agencies are trying to get together to solve such problems but in the meantime, "we have to depend on the public."

Conditional Permit For House Approved

The Belvedere Planning Commission last night approved a conditional use permit and variance to permit K.O. Collins to construct a two story house at 264 Bayview Avenue.

City Mgr. William L. Cavalli said the variance was necessary because the lot is substandard size. He said all new construction and extensive remodeling currently requires a use permit under the city's building moratorium.

APOLLO

Their detailed technical and scientific reports have been delayed until after New Year's Day.

The Apollo 17 command ship America, and the four-legged landing craft Challenger left behind at the moon, worked flawlessly. Ground communicator Gordon Fullerton told Cernan they were the two best spacecraft in the entire $25 billion moon project.

Although the 121-2-day, $450 million mission was the 11th and last in the Apollo series dating back to 1968, the pilots returned with a promise that the program is only the beginning of man's search into the unknown.

"Once there's a beginning, there's a continuation," Cernan said during a televised news conference while the spaceship was 100,000 miles from home Monday. "The probing into deep space by man —the next landing on the moon, a trip to Mars —may not be for 10 years, it may not be until the end of this century, buf I personally have faith that it will happen."

Scientists hailed the flight of Apollo 17 as the most productive of all six lunar landing expeditions. Schmitt was the first geologist on the moon and the Apollo Lunar Geology Investigation Team said in a report the mission benefitted greatly from his presence.

"I think the thing we hoped to accomplish at Taurus-Littrow was to look at as broad a spectrum of the history of the moon as possible in one small area," Schmitt said. "And I think we did that."

Schmitt said he believes the collection of lunar samples may contain some of the oldest rocks on the moon, dating back beyond 4 billion years ago, and the youngest.

The prize of the mission was orange soil Schmitt found on the rim of a crater called Shorty. Schmitt, long an expert in examining such material, said the rusty colored soil was "reminiscent of the alteration by hot water or hot gases on Earth."

The geology team in Houston called the discovery "remarkable" and said it "lends credence to previous suggestions that Shorty and some other nearby dark, sharp-rimmed craters may be relatively young volcanic features.

"Such a discovery would result in a major revision of current thermal models (theories) for the moon," the detailed, 36-page report said. In other words, scientists now suspect the moon's volcanic activity lasted much longer than originally supposed, possibly as recently in geologic terms as 500 million years ago.

Body Of Man Is Found In Bay

The badly decomposed body of an unidentified man was found floating in San Francisco Bay near Angel Island yesterday, according to Donald L. Cornish, coroner's deputy.

The man, described as between 30 and 35 years old, six feet tall, 170 to 180 pounds, had been in the water about two weeks, the coroner's office said.

He was discovered about 3:15 p.m. by men working on an Army Corps of Engineers barge in the area.

The body was clad only in shredded socks. Cornish said a tattoo of a heart with an arrow through it, intertwined with a ribbon with "Mom" inscribed, was found on the left forearm.

An autopsy was to be performed today. The body was taken to Russell and Gooch Funeral Home in Mill Valley.

OBITUARIES

Rites Set For John F. Coen

A Mass of the Resurrection for John F. Coen, 61, a state investment officer will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of Loretto Church, Novato.

Coen of 310 Galle De La Mesa, Ignacio, died Saturday at a local hospital, apparently of a heart attack. He was an investment officer for the State Compensation Fund in San Francisco.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus in Novato, past president of the Little League of Hamilton Air Force Base and Loma Verde, a graduate of the University of San Francisco and a member of Gamma Eta Kappa fraternity.

Coen was a native of San Francisco and had been a resident of Ignacio for 15 years.

Surviving are his wife, E. M. (Bobbie) Coen, of Ignacio; two sons, John S. Coen, in the Navy, and Timothy J. Coen of Ignacio, and a daughter, Stephanie J. Coen of Ignacio.

Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Chapel of Marin, Novato. The family prefers that memorial contributions be to the heart fund.

MRS. BOND

Ferolin B. Bond of Santa Rosa, mother of Betsy Carman of Corte Madera, died yesterday in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital, apparently after suffering a brain hemorrhage. She was 77.

Mrs. Bond was rushed to the hospital Sunday night after collapsing in the home of her daughter in Corte Madera, where she was visiting for the holidays.

She was a native of Northville, Mich., and had lived in Santa Rosa for the past 11 years. She had lived in California 48 years.

She was a retired school teacher, and taught for many years in the Oakland public school system.

She was a member of the California Teachers Association and of the Daughters of the American Colonies.

She is also survived by a son, Howard C. Bond of Watsonville; two sisters, Carrie Morrison of Oakland and Bessie B. West of Santa Rosa, and nine grandchildren.

Memorial service will be at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the First Church of Religious Science in Santa Rosa. Cremation will be at the Chapel of the Chimes in Oakland.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Tuberculosis Association or the the charity of one's choice.

HELEN CHAMBERLIN

A native of Nebraska, she had lived in Marin County for 65 years until moving to Rialto four weeks ago. Her husband, the late Herbert Chamberlin was an attorney in San Francisco.

She was active in civic affairs in Marin County. She was president of the Marin County Tuberculosis Society in 1956 and 1957. She was also a member of the Red Cross, Marin County Humane Society, Marin Art and Garden Center and the Marin County Book Club.

She is survived by two brothers, William D. Hurd of San Bernardino and Wayne Hurd of Denver, and four sisters, Myrtle Grandey of San Bernardino, Florence Stone of Denver, Bertha Fisher and Harriett Ellingsen of Highlands, San Bernardino County.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m., Thursday at Grove Colonial Mortuary in Rialto. Following cremation, her ashes will be buried in Mountain View Cemetery, San Bernardino.

ELIZABETH SPANGENBERG

Funeral for Elizabeth W. Spangenberg, former resident of Larkspur and San Anselmo, will be at 1 p.m. Thursday at Lisle Funeral Home in Fresno.

She died Sunday in a Fresno hospital after a long illness.

Mrs. Spangenberg was born in Walla Walla, Wash., and was graduated from Oregon State University at Corvallis. She had lived in California for 37 years, most of it in Marin County. She and her husband, Normand F. Spangerberg, a retired United States forester, moved to Fresno five years ago.

She was a member of Holy Family Episcopal Church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Earl Spangenberg of Wisconsin, and two grandchildren.

Burial will be in Fresno.

JOHN FREEMAN

Funeral and burial for John Boone Freeman of Wilkes Hotel, 1135 Fourth Street, San Rafael, will be in Abington, Pa.

Freeman, 40, was found dead in his room Saturday. Apparently he had been dead for several days, according to Marin County Coroner.

An autopsy-report is scheduled, according to the coroner.

He is survived by his mother Jean Freeman of Abington.

BERNICE MORRIS

The obituary for Bernice June Morris of Fairfax in yesterday's Independent-Journal neglected to include among her survivors her brother, Clarence R. Herold of Novato.

The obituary also said Mrs. Morris succumbed after a brief illness, but members of the family report she had not been known to be ill and had died unexpectedly.

MICHAEL SHABEL

Funeral for Michael Shabel of 30 Bayview Drive, Larkspur, will be Thursday at 10:30 a.m. at Daphne Funerals, 1 Church Street, San Francisco.

Shabel died Saturday in a San Francisco hospital. He was 75.

A native of Russia, he had lived in California for 49 years. He was a retired longshoreman.

He is survived by his wife, Theresa of the family home.

JOSEPHINE MARTINEZ

Josephine Martinez of Mill Valley died yesterday in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was 72.

She was a native of San Francisco and had lived in California all her life. She was a 23-year resident of Mill Valley.

She is survived by her husband, George Martinez Sr.; a daughter, Josephine Lundwall, and a son, George Martinez Jr., in Mill Valley; a sister, Marie Swanson of San Francsico; a brother, Steve Smario of San Francisco and seven grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Catholic Church in Mill Valley. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Russell and Gooch funeral chapel in Mill Valley.

participation at meaningful meetings. "We're talking about day-to-day activities," he said.

Miskimen said moreover that he is not opposed to the possibility of wining and dining a developer or industrialist interested in investing in the city through redevelopment.

City financial procedures came under fire last September when revolving account vouchers revealed that several city leaders had been accustomed to meeting for lunch and charging the city.

At issue then and the target of Miskimen's financial report last night is the controversial cash revolving account, a fund set up to pay for day-to-day expenses incurred by city leaders while on city business. The account pays for conferences, luncheons, training courses, travel expenses including gas, airfare and hotel accomodations and library postage, among others. Also paid from the account are "payroll trusts" or early payment of salaries to employees taking paid leave or vacation.

The account exists to take care of expenses that occur between council meetings and before council authority is given, according to Miskimen. A check is drawn against the account, and the account is replenished at the next council meeting through finance committee "approval" of expenses.

Defeated Miner President Quits

NEW YORK (UPI) — Without explanation, W. A. (Tony) Boyle resigned Monday as president of the United Mine Workers several weeks before the man who defeated him in a closely-supervised election steps into the office.

Boyle then got permission from the union's executive board to address it as a "rank and file member" at a meeting today.

The board voted to give Boyle a $50,000 per year retirement pension, which equals his full salary. Arnold Miller, the insurgent who defeated Boyle in the court-ordered election, has said he would try to strip Boyle of the pension.

Leonard Pankovich, the union's vice president who also was defeated, succeeds Boyle as head of the 205,000-member union until Miller can be installed—probably next month. He said his tenure would serve to bring about "an orderly transition of power."

Final but unofficial returns of the election, supervised by the Labor Department, showed Miller with 70,372 votes and Boyle with 56,334. The Miller-Boyle election was ordered by a federal court because of irregularities in the 1969 election Boyle won from Joseph "Jock" Yablonski three weeks before Yablonski, his wife and daughter were slain.

W. A. (TONY) BOYLE
Surprise resignation

A union official reported that Boyle stepped to the microphone at a board meeting and announced, "I tender my resignation effective today. I will not be your international president after today. The vice president automatically becomes president of the international union." Boyle refused to answer questions.

Poachers Cut Down Estimated 15 Million Yule Trees Yearly

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Rustling—the kind peculiar to the Christmas season—is still rampant in the Western United States. But tough laws and bad weather have hampered efforts by Christmas tree poachers in some places this year.

Tree stealing, an annual Christmas season peril for the Forest Service, got so bad in Washington state recently the FBI was called in. Utah and Nevada are using air surveillance to catch poachers, who seem to be working faster than ever.

The Forest Service estimates that poachers steal up to 15 million trees in the United States each year. Fewer than 1 per cent of them are caught.

Tree poachers clear $4 to $6 a tree, officials estimate. Most trees sell for about $1 a foot. People who deal with poachers aren't likely to ask questions about where the trees came from.

"Some of these guys are making a real killing and wrecking this country's scenic beauty at the same time," said a forest ranger in Utah.

Some poachers aren't that lucky. In Pittsburgh, Martin L. Noel, 23, awaits trial on larceny charges in the Dec. 11 theft of between $500 to $600 worth of Christmas trees.

In Arizona, Old Man Winter has hampered thieves. Rain and snow came in early abundance and most roads into forest areas have been virtually impassable for the past few weeks.

Robert Umberger of the Forestry Service in Maine says commercial Christmas tree poaching has cut down tremendously in the last 10 years because state law requires a certificate before thay can be transported on Maine roads.

California law calls for up to a $500 fine and six months in jail for anyone convicted of having a Christmas tree without authorization. In addition, rangers patrol the forests intermittently and snow blocks many roads leading into regions with small trees.

But Steve Beck, information officer for the Sierra National Forest in central California, says professional poachers are still active. "They go in with hand saws in the daytime and cut them down and then remove them by night."

John Dreves of the Michigan Department of Agriculture says the problem of Christmas tree poachers is not what it once was in Michigan. Most trees in Michigan are now grown on farms specifically for that purpose. Dreves said most people would rather spend around $5 to get a tree properly pruned and shaped to be a Christmas tree, rather than take the chance on poaching a wild tree that often is not properly shaped.

Michigan, too, has an anti-poaching law for Christmas trees, but it does not apply to persons with two trees or less between Dec. 1 and Dec. 28.

Officials in Massachusetts, where a stiff state law is backed up by around-the-clock patrols by the Department of Natural Resources, concede that there are a few thefts of Christmas trees, but say it does not add up to anything worth worrying about.

Occasionally the Forest Service scores a major triumph in the fight against poachers. A man caught in northern California admitted he had been stealing trees for 20 years at an average annual profit of $20,000. He went to jail.

Two Utah men were caught with 1,700 stolen trees. One went to jail and the other was fined.

Authorities say that while surveillance has been intensified in many states most poachers by now, are counting their cash and secure in the knowledge that they've probably gotten away with their illegal deed—at least until the next Christmas season.

Film Star Nearly Attacked By Gators

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Roger (The Saint) Moore, starring in the latest James Bond spy movie, was almost attacked by three alligators during a filming session this weekend.

A film spokesman said Monday that the veteran actor, known for his starring role as Simon Templar in "The Saint" television series, was rescued by a stand-in Saturday from three pursuing alligators on location at the Jamaican Swamp Safari, a tourist attraction near Falmouth, 22 miles east of Kingston.

Council Delays Talks On Open Space Bonds

The Corte Madera Town Council last night postponed until March further discussion about a possible bond measure to buy open space.

Town Mgr. Ronald A. Bartels suggested the delay, saying the town's new general plan, now being prepared by a consultant firm, should be ready by then.

In the meantime, he said, the town might "overcommit our bonding capacity" if the open space bond measure were passed. He suggested bond money might also be needed to cure flooding problems.

All the councilmen, including Robert J. Flahive, who had prompted discussion of the bond measure, agreed to the delay until March 19.

In other action, Flahive proposed that half of the federal revenue sharing funds to be received by Corte Madera during next year ($22,000) be earmarked for open space purchase.

Other councilmen pointed out that the amount of money would buy very little land and that the funds may be needed elsewhere, especially under new legislation putting a ceiling on local governmental tax rates.

Only Councilman Herber C. Leney supported Flahive, and the motion lost. It was agreed to turn over to the council's finance committee consideration of how to spend the money.

The council also tabled indefinitely a proposed open space plan required by the state until it is learned what the new deadline for the requirement is.

The Corte Madera Town Council Also:

REDEVELOPMENT — Agreed to write a letter to Reed School District officials, who had expressed concern about property in the planned redevelopment area of the town, telling them no Reed property is in the redevelopment proposal.

NOTICES — Agreed to the posting of additional bulletin boards at the library and various businesses for posting of town council meeting agendas and notices.

QUARRY — Agreed by a 3-to-2 vote to adopt an ordinance rezoning the Quarry Site to planned unit development. Councilmen Harold B. Wagstaff and Edward D. Colthurst voted against the ordinance, which had been introduced at an earlier meeting.

BOARD — Sent a proposal to increase membership on the town's board of design from three to five members back to the planning commission and the board of design.

CHAIRS — Agreed to purchase 30 additional chairs for the council chambers at an approximate cost of $1,000.

ATTORNEY — Named John Rosenberg as deputy town attorney for occasions when attorney Albert Bianchi is unable to attend council meetings.

CLOSING — Turned down a request from town employees for early closing hours at town hall on Friday and Dec. 29.

A Volunteer Business Consultant

(EDITOR'S NOTE— All around the world there are people who see a need and do something about it. They're ordinary people, but they show an extraordinary interest in others who need help. They're people who take time to care. Here is the first of a four-part series on some of today's Good Samaritans.)

By AVID WINDER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, — "Call me Don," he says, his face crinkling in a broad grin. "Everyone around here calls me Don."

Winning friends comes easily to Donald Warren which is what makes him such a choice candidate for the "Paunch Corps." That's the more popular name for the International Executive Service Corps (IESC), — a sort of businessman' answer to the Peace Corps.

Warren's sparkle and brisk energy belie his retirement. Recently he put in a hard work stint as a volunteer business consultant in a food processing plant in Istanbul, Turkey. Now he is eager for another assignment in an underdeveloped country that could use his services.

Speaking in the comfortable surroundings of his home at Amityville on New York's Long Island, he noted one of the incentives for going:

"It's nice to be needed," he said gently. "Just to give of your background. When you reach my age the idea of giving, and giving in a worthwhile manner, boosts your own morale."

And the Turkish food-processing plant where he worked in Istanbul did need him. It needed his expertise in the formulation and preparation of a new rice-cereal baby food. The project meant new employees, new packaging, new advertising and promotion.

It also meant a very much-needed rice cereal which had not yet been manufactured in the country and which was to be superior to the three or four other existing baby foods.

Warren had much to give. He had decades of practical business experience before retiring in 1965 as manager of product standards and specifications at a subdivision of the Thomas J. Lipton Co., at Englewood Cliffs, N.J.

Warren's wife, Violet, who accompanied him on his assignment in Istanbul indicated that what really counted was the sensitivity with which the projects are undertaken by the IESC.

"They (the recipients of the program) just want you to help. They don't want you to manage. After a while the men could see Donald wasn't going to take over the plant so they became more cooperative," she said.

This was not to suggest that the two-month consulting period was fun. Far from it, despite all the worthy idealism.

Says Warren: "They told me in New York — 'Don, there will be frustrations. Don't think things will be easy.' "

They weren't easy. For the first three weeks there was no electricity to drive the drum dryer which spreads the thick, viscuous cereal mix and turns it into a thin flake. Another problem was that on rainy days as a result of seepage from rusty pipes the water supply was not up to the strict standards set for baby-food preparation although pure enough for other food processing.

In time the electricity was resumed, and clear spring water was brought in large plastic containers. But even then the work was arduous.

Up at 5:30 a.m. Not finished before 6:30 p.m., very often not before 7:30. "By Friday night," Warren recalls, "I had worked harder than I have ever worked."

But it was an experience he will never forget.

"Bus (Bus Wilcox, the Paunch Corps resident director of operations for Turkey) said: 'You Wait. You'll have a lump in your throat before you leave.' I haw-hawed the idea. I didn't think I would become so attached to those workers in the plant."

But elaborating on his inability to communicate in English with the Turkish workers, Warren recounted his last day:

"There is common language you know. These people, they were so kind to me. When they lined up at the end of the day's work close to the manager's office they all came in with gifts and kissed me on both cheeks. When I left the little maid who had waited on us at table, the tears were streaming down her cheeks. I kissed her on both cheeks — that's the Turkish custom."

Each year hundreds of retired businessmen, many of them ex-presidents and directors of corporations, travel to underdeveloped countries to fill gaps in jobs that require managerial skills. The project is always of a short duration.

"This made it possible for IESC to recruit executives of the caliber not possible if we were asking a man to drop everything to go abroad for a couple of years. But they could possibly drop everything for three months. On that basis we have been able to gt really tiptop men," says Charlie H. Brown of the public-relations department of the IESC.

The volunteer receives no financial remuneration, but is provided with an economy-class air ticket, hotel accommodation, and a per diem of about $50 for him and his wife, who is encouraged to go along.

The program is financed by the United States Agency for International Development (AID), by some 200 corporate and other private sponsors in the U.S. and overseas, and by contributions from overseas client-firms themselves.

"The thing that is exciting to me about it," says Brown, "is that it works."

Former Guard At Prison Gets Jail Time On Drugs

A former San Quentin guard, who admitted smuggling drugs into the prison, was ordered yesterday to serve six months in jail.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also ordered two years of unsupervised probation for 29-year-old Samuel Thomas Jr. of Richmond.

The judge rejected a plea for shorter jail time for the first time offender, stating, "When you are dealing with a correctional officer at San Quentin, there has to be some deterrence."

After only three months on the job, Thomas was arrested Dec. 1, 1971, as he entered the prison with 11 Seconal capsules in his hat band and 12 Benzedrine tablets in his shirt pocket, according to prison authorities.

Thomas, now a junior college student, told his probation officer he was taking the drugs to an inmate who helped him keep control of the cell section he was assigned to oversee.

Prison authorities said other guards reported he was acting suspiciously so he was searched when he reported for work.

Thomas's probation officer said he was recruited in the prison drive to hire minority guards and felt he was in over his head with "wily and manipulative" convicts.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Tuesday, December 19th, the 353rd day of 1972 with 12 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars. The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

British Arctic explorer William Perry was born Dec. 19, 1790.

For draft eligibles the lottery number is 19.

On this day in history:

In 1777, George Washington and the Continental Army began a winter encampment at Valley Forge, Penn.

A thought for the day: German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer said: "Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, light air pollution.

San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Son Of Famed Western Outlaw Dies In Blaze

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Robert Longbauch, 72, son of the famed Western outlaw known as "Sundance Kid," died Monday in a fire in an old four-story hotel.

Fire officials said one other person, John Schon, an elderly blind man, also was killed when flames swept the Priess Hotel.

The rest of the hotel's 34 residents, many of them university students, escaped without injury.

The blaze erupted in a basement under a bar, and a bartender tried to douse the first flames with a pitcher of water before calling the Fire Department.

Cigar Ban In Club Cars Hit

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Cigar Institute of America Monday protested the ban on cigar and pipe smoking in Amtrak club cars—a prohibition that came about after a complaint by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

In letters to Burger, outgoing Transportation Secretary John Volpe and Amtrak President Roger Lewis, the institute said "The protest of Justice Burger made public and acted upon so arbitrarily by the Amtrak management casts cigar and pipe smoking in a most undesired light.

"To quote William Makepeace Thackeray, a cigar is 'a kind companion, a gentle stimulant, an amiable anodyne, a cementer of friendship."

Clay Pit Now Valuable Land

POOLE, England (UPI) —In 1963 Eric Brooks paid $47,000 for an abandoned seaside clay pit in this English Channel resort. His friends thought he was mad.

Real estate agents estimate that the 27-acre site, now nearly filled, is worth about $2.3 million.

"My friends thought I was mad when I paid out so much money," Brooks said. "It was just a deep soggy hole and they didn't think it was worth anything. They said I could never fill it."

Tighter Curbs On Methadone Uses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government has announced tighter controls over distribution of methadone, a drug used to curb heroin addiction.

Dr. Jerome Jaffee, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse, said Monday the new regulations were designed to provide "clear cut guidelines" to operators of methadone maintenance programs, to curb growing illicit street traffic in methadone and to avoid making methadone addicts out of persons never before on drugs.

Methadone is a synthetic drug which curbs the craving of some addicts for heroin. In methadone maintenance programs, patients are given regular doses of the substitute drug, at little or no cost to them, to get them off heroin habits which often are supported by crime.

The new regulations restrict marketing of methadone to hospital pharmacies, approved maintenance programs conducted by clinics or doctors and some drugstores in rural areas. They will take effect over a six-month period.

Jaffee said programs conducted under the new rules "can have a positive effect in reducing the spread of heroin addiction. The amount of crime they (addicts) commit will be slightly reduced. The amount of heroin they use will be slightly reduced. Maybe they just won't die of (heroin) overdose."

He expressed hopes that the regulated methadone programs would help reduce the social cost of heroin addiction.

Methadone is addictive itself. Persons not tolerant to its effects can experience euphoria. An overdose can cause death. Jaffee said the regulations will seek to prevent cases in which persons not already on heroin begin to take methadone and become addicted to it.

Some doctors oppose the controls because they feel the government should not regulate the practice of medicine. John Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, called the new rules a "stop-gap measure, satisfactory for the time being."

"We are all hopeful a more permanent type solution will be found for treating addicts," Ingersoll said.

Fog Hits Britain

LONDON (AP) — Fog blanketed much of Britain today with visibility down to five yards in some places. Airliners bringing Christmas holidayers from New York, Chicago and Los Angeles were diverted to airports on the continent.

Archdiocese Hit With Labor Suit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The state Labor Relations Board has ruled that the Philadelphia Catholic Archdiocese and John Cardinal Krol were guilty of unfair labor practices in a union bargaining election by lay teachers.

The ruling, which a union attorney said was an historic first, invalidated a disputed June 13 election at which diocesan Catholic elementary teachers voted 646 to 410 against representation by the Association of Catholic Teachers, an AFL-CIO affiliate.

The board Monday ordered a new election on grounds Cardinal Krol unfairly influenced the June balloting by sending a letter to the teachers that had "the effect of intimidating" them.

"This is the first time in history that a prince of the church, or any bishop, has been found guilty of such a charge," said Michael Walsh, attorney for the Association of Catholic Teachers.

A diocesan spokesman said that "from our initial reading of the ruling, the labor relations board apparently has an unbelievable idea of freedom of speech and freedom of religion. An idea that would seem to deny to the cardinal the right, the freedom to speak on religious matters to his people."

A Market Flap Over Scotch Whisky Role

BRUSSELS (UPI) —Britain and France clashed today over Scotch whisky and its role in the enlarged European Common Market.

France said whisky is alcohol; Britain said it is "processed agricultural goods." As in most complex Common Market disputes, millions of dollars rides on the outcome.

The United States, which will be affected by the outcome, kept a worried watch from the sidelines.

The dispute came up at a meeting of the nine agricultural ministers of the enlarged market, which is to grow from six to nine nations when Britain, Ireland and Denmark join on Jan. 1.

The term of entry obligate Britian's whisky distillers to replace much of the 750,000 tons of grain they buy now from the United States and Canada with Common Market grain—mostly from France.

Britain argued today that the Common Market grain is more expensive. It said that if this grain goes into whisky, which is then exported outside the Common Market, it should be given a special subsidy to avoid raising whisky prices in the United States and other export markets.

France objected. The French have long urged the market to form an "alcohol policy," which would enable France to dispose of surplus wine.

Britain said the matter could be handled perfectly well by treating whisky as "processed agricultural goods," under the existing farm policy.

The ministers said they hoped for a compromise.

Pier Feud Erupts Once More

The long-running feud between Tomales Bay property owners Peter D. Whitney and Larry H. Marks erupted again yesterday as the county planning commission deferred action on a request to open Whitney's controversial pier to the public.

The pier, including an illegally built 48-foot extension, is located near the county's Chicken Ranch beach at Inverness and was the focal point of the Marks vs. Whitney court decision.

Marks, the loser in that state Supreme Court decision which held Whitney had a right to build his pier across a tide lot owned by Marks, yesterday requested opening the pier to the public.

Whitney called the proposal ridiculous, adding "this is not just a pier to Mr. Marks, it's Moby Dick — a white whale he has been trying to harpoon for 18 years."

Whitney said the county had no right to impose public use of his pier and charged Marks was seeking free access to the bay for upland properties he planned to sell.

The matter came before the planning commission on an appeal from Marks of the county environmental protection committee's decision to legalize the pier extension.

Marks argued that since the pier also crossed county-owned tidelands it should be open to public use.

The matter was delayed for further study by the county counsel's office and will be reconsidered at the commission's Jan. 8 meeting.

The Marin County Planning Commission also:

NORTH RIDGE — Heard the parks and recreation department's plans to keep portions of the North Ridge between Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur in open space. The commission declined to set a formal hearing for adoption of the plan until the three cities had considered the proposal in depth.

APARTMENTS — Deferred action on a plan from P. J. Tarrant to construct 42 apartments on a 3.4-acre site on Los Ranchitos Road near its intersection with Glenside Way. Nearby residents protested that the project was too dense and would create too much traffic. They said they were considering purchasing the site for a neighborhood park. It will be reconsidered on Jan. 22.

MOOSE LODGE — Deferred action on a use permit requested by the Moose Lodge of Novato for use of the vacant Atherton Club at the intersection of H Lane and Atherton Avenue near Novato. Nearby residents complained of possible noise and traffic but agreed to meet with club representatives and attempt to iron out differences.

TANKS — Approved a use permit for Robert Borello to place to sewage holding ponds on his property on Borello Ranch Road near Bolinas.

PLANS — Unanimously denied plans to place an A and W fast food restaurant at 3141 Redwood Highway near San Rafael. The site, across Highway 101 from the Civic Center, currently is used by Booby's Restaurant. The commission said the new restaurant would not be in keeping with the area.

Muir Beach Rezone Plea Denied

The Marin County Planning Commission yesterday rejected a Muir Beach property owner's request that his land be rezoned to commercial-recreational use on the eve of federal acquisition.

The request, submitted by Gilbert F. Allard of Mill Valley, proposed to change the agricultural designation for 19 acres stretching a half mile up Frank Valley Road from its intersection with Shoreline Highway.

The commission voted 6-0 (Commissioner George P. Leonard absent) to deny the request, agreeing with Commissioner Margaret B. Azevedo who said the rezoning would be premature since the federal government intends to include the land in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

An attorney for Allard told the commission his client planned to develop a campground on the site to serve 185 families.

The planning commission agreed with arguments against the rezoning by Muir Beach residents who said rezoning to commercial-recreational use was no assurance the property owner would develop the campground.

Under county ordinances, such zoning permits nightclubs, restaurants and service stations, among other things.

The land originally was proposed for the controversial A-60 agricultural zoning, but county supervisors suspended such action because of property owners' complaints that it would lower land values.

In suspending the agricultural rezoning in the new federal park, the board said it would take a dim view of proposals to inflate land values through rezoning or submittal of development plans.

Jewel Theft Pleas Given

A 20-year-old woman arrested in connection with $1,780 in stolen jewelry has been sentenced to 30 days in jail on a reduced charge of concealing stolen property.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner reduced the charge against Carol Ruth Litteral of Ignacio from a felony to misdemeanor.

Codefendant Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, also of Ignacio, pleaded guilty to the felony charge, provided he receives no more than four months in jail. He is to be sentenced Dec. 27.

Both pleaded guilty after a plea bargaining session by the judge, defense attorneys and a deputy district attorney. The district attorney favored four months jail in each instance.

San Rafael police arrested the pair Oct. 3 after learning that Goodrich sold the stolen jewelry to a San Rafael Merchant Sept. 26 for $165.

The jewelry was part of $3,830 in possessions stolen Sept. 26 from the home of Elena Mills Foley on a Nova Albion Way.

Heath Likes Those 'Tom-Jerry' Films

LONDON (UPI) —Friends of Prime Minister Edward Heath let the cat out of the bag today. They said he loves to watch "Tom and Jerry" cartoons.

They said Heath asked aides to obtain a supply of "Tom and Jerry" cartoons to watch over the Christmas holidays at his Chequers country retreat. They said whenever the prime minister has some free time, he likes to put his feet up and watch the zany adventures of the famous cartoon cat and mouse.

Lawmaker Urges Pay Raise Veto

SACRAMENTO (AP) — At least one lawmaker is urging Gov. Reagan to veto the 10 per cent pay increase California legislators voted for themselves in the waning hours of this year's session.

Assemblyman Floyd Wakefield, a Republican from South Gate, called upon Californians Monday to send Reagan letters and telegrams urging him to reject the pay hike.

Wakerfield said the pay raise was worked out behind closed doors with the usual committee procedure bypassed.

Snags Develop In Novato Plan

Novato City Council, warned by Mayor F. Wayne Sartain that it was going to have to "bite the bullet soon," last night postponed delving into the revised Novato Area General Plan.

The plan, a year in the making and subject of five public hearings in recent weeks, was before the city council for comment and recommendation.

After councilmen questioned the staff and heard late comment at a public hearing, it appeared that the council would then have its say.

At that point, Councilman George C. Quesada said he wasn't prepared "to comment in depth," since he was "getting comment and still thinking."

Other councilmen agreed it wouldn't be logical to proceed until all members were ready, and will meet again on the plan at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 4 at the Novato Community House.

Sartain said, "At some point in time we have to come to grips" with the plan. Furthermore, he said, it appeared that changes will be made in the plan and it would have to be referred back to the planning commission, extending the time before adoption.

Councilman Fred F. Ruegg challenged a planning staff report that public scenic area in the plan could be purchased for $3.2 million.

Ruegg said based on the costs of acquiring land for redevelopment in Santa Rosa, the value of the land would be about $7.1 million, and based on "recent sales, appraisals, offers to purchase and estate valuation" it would be in excess of $10 million.

Quesada said that "raw land is grossly underassessed," and the matter should be taken to the Marin County Grand Jury to have it assessed at its proper value.

During the abbreviated public hearing, Planning Commissioner James L. Picchi said he believed that "single family residential is passe," with apartments and condominiums which have "total amenities as the "way of life that is coming."

"I still think we're looking into the past," Picchi said.

Attorney Richard Tarrant representing McAlester Construction Finance Corp. objected to designation of the firm's land adjoining Bel Marin Keys as agricultural.

Eileen Souza, representing Frank Ribelo, owner of land at the end of Vineyard Road, said the Ribelo land shouldn't be designated agricultural because it is "economically impossible" to use it for agriculture.

Mary Souza, representing owners of land at Deer Island, opposed the hill and canyon designation which would permit one home per five acres. "We don't want everything taken away from us on this property," she said.

Councilmen pondered the relationship between the proposed countywide plan and the city's general plan, since the city's plan extends beyond city boundaries into unincorporated area.

Ruegg also asked what would happen if the county's plan and the city's plan were in conflict in the unincorporated area near Novato.

City Atty. Clark M. Palmer said the city wouldn't have any power in the unincorporated area, but "the impact would depend on the degree of intergovernmental cooperation."

Councilman David Price Jones said: "I think we should adopt ours as soon as possible. If we do, it will be a lot easier to convince them to do what we want in the area."

The council adjourned until its regular session at 8 p.m. today at the Novato Community House. Sartain said the council will conduct final interviews of persons seeking appointment to the city commissions at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Community House. After the interviews, the council will hold a closed session, and then, in open session, make the appointments, Sartain said.

Younger Looks At Crime Lords

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's Attorney General, Evelle J. Younger, says Mafias-style "godfathers" hve much less of a grip on organized crime on the West Coast than anywhere else in the nation.

Younger said Sunday there are fewer and less powerful crime lords in the West because "the classic type of organized crime" hasn't been as successful as it has on the East Coast.

He said a major factor in the lower profile of organized crime in the west is "the high quality of leadership in law enforcement and the integrity of our representatives in government."

Job Suit Allowed At Class Action

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A federal judge ruled Monday that an employment discrimination case against the Bank of California could be argued as a statewide class action on behalf of women, blacks and chicanos.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham dismissed from the action three organizations and individuals who had filed it. He said the National Organization of Women, GI Forum and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had not "alleged injuries to themselves or any of their members.

But, Peckham said, he would not dismiss the suit.

The action sought "population parity," employe representation reflecting the number of blacks, women and chicanos in the population.

19 Receive Awards For Bike Essays

Nineteen Fairfax youngsters were presented with cash awards of up to $25 yesterday for submitting prize-winning essays in the Fairfax Police Department's bicycle safety essay contest, Chief Charles A. Grasso announced today.

In order of placement, winners are:

Eighth grade, Silvia Schellenberg, Paul Souza, Joe Yetter and Sara Quentin.

Seventh grade, Marcia Philpott, Newell Snyder, Laura Saia and Karen Hirschfield.

Sixth grade, Robin Kienbaum, Richard Wader, Audry Stokes, John Stewart, Karen Knoppe, Charles Casalnuevo and Carla DeMaestri.

Merchants who contributed to the $167 prize kitty were Quality Liquors, Shep's Meats, Food Villa, Fairfax Lumber, B and C Television, Bank of America, Marin Town and Country Club, Enrico's Restaurant, S and N Auto Parts, Fastidious Fido's, Perri's Tavern, Crocker Citizens Bank and the Fairfax Theater, he said.

Some 113 entries were submitted in the contest, which was judged by Fairfax School District officials, Grasso said.

Peron On Way Back To Madrid

LIMA (UPI) —Former Argentine President Juan D. Peron arrived in Peru Monday for a brief two-day visit before continuing his trip back to Madrid for Christmas.

Peron departed Paraguay after a four-day stay without commenting on the political turmoil unleashed in Argentine peronist ranks by his selection of Hector J. Campora as presidential candidate of the Justicialista Liberation Front.

Peron, 77, was expected to meet in Lima with leftist nationalist President Juan Velazco Alvarado, then to continue on to Madrid next Thursday.

Qantas Development Plans Turned Down

The Petaluma City Council last night balked at a rezoning request, asking for more precise plans on the development of houses, apartments and offices.

Qantas Development Corp. requested a planned community district for 38 acres behind the Washington Square Shopping Center. Plans included 73 homes on 5,000-square foot lots, 208 apartment units and nearly seven acres of professional-medical offices.

Councilmen said they had no quarrel with the rezoning request, but hesitated to grant it since complete details of the plans were not available.

Representatives of Qantas said they would meet with staff members and prepare more information for the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council did, however, accept the environmental impact report on the project which included conflicting opinions on the effect the project would have on schools.

While the developers report indicated some problem with school housing for students, the Petaluma Board of Education submitted a letter urging absolutely no further development in the McDowell School area since 900 children are now crowded into the school designed for 750.

The Petaluma City Council Also:

REZONING — Granted request of Ronald Nunn for planned unit development zoning to permit six single-family homes on Dickson Hill off West Street.

CARS — Accepted the bid of Jim Rose Chrysler-Plymouth of $16,685 for four police sedans, a station wagon and a compact sedan.

RADIO — Rejected on a 2-2 vote the suggestion of Councilman William A. Perry Jr. that the city buy an hour of radio time on Jan. 1 to discuss city goals for 1973. Councilmen Fred V. Mattei and Richard W. Cleak dissented while Mayor Helen Putnam supported Perry. Councilmen Robert A. Brunner, William A. Daly and John W. Cavanagh Jr. were absent.

MEETING — Adjourned to the next regular meeting on Jan. 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Food Prices Drop

MANILA (UPI) —Food prices, particularly rice, vegetables and fruits, declined 5 to 161 per cent in the first two weeks of November. The Central Bank attributed the decrease to a continuous flow of vegetables and fruits from Northern and Southern Luzon and Northern Mindanao provinces.

Stolen Property Charge Admitted

UKIAH, Calif. (UPI) —The owners of a remote ranch allegedly used as a burying grounds by the Hell's Angels pleaded guilty Monday to charges of possessing stolen property.

George and Helen Wethern, who were granted immunity from narcotics charges earlier in return for testimony against motorcycle gang members, were placed on probation after entering their pleas.

They were arrested Oct. 30 on their ranch six miles outside this Mendocino County town by officers who found the bodies of two men and a woman buried in an abandoned welt on the property.

Woman Reports Her Purse Stolen

Christine Olson, 107 Galland Street, Petaluma, told police a young man stole her purse yesterday at 2:30 p.m. as she walked on Kentucky Street.

Mrs. Olson said the man grabbed the purse from behind and fled. The purse contained $15.

Ranch House Glows With Antiques

MRS. HERBERT ROWLAND looks over the book of the Pacheco family history while sitting in the charming living room of their home in Ignacio. The Victorian sofa and chair, the picture of a pastoral scene and the table were all stored in a shed at the home of the late Mrs. Abigail Rowland and restored by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland.

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Since moving to the Pacheco Ranch in Ignacio seven years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland have been restoring the antique furniture that they found stored n a shed on the ranch.

Rowland is the great-grandson of the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The home was built by Mrs. Pacheco for her son, Gumesindo Pacheco. The ast resident was Rowland's mother, Abigail Rowland.

Rowland's aunt, Mercedes Boeken, had painted much of the furniture and cut off the tops of some of the tables. Mrs. Herbert Rowland removed all of the old paint and varnish from the furniture and got bursitis doing it, she said.

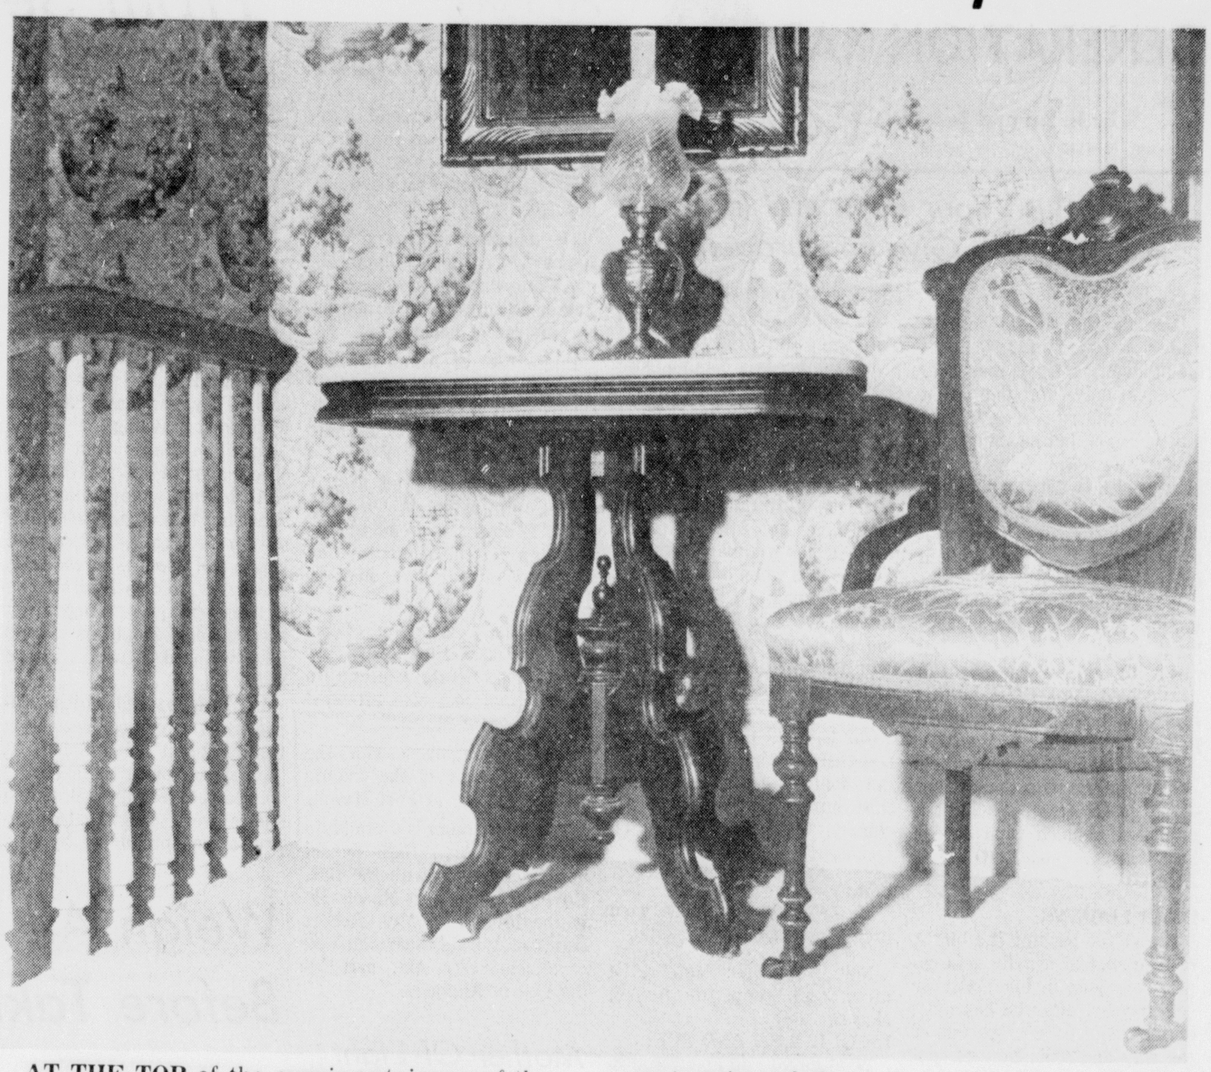
The Rowlands have also restored furniture brought by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives when they came across the plains to Salt Lake City. They have restored the inside of the home with the old charm being maintained.

The Herbert Rowlands met in Shanghai when her parents, the late E. M. Bagleys, took her on a trip around the world. Rowland was a purser for the Dollar Lines. He has been with the American President Lines for 40 years.

Mrs. Rowland was graduated from law school, as were her parents. She has never practiced law, however.

The Pacheco home will probably remain in the family. The Rowland's son, Herbert Jr., a student at the University of California at Davis, hopes to eventually take over the ranch. Following in the footsteps of his mother and grandparents, he will study law.

The Rowlands also have a daughter, Ann, a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara, who is living in Salt Lake City.



AT THE TOP of the curving stairway of the five bedroom home at the Pacheco ranch is a marble top table which has a marking that it was sent by Wells Fargo to the Pacheco home. Other added attractions are the kerosene lamp and the Victorian chair. The restoration of the antiques have been made since the Herbert Rowlands moved to the ranch seven years ago. They also lived 15 years in Larkspur and five years in Loch Lommond before moving to the ranch.

ANTIQUES OF MRS. Rowland's family are also in the home on the Pacheco Ranch, built by the third wife of Ignacio Pacheco. The needlepoint chair, on the left of the fireplace, was brought across the plains to Salt Lake City by Mrs. Rowland's Mormon relatives. The unusual fireplace is coalburning.

THE HIGH HEADBOARD and flowered quilt add to the charm of one of the bedrooms of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowland who have refinished many of the antiques they found in a shed at the Pacheco Ranch, the home of the late Abigail Rowland, mother of Herbert Rowland. Many antique silver pieces were also found in drawers in the shed and they have been refinished.

Engagement Of Couple Announced

DIANA DEL PRETE
Engagement news

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Del Prete of San Rafael have announced the engagement of their daughter Diana Lynne Del Prete to Kevin Kenneth Kilbride of San Rafael.

The couple are planning to be married next June.

Diana is the sister of Susan Marie, Sheryl Ann, James and John O. Del Prete Jr. of San Rafael.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Haskin and Mrs. Guilia Del Prete of San Rafael are her grandparents.

Diana is a graduate of San Rafael High School and is employed with F. W. Woolworth Co. in Corte Madera.

Kevin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kilbride of San Rafael, and he is the brother of Lawrence Kilbride of Kirkland, Wash., and Mrs. Paul Bange of Ojai.

He also is a graduate of San Rafael High School and Kevin attended the College of Marin. He is employed with his father in Abbot Construction Co. in San Rafael.

Couple Will Make Home In Carmel

Rosalie I. Castleman of Sacramento and Paul E. Griesshaber of Alturas were married Dec. 9 at Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in Sacramento.

After a wedding trip to Carmel, they will make their home in Alturas.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Pearl Castleman of Sacramento and Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Heinz E. Griesshaber of Corte Madera.

The couple is self-employed and missionaries of Jehovah's Witnesses.

For the wedding Marilee Reed of Tucson, Ariz., was matron of honor, and Lisa Griesshaber of Corte Madera and Nancy Castleman of Sacramento were the bridesmaids.

Ray Castleman of Sacramento performed best man duties. The ushers were John Malich of Mill Valley and Jon Kesser of Chico.

The bride is a graduate of C. K. McClatchey High School in Sacramento. She is the sister of Ray, Nancy and Neil Castleman of Sacramento and Mrs. Reed of Tucson. Earl Jones of Quincy is her grandfather.

Paul, who is a graduate of Redwood High School, is the brother of Lisa and Nancy Griesshaber of Corte Madera. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Griesshaber of Bonita Springs, Fla.

Faddish Diets Are Dangerous

NEW YORK (UPI) — Low carbohydrate diets can be faddish and even dangerous, says the Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York. If your meals contain too little carbohydrate, your body will use fat or protein for energy that should be utilized otherwise.

You can also suffer a shortage of protein for body repair and maintenance and a shortage of fat for vitamins and essential fatty acids.

Use Cards For Happy Holiday Look

Some ideas:

Attach cards to a folding cardboard screen covered with gold paper that would serve as a backdrop for a statue of the Madonna or a replica of the Christmas crib.

Cut a giant tree-shape from green felt. Tape it to a wall. As the cards arrive, add them to the "tree" with pins, tape, or glue.

Use wide strips of red satin greetings. Tape ribbons to either side of a doorway or window. If the curtains won't interfere, run ribbons right down the window, attaching them to the frame at top and bottom.

Make a two-sided display by taping or stapling cards to both sides, thus making a window decoration that can be enjoyed from both outdoors and indoors.

Strip an old umbrella of fabric, spray spokes gold and anchor handle in a pot of soil or clay. Presto — you have an umbrella card tree. Hang on cards with red and green ribbons.

Doll Costumes Made By Girls

Marin Camp Fire Girls Discovery Club members have made costumes for dolls to be distributed by the Salvation Army for Christmas.

Other Camp Fire holiday activites will be singing Christmas carols Monday on KTIM radio and Tuesday at Kaiser Hospital in San Rafael.

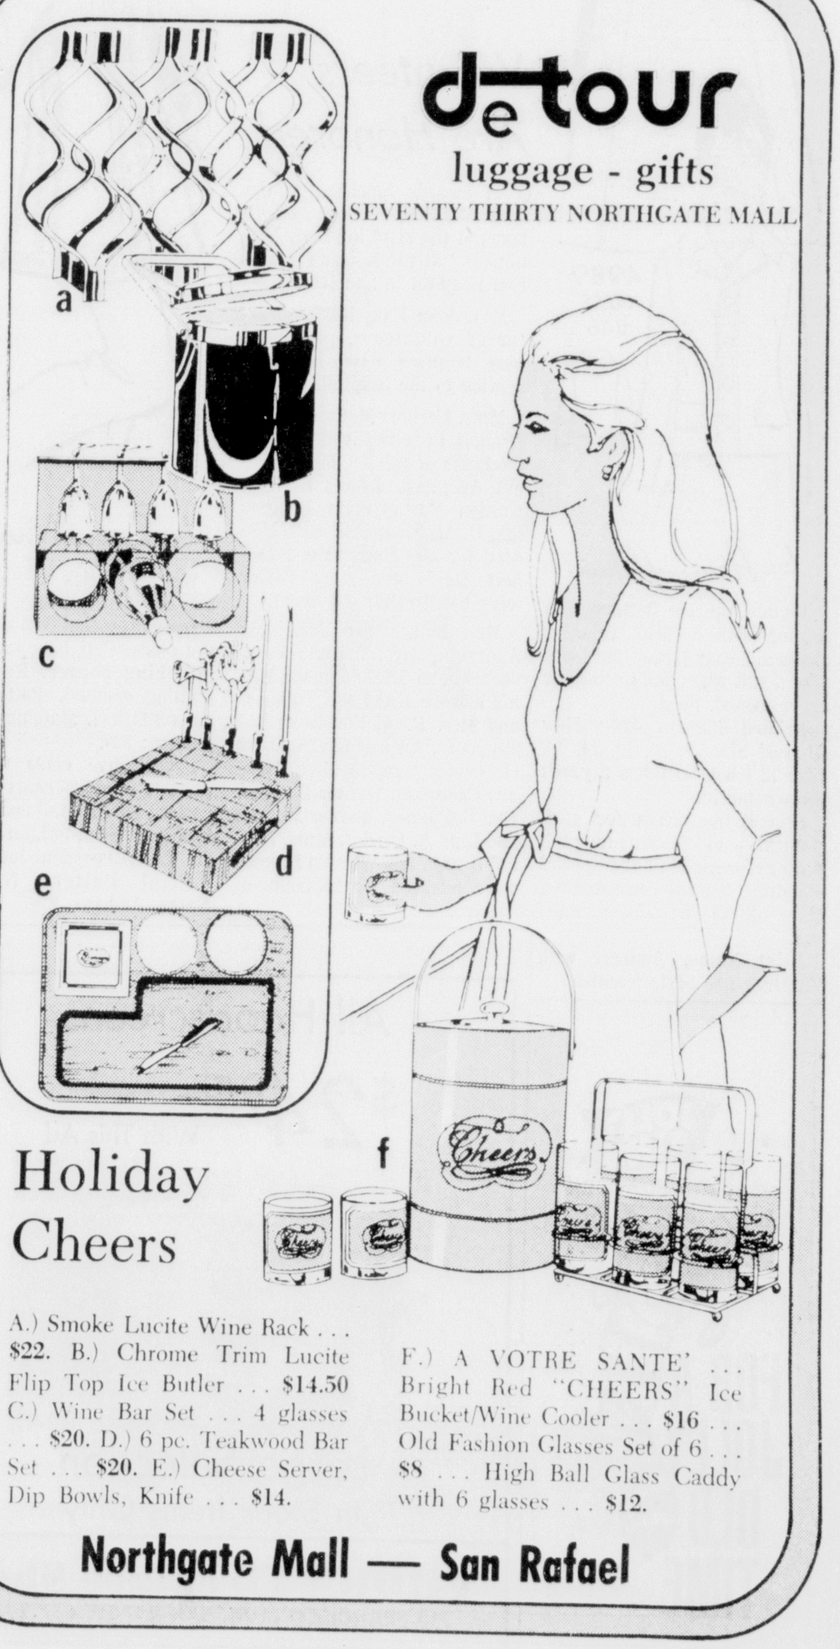
Epilepsy Said Nerve Disorder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Epilepsy is a disorder of the nervous system. Drugs have been developed which can wholly or partially control epileptic seizures in some 80 per cent of the cases, according to the National Health Education Committee.

However, great numbers of persons who could benefit from such treatment never receive it. Over 20 anti-convulsant drugs can control seizures.



GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Don't Push Your Boyfriend Into A Career — Give Encouragement

RAP:

How do you light the fire under a boyfriend? I don't mean lovewise, but careerwise.

Toby's only ambition right now is to marry me, and I like that idea too, but he won't plan ahead. He doesn't have any idea what he wants to do in life, I guess he thinks if you finish college, somehow you'll just drop into a great job without even aiming for it.

We're sophomores at the university and I already know I want to be an architect, but never mention it because I'm afraid he'd think I was putting him down for not having a direction.

He isn't afraid of work, he's bright, and he likes money, but — no goals. At 20, shouldn't a guy have decided what career he wants? — LOOKING AHEAD

DEAR LOOKING:

Aren't you pushing it a bit? A college student usually gets career-conscious in his junior or senior year, after he has most of the required courses out of the way and finds time to specialize. Encourage his interests — the goals will come in good time. — HELEN

LOOKING AHEAD:

Here's a tip that might work: talk about your architect-ambitions! A little competition sometimes lights the fire under a guy. If Toby hears you already have a career in mind, he may start thinking more seriously about his goals. . .The male ego thing, y'know: a man doesn't appreciate his girl getting ahead of him. — SUE

HELEN AND SUE:

These people (like "Archie") who keep harping that the peace symbol is a communistic sign, "anti-Christ witch's foot" emblem, and whatnot: don't they know a symbol means only what it is most widely accepted as?

The two-finger "peace" sign was once "V for Victory." When I was younger it meant donkey-ears when held behind a friend's head. If I see this gesture now I don't think someone is calling me a donkey. I return it as acknowledgment of a mutual desire for world peace. Another example:

Our political parties are represented by the elephant and the donkey. Does this mean that our politicians are all clumsy, tough-hided uglies or jackasses? — C.M.

C.M.:

We-e-ell. . .since you asked. . HELEN

Note from Sue: Mother, be nice; and keep the peace, okay?

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

What do you do about a father who thinks he's the world's greatest humorist? He yells to me down the hall, "Here's Pete," when he knows perfectly well it's Joe at the door. He just loves mixing up names of my boyfriends to embarrass me. If I show I'm mad, he teases all the more. — FATHER-BOTHERED NEW DATER

DEAR F.B.N.D.:

Better kidding than cussing —which is what some fathers do about boyfriends. Hopefully yours will outgrow this "cute" stage in a few months —with a little help from Mother. — HELEN

DEAR BOTHERED:

How about getting your mother to call your Dad a different man's name every night for a week? That should show him how it feels. — SUE

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Volunteers Are Honored

Mrs. John Rauschkolb, director of volunteers, presented pins totalling 6,900 hours of service to the hospital.

Mms. Herbert McComber and Francis Burt received pins for 800 hours of service. Mms. Robert Aregger, James Collins, Gordon Costa, John Reamey and G. M. Thomason were honored for 500 hours. Mms. Delbert Davis and John Taylor were honored for 400 hours.

Mrs. Betty Allen, Mrs. Roy Anderson, Mrs. Jerome Francheschi and Mrs. Seymour Malmuth were listed for 300 hours and Mrs. E. A. Kunstman had 200 hours. Awards for 100 hours of service went to Mms. Howard Chapman, Werner Desepte, Dan Gallagher, Warner Morgan and Luis A. Otanez. Mms. Donald Barron and Winston Frenzel were honored for 25 hours of service.

Vows Said At Fort Mason Chapel

Bette Ann Croker and Winford Foy Cox of San Francisco were married at Fort Mason Chapel in San Francisco on Dec. 10.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Croker of San Anselmo, Bette was attended by Mrs. Arthur Reade of San Bruno as her matron of honor.

Eddie Cox of Alameda was his brother's best man, and Curtis Griffon of San Francisco and Donald Leonard of Alameda seated the guests.

A reception followed at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club. Following a wedding trip through Northern California, the couple will live in San Francisco.

Bette is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and Fort Hays State College in Hays, Kan. She also attended the College of Marin.

She is employed with the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands Agency at Fort Mason.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Eufala, Ala., High School and is employed with the U.S. Government at Fort Mason. He is the brother of Mrs. Robert Jones of Eufala, Sherman Cox of Phoenix City, Ala., and Eddie Cox of Alameda.

Mother Of Eight Receives Degree

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—It's two down and one to go for Mrs. Don P. Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell, mother of eight and grandmother of 24, received her bachelor of science degree from Western Michigan University in weekend graduation ceremonies.

She quit high school in the 10th grade and returned to school and received her Benton Harbor High School diploma in 1966, along with her son, Steve, the last of the eight Mitchell children to graduate from high school.

Mrs. Mitchell says she will return to college in April and work for a masters degree.

A BRAZILIAN DANCE

From Self-Defense To Art Form

By RICHARD WEINGARTEN

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Seven teen-age girls recently enrolled in an all-male class to learn the rough and tumble dance with the evil mystique Brazilians call "capoeira."

"My mother and father were against the idea, and still are," Claudia Almeida, 18, told UPI. "You know, they thought I'd get hurt, and meet the wrong types."

Her parents' attitude is typical of most middle class Brazilians. They associate capoeira with street brawling.

Brazilian slaves first developed capoeira as a means of self defense against armed slave masters. Using a combination of rapid, well-aimed kicks, and dodges, a rebellious slave was able to fend off two or three opponents. A legendary slave leader, Zumbi, is said to have whipped 30 whites in one fight.

In 1890, a year after Brazilian slaves were emancipated, capoeira was prohibited by law. Backlands politicians for years had henchmen trained in capoeira to "win over" voters.

Later, the most experienced capoeristas, known as "masters," toned down its most violent elements. When whites were present, they staged special acrobatic exhibitions using the so called "gentlemen's touch."

President Getulio Vargas saw one of these demonstrations in 1934 and was much impressed. Shortly afterwards, two famous capoeiristas opened Capoeira Academies.

AS TAUGHT and practiced in the academies, capoeira has evolved away from violence towards becoming a stylized dance. It demands great agility and tremendous physical stamina.

A group of Sao Paulo capoeira masters are now trying to have the government make capoeira Brazil's national sport. It is unlikely that this will happen very soon, because capoeira has not yet lost its shady image.

A recent newspaper report told of a 16 year old capoeirista who tangled with two policemen. Before the police could draw their revolvers, the boy gave each a barefooted smack on the ear and fled through a screen of excited onlookers.

THE GIRLS learning capoeira from "Peixinho," a 22-year-old business administration student and member of Rio's folkdancing "Senzala Group," said that they were not interested in becoming vicious capoeira mercenaries.

Claudia said she was interested in the dance, not in "busting some guy in the mouth." She said she began dancing capoeira with her boyfriend.

For Regina Botello, 16, capoeira classes were "really neat" compared to "boring" ballet classes.

American-born Regina "Nina" Whealer, 17, said she had an "aggressive streak" and likes "aggressive dance."

Peixinho, whose real name is Marcelo Guimaraes, said capoeira presented "no special difficulties" for the girls.

Boys and girls agreed, however, that capoeira requires a dose of "malice."

"The important blows are delivered on the counterattack," Peixinho explained. "When my opponent's coming at me, I try to evade his kick, and give him a kick, or push him off balance."

ASKED IF she was malicious enough to be a good capoerista, Claudia came back with a coy smile and said, "Any person born and raised in Rio de Janeiro is enough of a scoundrel to be an excellent capoeirista."

In less than five months, the girls have learned five basic capoeira attacks. The "Ginga" is a bobbing and weaving step used to size up one's opponent.

To an outsider the other blows start out innocently, looking like a slow, backwards cartwheel, until a meaty heel goes flying into the face, chest, or ribcage of the other dancer.

Those not dancing clap their hands and chant the special refrains that describe the action. A one-stringed instrument called a "Berimbau" provides the twangy rhythm for the dancers. Tambourines and long cylindrical bongo drums are also used.

"But it is the berimbau that commands the dance," Peixinho said.

Weigh All The Sides Carefully Before Taking The Job Plunge

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's what you might call the "silent majority" of women in this nation.

They're the ones who do not hold jobs outside the home. Occasionally they're counted but it's the other group—the working women—who get more national attention.

Statistically, the women who do not hold jobs outside the home number 41 million (the latest count from the U.S. Department of Labor). Of these, 35 million plus keep house, another 3.4 million are in school and still a segment of several hundred thousand are unable to work. In short, this group is larger than the more publicized 31.5 million who do hold jobs.

Now comes the question—if you're among the 41 million, should you enter the labor market? The Women's Bureau (of the labor department) says yes.

YOUR TALENTS and skills are needed in the economy and the development of new industries and expansion of others has opened new doors in business, the professions and the production of goods and services.

But there are many things to consider before you seek a paying job. The idea of extra income sounds great—but how much extra will a job mean?

One national magazine recently calculated that extra costs and hidden expenses could eat up 70 per cent of that contribution.

Penny Scott, family financial consultant for the Oak Park, Ill., Federal Savings and Loan Association, takes one family to illustrate what can happen to that two-salaried family with preschool children.

Husband earns $14,400 annually and wife gets a job for $9,200, giving her a base pay of $177 a week.

SHE "LOSES" $23 withheld for federal income tax and another $5 for a typical state tax, plus $9 for social security. Another $2 weekly goes for group health and life insurance plans. That leaves her $138 per week.

But the wife also pays $25 a week for child care, $15 a week for housekeeping help, $10 a week for lunches and coffee breaks, and $3 per week for bus fare.

In addition, the wife spends $15 a week for the cost of new clothes, more frequent trips to the hairdresser, ready prepared or convenience foods, use of commercial laundry, more dry cleaning and the like.

All of these extras make the $177 a week dwindle to $70, or $3,640 a year.

Then at tax time, because her withholding enters into the total family income, the family finds it owes an additional $818 in federal income taxes. And in some instances, state and city income taxes also take another big bite.

All told, this wife may end up with only 30 per cent of her annual salary.

GRANTED, THE working woman can save by taking her lunch and if the family is cooperative, and she is strong enough, she can do her own housekeeping after job hours.

But an outside job also could mean the family needs a second car. Even if she goes in a car pool, she may have to contribute to gas expenses. And some jobs also involve dues and license expenses.

Now, should the wife still seek a paying job?

Talk the matter over with the entire family. It should be a family decision, actually, said Miss Scott.

Everyone should understand what's involved and the changes that have to be made.

Miss Scott makes another recommendation—put some of the wife's income into savings, just as some of the husband's should be stowed away.

Ladies' Days On Slopes Returning

OTTAWA (UPI) — Ladies' Days, which were given a tryout last season, are back again this year every Tuesday and Wednesday at Silver Star Mountain ski area in Vernon, British Columbia, Canada, says the government tourist bureau.

Special baby-sitting services are provided for skiing moms. The idea has proved so popular that ski-moms from many surrounding towns flock to Vernon for Ladies' Days.

More Free Time Than The Bachelor

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japanese government survey on leisure showed that fathers with the youngest child in high school or above have more free time than bachelors.

Unmarried men have about four and a half hours of free time each weekday, compared with more than five hours for married men with children of high school age or older, the survey reported.

A Cookbook Funds To Go To Agency

NEW YORK (UPI) —A San Francisco research organization that specializes in ethnic and minority studies has added a cookbook to its publishing list to raise funds for CARE, the international assistance agency.

Most of the recipes in the "We Care Cookbook" by Robert D. Reed and Kathy S. Reed (R & E Research Associates) were culled from 19th and early 20th century cookbooks, but a few are included from CARE nutritionists as examples of the types of foods used in the agency's program. Included are recipes from Africa, Pakistan, northern India, the Bulkans, southeast Asia, the Caribbean and Latin America.

A third of the price of each book is donated to the assistance agency, and represents food for 300 children.

The book can be ordered by direct mail from We Care Cookbook, 18581 McFarland Ave., Saratoga, Calif., 95070.

Publishers hope to expand distribution through bulk sales to individuals, church and other community and civic groups, school and college organizations, service clubs and youth groups. Single copies are $3.45 each, including postage.

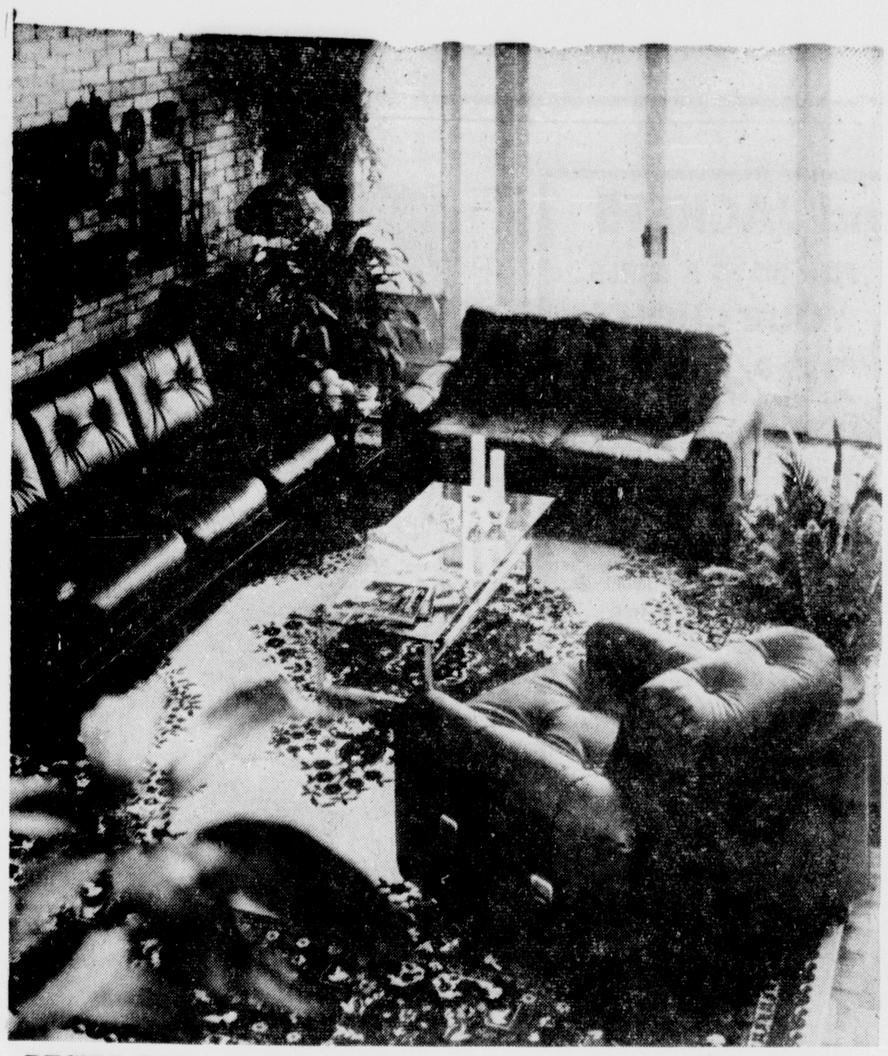
Mixing Design Periods Can Be Fun



RECIPE FOR a good room is to mix the best of today's upholstery techniques with the visuals of timelessness. Kroehler's Country Set group is at home with period accessories.

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
(Distributed by Genera Features Corp.

Rather consistently I hear myself claiming to be a totally contemporary person. Nostalgia is not for me. Tomorrow is something I anticipate with relish, including the possibility of visiting yonder moon.

Yet beautiful old things get their hooks into me. A jewel of a Louis Comfort Tiffany bud vase, embellished with tendrils of dark green glass, is a favorite possession. And pre-Columbian artifacts dating from 700 to 1,000 years ago seem totally appropriate to my lifestyle and, in fact, they rest atop my 1972 stereo speakers.

There's a bit of this duality in most of us, so it's sometimes confusing to make a decorating decision based on multiple interests.

So my advice is pick one major period of design you prefer above all others, whether it be English country, 18th-Century French, American Colonial or 20th-Century modern (or at least what we now consider modern). Organize major seating pieces and one or two tables or cabinets in this "look." Then forget it. Don't buy a rug to match the look, don't search for lamps with similar detailing. Just start acquiring the best accessories for today's living.

MODERN LAMPS are one of the easiest accessories to absorb into an eclectic interior. Pick the purest forms — the lamps that do the job you require. If you prefer Oriental rugs, use them, no matter what kind of furniture you've selected; they really are at home with everything. And if you own the rug before you purchase furniture, let the rug be your color guide.

Oriental rugs generally leave areas of wood or vinyl or tile flooring exposed. Some free-wheeling designers like to place Oriental rugs atop wall-to-wall carpeting where the floors are not sufficiently handsome or exposable. For example, many houses have concrete slabs as base floors, and builders have installed carpeting over the slab. A new owner might take up the carpet expecting to find wood floors. Quite a surprise!

So before you throw away current wall-to-wall carpeting, check the base. You may prefer the Oriental or contemporary area rug atop the old carpeting than a big investment in wood or tile floors.

The room shown today bridges a lot of design gaps. The owners stripped a painted wall to expose old brick construction. They refinished an unusual stained and paned door and window area. They brought in lots of oldies but goodies, such as the hanging Tiffany lamp and the collectables on the wall.

For seating they chose the supercomfort of Kroehler's Country Set line and instead of simply a sofa and chair, they added a two-seater unit that really expands the sit-down space in this attractive room. Although it keeps its secret well, this Kroehler group is covered in Uniroyal's new Aerflo breathable vinyl, not real leather. Lots of foam cushioning makes it truly soft to the touch as well as easy on the eyes — and a perfect mate for the Oriental rug.

Osteoarthritis Afflicts Many

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 10 million Americans have osteoarthritis severe enough to cause painful problems. Osteoarthritis is associated with aging and degeneration of joint tissues.

It usually develops more slowly and is milder and less painful than rheumatoid arthritis.

Democracy Must Work Both Ways

In a democracy, the majority rules.

When a proposition is put before the electorate for decision, we are all expected to abide by the result of the vote.

TWELVE YEARS ago, directors of Marin Municipal Water District decided to put on the ballot the question of whether fluoride should be added to the district's water supply. They didn't have to do this. The district has legal power to add fluoride just as it adds other things to the water. But the directors felt the democratic way would be to put the issue before the voters.

In the June, 1960, primary, fluoridation lost by 84 votes — 18,967 "yes" to 19,051 "no."

Because the result was so close, groups favoring fluoridation decided to try again. They qualified an initiative for the November ballot, putting the issue back before the people.

That time, it was turned down decisively, 29,133 "no" to 21,879 "yes."

The nearly 22,000 voters who had wanted fluoridation accepted the result. So did the water district directors. No fluoride was added.

TWELVE YEARS elapsed, during which many other communities fluoridated their water supplies. This year, water district directors decided to put the issue to the people again.

This time it passed: 46,105 "yes" to 35,901 "no."

But now it turns out that the anti-fluoridationists, who were all for majority rule when they were on the winning side, don't believe in it when they lose.

Last week one of their spokesmen, Wynn E. Westover, called on the water district board to have an "environmental impact" study made before carrying out the fluoridation mandated by the voters.

He claimed the district is obligated to notify customers of possible "side-effects" of adding fluoride to the water.

THIS IS nonsense. Environmental impact reports are for construction projects which may change the geography, or pollute air or water. Adding fluoride to the water is not polluting it. In fact, the principal objection of the anti-fluoridationists is that fluoridation is medicating the water. They claim that's what they don't believe in.

The water district directors showed absence of spine and good sense in asking the district's legal counsel to look into the "environmental impact" issue.

The district directors of a decade ago sensibly accepted the verdict of the majority as expressed at the polls. They didn't have to. They could have fluoridated the supply anyhow. But they believed in the democratic way.

The present directors should show as much gumption. The voters called for fluoridation by a plurality of more than 10,000. The people have spoken. The water district should get on with the program, and not be deterred by obstructionist, anti-democratic attacks.

Bird's Shoes? Well, Almost

Have you wondered how birds are able to keep their thin, stick-like feet from freezing in very cold weather? One reason is the elevated metabolism and the circulation of very warm blood through the feet. Birds have body temperatures in the range of 102 degrees. To fuel this fire requires much food. Which is why birds appreciate gifts of high calorie goodies, such as beef suet, during the winter.

Nature has put thick, leather-like "shoes" on her birds. These help insulate against the cold. In chilly weather, the bird will press his feet into his fluffed-out feathers, as we might put our cold hands under our sweater.

Why Is U.C.'s Hitch Afraid To Make Contract Public?

By EARL G. WATERS

A request to the University of California to view the employment contract between President Charles J. Hitch and the regents has been denied this writer.

As the basis for the denial it was stated, "According to Government Code Section 6254, subsection 'c,' an employment contract is not a public record, and disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Says who?

THAT POSITION, Mr. Hitch, is an unwarranted affront to this reporter and every taxpayer of this state who contributes to your salary and the support of the university.

The section referred to relates to records which are not required to be disclosed. Subsection "c" includes among such records, "Personnel, medical or similar files. . ."

It says nothing about employment contracts which require the expenditure of tax dollars.

The university is supported by tax dollars. All other moneys in its possession, regardless of whether they were private gifts or whatever source, become public money the moment they are accepted by the university.

All contracts by which public funds are expended that are executed by a state agency for construction, equipment, goods or services are public records. If they are not, there had better be some law changes pronto!

The salaries and other emoluments given to all professors and other employees are public. To take the position that the prsident's conditions of employment are to be excepted is untenable.

IT IS AN AMAZING position for the president of the state's seat of learning to take.

What is being hidden?

The inquiry was prompted by rumors floating about that Hitch has a "sweetheart" contract which provides much more than that normally given to presidents of other universities, public or private.

If this is not a fact, it should be scotched. Rather than to suggest the contract is not proper, this column sought to get the facts.

The emoluments given Hitch should be matched with those granted other college presidents. Perhaps the salary of $53,000, which is more than that paid the governor of California, is not enough. Then, again, it may be excessive when all other benefits granted at cost to the taxpayers are added up. No one will know until the contract is disclosed.

The withholding of the facts from the public can only breed suspicion.

IT HAS BEEN leanred that this information is not in the possession of Director of Finance Verne Orr, despite the fact Hitch is asking Orr for more than $400 million to run the university next year.

Now, Mr. Hitch, you are respectfully requested to review your position and disclose this contract for the edification of the taxpayers. This request is made to avoid the embarrassment to you that would result if it becomes necessary to drag you into court.

Please be advised, Mr. Hitch, that we are prepared to do exactly that if you persist in denying this right to this reporter.

"No, you keep 'em. We can't fly 'em either."

Concerned For Welfare Of Missing Dog

On the night of Dec. 6, my dog accidentally got out of our fenced back yard. I raised this dog from a small puppy and I am extremely fond of him. He had a good home and exceptional care.

For the last six days I have tried in vain to locate him. . .All of my attempts to find my dog have been unsuccessful.

It has been suggested by many people that my dog is being kept by some household. If this is so I hope that it is only temporary until I can be located and identify him as my dog. If the home he has found is one where his keepers are fond of him also I would most certainly like to be consulted in this matter. Just knowing he is alive and well would put my mind at rest. I would possibly consider allowing whoever it is the privilege of my dog remaining with them. . .

Response To Emergency Calls Slow In Hub

I am wondering if anyone else is experiencing the difficulty I am, regarding emergency assistance in San Anselmo.

A few weeks ago, early one Sunday morning, I was awakened by a neighbor who was screaming for help. I immediately tried to alert our police department. It took seven minutes to give the particulars, over and over again, to the switchboard operator at the police department, and another 10 minutes before they responded with a patrol car.

Last Sunday evening, one of the coldest nights in our recent freezing weather, an elderly neighborhood woman fell down an outside stairway. A friend and I called for assistance from the San Anselmo Police Department, and then we stayed with the woman, seated on cold concrete steps, trying to keep the lady warm, and afraid to move her as the extent of her injuries was not known. It took 45 minutes for the police and ambulance to arrive.

We hear a lot nowadays about people not caring for other human beings, and turning their backs when a neighbor needs help. What about those of us who do care, and then find that we are not able to get the assistance we need. It is disheartening, to say the least, to "get involved" and not receive the protection we are paying taxes for. . .

District Discriminates Against Auto Drivers

How long are the commuters and taxpayers going to put up with the overt discrimination practiced by the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit District? Consider the special bus lane as an example:

1. The bridge and highway north of the bridge were paid for primarily by funds from auto commuters.
2. Funds to purchase the buses provided by the district came primarily from the auto commuter.
3. Funds to subsidize the loss operation of the bus system and ferry system came primarily from the auto commuter.
4. Patrons of the bus and ferry system are not paying anywhere near the cost of the services provided them.
5. The bus system, which I understood was to help relieve traffic congestion, has indeed further complicated an already impossible commute situation and now also involves southbound traffic in the evening.

What possible rationale can there be to diverting the buses into special lanes to speed the people who are not paying their way past the endless line of cars winding down the Waldo in bumper to bumper stop and go driven by the people who made the entire system possible and who are paying the lion's share of the cost? How about a $1 per person donation to hire an attorney to file a class action suit against the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit and its directors to get the system back to some degree of sanity?

Arabs Held To Blame For Refugee Problem

Concerning Dr. Graham's comments: To say that the "pro-Jewish press never reports on the plight of the Arab refugees is a total misconception. Almost every article on the Mid-East will have reference to the refugee problem.

To say that the one million refugees were "driven from their homes" without referring to the statements of the Grand Mufti of Jeruselum before the 1948 war, exhorting the Arabs to leave the territory because the Arab armies will drive the new state into the sea, at which time they can return and take over all the land, is certainly showing your bias. The Arabs declared and started the war on Israel to wipe out the new state in 1948 when the refugees fled.

Every war, whether it's Vietnam, India-Pakistan, or the internal Sudanese war, produces a refugee problem, but reflect on who started the 1948 conflict. Without it, no refugees would exist. The Mayor of Haifa in 1948 asked the Arabs not to leave.

. . . Over one million Jews have fled from every Arab country where they have been persecuted. Does the U.N. ever discuss their plight?

To say that "the refugees have no seat in the U.N. so that the world has provided them with no recourse" is to completely disregard the almost total number of Arab countries and those whom they aid that almost completely control the U.N. and give support to the Arabs and their cause.

To imply that the area of Palestine was ruled by Arabs and therefore is entitled to representation is to completely disregard history. Previous to 1948, the area was governed by the British as a mandate from 1918 to 1948. Prior to that the non-Arab Turkish Ottoman Empire ruled it for almost six centuries. One would have to go back to the ninth century to find Arab rule over the land.

With its obvious bias and its lack of a meaningful peace-keeping force, how can the U.N. ever impose a peace in the area as Dr. Graham suggests?

Remember the old days before Women's Lib when Christmas was the season of good will toward men?

This year the gals are rewriting the Christmas story to make two of the three Wise Men women.

Instead of a Mr. Santa who comes down the chimney, we now have a Ms. Claus who goes through the roof.

The thing about this year's Christmas carols is that the women insist on calling the tune.

Capitol Soothsayer Sees Nixon In Another Turn-Around

WASHINGTON — This is an informed view of 1973. It is a view not from the White House where all the blinds are down and the rule is silence, but from one of the ablest administrator-economists who follows the trends at close range with a specialized staff and the requisite computer banks.

Into the forecast goes a healthy respect for President Nixon's capacity for making a 180-degree turn and doing just what he said he would never do. The surprise element could in mid-1973, in this educated crystal ball, produce a dramatic turnaround comparable to mid-1971 when the president clamped on wage and price controls and re-valued the currency. He is capable of stealing the Democrats' clothes while they are happily swimming in the warm current of spending welfare programs.

As for the economy, prospects look favorable to very good. The upward trend in the last quarter of 1972 will be sustained perhaps through the entire year. The drop in the unemployment rate just disclosed from 5.5 to 5.2 is likely to continue. It will bounce around the five per cent mark, possibly even falling below that barrier.

INFLATION DOESN'T look good. While the rate had begun to come down, recent price increases threaten to start it upward again and that is particularly true for food. With the $1.2 billion wheat sale to the Soviet Union, wheat stocks have been run down. This carries over into corn and in turn into beef.

Yet the administration can take comfort from the fact that the rate is so much lower than in other western nations. Whem Prime Minister Edward Heath comes here just after the inauguration, he will envy the American rate of 3.5 to four per cent a year as against Britain's eight per cent plus. In West Germany it is 6.3.

So on the economic side it is almost all on the upbeat. On the political side the opposite is true. Congress and the President will engage in a long and bitter wrangle over spending versus economy. The President will come in with a new budget tailored like the '74 budget with cuts deep enough to preclude a tax increase. That along with the $250 billion Nixon spending ceiling will be the battleground.

The Democratic attack will come through pushing programs such as Sen. Walter Mondale's child care bill and the aid to higher education that he has sponsored along with Sen. Claiborne Pell. The strategy will center on grants in aid to states and municipalities. Here is the sensitive political nerve as localities discover that with the Nixon economy they are not going to get the help that seemed programmed into the spending measures. The President's slash of half the $18 billion voted to clean up America's rivers is causing wide crumbling.

But the cuts will not be sufficient and by mid-year, say, the administration will face a painful dilemma. The choice will be either new taxes or more deficit spending, and with $100 billion in red ink already on the ledger, the latter course is all but ruled out.

THEN COMES the great turn-around scene comparable to Aug. 15, 1971, when the President took the steps — wage and price controls — that he had been saying for two years he would never take. He proposes to wrap all grants in aid programs in one big bundle and with no strings attached get the federal government entirely out of the picture. This would mean a whopping bonanza of perhaps $40 billion compared to which the revenue sharing now being dished out is peanuts.

This will spell the end of administration resistance to cutbacks in the welfare-reform measures. The economic policy will have collapsed, to paraphrase that often quoted line of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper. And the President can blame the Congress for the tax increases that will have to follow.

The seer has come up with one other possibility after careful study of the computerized crystal ball. That is a sizeable cut in the defense budget based on optimism over progress in disarmament in the SALT II talks with the Soviet Union. But the chances for this happening are rated at 10 per cent.

Meandering Streams Become Ugly Ditches 'To Conserve Soil'

You may find it hard to believe the government is spending large sums of your tax money converting beautiful natural streams into ugly ditches.

But that is exactly what the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing.

They call it "channelization."

TO CHANNELIZE a meandering creek or river, you move in with chain saws and bulldozers and strip its banks of trees and brush. Then you bring in huge draglines to deepen and straighten the stream bed, eliminating all the bends and looping curves that slow down the flow of water —and incidentally make the stream a thing of beauty.

Because a channelized stream carries off water more rapidly, nearby bottomlands which once were subject to flooding may become suitable for agriculture.

This presumably benefits the farmers who own those lands, since they can look to the government rather than themselves to foot most of the bill.

OF COURSE, there is some question about the consistency of the Department of Agriculture spending tax money to create new farm lands at the same time it is ladling out funds to farmers to take other croplands out of cultivation.

But that is not the biggest objection that has been raised by critics of channelization.

Environmental protection groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society, say channelization is doing infinitely more harm than good. Even the farmers who get new land may suffer, they say, from a lowering of the water table that causes wells and springs to dry up.

The principal victims of channelization projects, they say, are swamps and floodlands that have served for centuries as natural habitats for many types of wildlife.

FOR EXAMPLE: in one of its current projects, the Soil Conservation Service proposes to dig a big ditch through the Horse Range Swamp in South Carolina. Conservationists say it will destroy the Horse Range Swamp and adversely affect the nearby Four Holes Swamp, which the Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy have purchased to protect perpetually as a classic example of the fast-disappearing ecology of the back-water cypress swamp.

Concern about the effects of the project also has been expressed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and even by the Army Corps of Engineers, which is not noted as an ardent exponent of conservation.

Political pressure is building up to halt the Horse Range ditching. But the same battle will have to be fought in hundreds of other places all over America.

The SCS already has gutterized 8,000 miles of American streams, and has scheduled another 13,000 miles for similar "improvement." Its ultimate goal is to convert 175,000 miles of winding natural woodland streams into nude-banked ditches.

Bicycle Paths For Petaluma At Last In Planning Stage

Petaluma's long-awaited bicycle path system is finally in the planning stages after months of discussion.

Responses from a survey mailed to all residences along with water bills showed most Petalumans want a system for recreational use rather than as alternate transportation to the family car.

Consultant Arnold A. Johnson, whose services are provided by a state grant, will be working out the system along with city staff members and citizens. If everything goes smoothly, the paths could be in operation in 1973.

The bicycle survey brought a 22.5 per cent return or a total of 2,114 replies, which is considered good for Petaluma. The streets most often listed as favorites for riding were Washington Street, South McDowell Boulevard, Ely Road, Petaluma Boulevard, and Western Avenue.

THE DANGER of auto traffic was listed as the main reason for not using bicycles for local transportation. The high rate of bicycle thefts was a distant second as the deterrent.

Although the questionnaire had only a tiny space for written comments, many of the responses included them. Most cited the need for bicycle safety near schools and made very general comments, but one citizen demanded that all city employees be required to ride bicycles to work. For some it might be practical, but the comment brought only chuckles from public works employees who live in Santa Rosa and Forestville.

If a bicycle path system is installed, next year's residential development allotment board will have better ammunition to require paths from developers.

This year's board often questioned builders on the lack of trails, only to be told the suggestion was "ridiculous" since there was not central path for a link-up. Next year they may have to think of some other excuse.

LAST WEEK'S Old Adobe School district special election will go down in history as one of the least noticed and most costly in local history.

The Sonoma County Board of Elections estimated cost of the election at $1,500, which figures out to nearly $5 per vote since only 310 were cast. The other 4,574 registered voters should have gone to the polls if for no other reason than to get their money's worth.

60 Days Jail Time Is Given To Driver, 18

A Marin Superior Court judge has ordered 18-year-old Newton Jeffrey Wise of Tiburon to spend 60 days in jail for felony drunken driving during an accident in which he and four others were injured.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also fined Wise $500 and placed him on probation for two years on the charge resulting from a two-car collision near Redwood High School in Larkspur Sept. 23.

Police said a car driven by Wise went through a stop sign at Doherty Drive and Riviera Circle and collided with a car driven by Stanley G. Walker, 39, of Larkspur.

Both drivers, two passengers in Walker's car and one in Wise's were taken to a local hospital by ambulance after the wreck.

Best Hope For Vietnam May Be Long-Lasting Warce

WASHINGTON — It is obvious from the recent Kissinger talks in Paris that we have been unable to work out a true peace treaty in Vietnam.

Hallaby Hegelstein, a political science professor, maintains the most we can get out of Indochina is a "warce."

"What is a warce?" I asked him.

"IT IS NEITHER peace nor war; it is actually a combination of both. For some time now the world has needed a new word to describe the situation many countries are in. In the Middle East you do not have peace, nor do you have a fighting war. The English language has no word for this predicament so I invented one which I call 'warce.' "

"How could warce apply to Vietnam?"

"If the United States signs a treaty with Hanoi which the South Vietnamese refuse to ratify, you will have a state of warce. President Nixon may call it a peace, but he would only be kidding himself and the American people."

"What would the warce consist of?" I asked.

"You would probably have a cease-fire with some fighting on both sides. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will continue sporadic probing of the South Vietnamese defenses, and the South Vietnamese will probably make occasional attacks on Viet Cong strongholds. But both sides will probably be stalemated and the warce could continue for years."

"WELL, I GUESS a warce in Indochina is better than nothing," I said.

"It might be the coming thing. Since peace treaties are so hard to come by, I would advocate that nations sign warce treaties instead. It could save face on both sides. Many of our world leaders consider the signing of a peace pact a sign of weakness. But no one could criticize them at home if they said they had agreed to a warce."

"I imagine if he couldn't have it any other way, President Nixon would settle for a generation of warce," I said.

"The advantage of warce," Hegelsten said, "is that Congress wouldn't have to declare it. If the President decided he wanted to involve the country in a warce, he could do it on his own."

"And if he succeeded," I said, "he could be nominated for the Nobel Warce Prize."

"I BELIEVE the nation would thrive on a warce footing," Hagelstein said. "You wouldn't have to shut down your defense plants and put a lot of people out of work, and at the same time you would use very little of the stuff to kill people."

"And you could sell warce bonds to finance it," I added.

"It would also solve the military problem. In a period of peace, the armed forces find themselves in disrepute. But if we were at warce, our men in uniform would still be respected and there would be plenty of opportunity for promotion," Hegelstein said.

He added, "The world is not ready for peace and may never be. At the same time, war is not the answer to our problems. Therefore, we must condition ourselves to warce — whether they be warces of liberation, limited warces or even a World Warce. Vietnam may be the big test. If we can have a successful warce there, it will prove that it's possible to have a warce anywhere."

"That's a good thought to leave with people at this time of year, Professor."

"Thank you. Merry Christmas, and remember, warce on earth —good will to men."

World Cup Skiing

The opening meet of the World Cup ski season ended last week in the French Alpine town of Val D'Isere. About half m the American team participated in the meet. In World Cup competition, both men's and women's teams vie for points in straight downhill races and zigzag downhill races. Skiing is a relatively new sport. The first ski competition was believed to be held in Norway about 1875. Skiing became a part of the Winter Olympic Games in 1924. Before the World Cup season ends in March, 1973, skiers will have traversed slopes in Yugoslavia, Germany, Alaska, Japan, and California.

Democracy Must Work Both Ways

In a democracy, the majority rules.

When a proposition is put before the electorate for decision, we are all expected to abide by the result of the vote.

TWELVE YEARS ago, directors of Marin Municipal Water District decided to put on the ballot the question of whether fluoride should be added to the district's water supply. They didn't have to do this. The district has legal power to add fluoride just as it adds other things to the water. But the directors felt the democratic way would be to put the issue before the voters.

In the June, 1960, primary, fluoridation lost by 84 votes — 18,967 "yes" to 19,051 "no."

Because the result was so close, groups favoring fluoridation decided to try again. They qualified an initiative for the November ballot, putting the issue back before the people.

That time, it was turned down decisively, 29,133 "no" to 21,879 "yes."

The nearly 22,000 voters who had wanted fluoridation accepted the result. So did the water district directors. No fluoride was added.

TWELVE YEARS elapsed, during which many other communities fluoridated their water supplies. This year, water district directors decided to put the issue to the people again.

This time it passed: 46,105 "yes" to 35,901 "no."

But now it turns out that the anti-fluoridationists, who were all for majority rule when they were on the winning side, don't believe in it when they lose.

Last week one of their spokesmen, Wynn E. Westover, called on the water district board to have an "environmental impact" study made before carrying out the fluoridation mandated by the voters.

He claimed the district is obligated to notify customers of possible "side-effects" of adding fluoride to the water.

THIS IS nonsense. Environmental impact reports are for construction projects which may change the geography, or pollute air or water. Adding fluoride to the water is not polluting it. In fact, the principal objection of the anti-fluoridationists is that fluoridation is medicating the water. They claim that's what they don't believe in.

The water district directors showed absence of spine and good sense in asking the district's legal counsel to look into the "environmental impact" issue.

The district directors of a decade ago sensibly accepted the verdict of the majority as expressed at the polls. They didn't have to. They could have fluoridated the supply anyhow. But they believed in the democratic way.

The present directors should show as much gumption. The voters called for fluoridation by a plurality of more than 10,000. The people have spoken. The water district should get on with the program, and not be deterred by obstructionist, anti-democratic attacks.

Bird's Shoes? Well, Almost

Have you wondered how birds are able to keep their thin, stick-like feet from freezing in very cold weather? One reason is the elevated metabolism and the circulation of very warm blood through the feet. Birds have body temperatures in the range of 102 degrees. To fuel this fire requires much food. Which is why birds appreciate gifts of high calorie goodies, such as beef suet, during the winter.

Nature has put thick, leather-like "shoes" on her birds. These help insulate against the cold. In chilly weather, the bird will press his feet into his fluffed-out feathers, as we might put our cold hands under our sweater.

Why Is U.C.'s Hitch Afraid To Make Contract Public?

By EARL G. WATERS

A request to the University of California to view the employment contract between President Charles J. Hitch and the regents has been denied this writer.

As the basis for the denial it was stated, "According to Government Code Section 6254, subsection 'c,' an employment contract is not a public record, and disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Says who?

THAT POSITION, Mr. Hitch, is an unwarranted affront to this reporter and every taxpayer of this state who contributes to your salary and the support of the university.

The section referred to relates to records which are not required to be disclosed. Subsection "c" includes among such records, "Personnel, medical or similar files. . ."

It says nothing about employment contracts which require the expenditure of tax dollars.

The university is supported by tax dollars. All other moneys in its possession, regardless of whether they were private gifts or whatever source, become public money the moment they are accepted by the university.

All contracts by which public funds are expended that are executed by a state agency for construction, equipment, goods or services are public records. If they are not, there had better be some law changes pronto!

The salaries and other emoluments given to all professors and other employees are public. To take the position that the prsident's conditions of employment are to be excepted is untenable.

IT IS AN AMAZING position for the president of the state's seat of learning to take.

What is being hidden?

The inquiry was prompted by rumors floating about that Hitch has a "sweetheart" contract which provides much more than that normally given to presidents of other universities, public or private.

If this is not a fact, it should be scotched. Rather than to suggest the contract is not proper, this column sought to get the facts.

The emoluments given Hitch should be matched with those granted other college presidents. Perhaps the salary of $53,000, which is more than that paid the governor of California, is not enough. Then, again, it may be excessive when all other benefits granted at cost to the taxpayers are added up. No one will know until the contract is disclosed.

The withholding of the facts from the public can only breed suspicion.

IT HAS BEEN leanred that this information is not in the possession of Director of Finance Verne Orr, despite the fact Hitch is asking Orr for more than $400 million to run the university next year.

Now, Mr. Hitch, you are respectfully requested to review your position and disclose this contract for the edification of the taxpayers. This request is made to avoid the embarrassment to you that would result if it becomes necessary to drag you into court.

Please be advised, Mr. Hitch, that we are prepared to do exactly that if you persist in denying this right to this reporter.

"No, you keep 'em. We can't fly 'em either."

Concerned For Welfare Of Missing Dog

On the night of Dec. 6, my dog accidentally got out of our fenced back yard. I raised this dog from a small puppy and I am extremely fond of him. He had a good home and exceptional care.

For the last six days I have tried in vain to locate him. . .All of my attempts to find my dog have been unsuccessful.

It has been suggested by many people that my dog is being kept by some household. If this is so I hope that it is only temporary until I can be located and identify him as my dog. If the home he has found is one where his keepers are fond of him also I would most certainly like to be consulted in this matter. Just knowing he is alive and well would put my mind at rest. I would possibly consider allowing whoever it is the privilege of my dog remaining with them. . .

Response To Emergency Calls Slow In Hub

I am wondering if anyone else is experiencing the difficulty I am, regarding emergency assistance in San Anselmo.

A few weeks ago, early one Sunday morning, I was awakened by a neighbor who was screaming for help. I immediately tried to alert our police department. It took seven minutes to give the particulars, over and over again, to the switchboard operator at the police department, and another 10 minutes before they responded with a patrol car.

Last Sunday evening, one of the coldest nights in our recent freezing weather, an elderly neighborhood woman fell down an outside stairway. A friend and I called for assistance from the San Anselmo Police Department, and then we stayed with the woman, seated on cold concrete steps, trying to keep the lady warm, and afraid to move her as the extent of her injuries was not known. It took 45 minutes for the police and ambulance to arrive.

We hear a lot nowadays about people not caring for other human beings, and turning their backs when a neighbor needs help. What about those of us who do care, and then find that we are not able to get the assistance we need. It is disheartening, to say the least, to "get involved" and not receive the protection we are paying taxes for. . .

District Discriminates Against Auto Drivers

How long are the commuters and taxpayers going to put up with the overt discrimination practiced by the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit District? Consider the special bus lane as an example:

1. The bridge and highway north of the bridge were paid for primarily by funds from auto commuters.

2. Funds to purchase the buses provided by the district came primarily from the auto commuter.

3. Funds to subsidize the loss operation of the bus system and ferry system came primarily from the auto commuter.

4. Patrons of the bus and ferry system are not paying anywhere near the cost of the services provided them.

5. The bus system, which I understood was to help relieve traffic congestion, has indeed further complicated an already impossible commute situation and now also involves southbound traffic in the evening.

What possible rationale can there be to diverting the buses into special lanes to speed the people who are not paying their way past the endless line of cars winding down the Waldo in bumper to bumper stop and go driven by the people who made the entire system possible and who are paying the lion's share of the cost? How about a $1 per person donation to hire an attorney to file a class action suit against the Golden Gate Bridge and Transit and its directors to get the system back to some degree of sanity?

Arabs Held To Blame For Refugee Problem

Concerning Dr. Graham's comments: To say that the "pro-Jewish press never reports on the plight of the Arab refugees is a total misconception. Almost every article on the Mid-East will have reference to the refugee problem.

To say that the one million refugees were "driven from their homes" without referring to the statements of the Grand Mufti of Jeruselum before the 1948 war, exhorting the Arabs to leave the territory because the Arab armies will drive the new state into the sea, at which time they can return and take over all the land, is certainly showing your bias. The Arabs declared and started the war on Israel to wipe out the new state in 1948 when the refugees fled.

Every war, whether it's Vietnam, India-Pakistan, or the internal Sudanese war, produces a refugee problem, but reflect on who started the 1948 conflict. Without it, no refugees would exist. The Mayor of Haifa in 1948 asked the Arabs not to leave.

. . . Over one million Jews have fled from every Arab country where they have been persecuted. Does the U.N. ever discuss their plight?

To say that "the refugees have no seat in the U.N. so that the world has provided them with no recourse" is to completely disregard the almost total number of Arab countries and those whom they aid that almost completely control the U.N. and give support to the Arabs and their cause.

To imply that the area of Palestine was ruled by Arabs and therefore is entitled to representation is to completely disregard history. Previous to 1948, the area was governed by the British as a mandate from 1918 to 1948. Prior to that the non-Arab Turkish Ottoman Empire ruled it for almost six centuries. One would have to go back to the ninth century to find Arab rule over the land.

With its obvious bias and its lack of a meaningful peace-keeping force, how can the U.N. ever impose a peace in the area as Dr. Graham suggests?

Remember the old days before Women's Lib when Christmas was the season of good will toward men?

This year the gals are rewriting the Christmas story to make two of the three Wise Men women.

Instead of a Mr. Santa who comes down the chimney, we now have a Ms. Claus who goes through the roof.

The thing about this year's Christmas carols is that the women insist on calling the tune.

Capitol Soothsayer Sees Nixon In Another Turn-Around

WASHINGTON — This is an informed view of 1973. It is a view not from the White House where all the blinds are down and the rule is silence, but from one of the ablest administrator-economists who follows the trends at close range with a specialized staff and the requisite computer banks.

Into the forecast goes a healthy respect for President Nixon's capacity for making a 180-degree turn and doing just what he said he would never do. The surprise element could in mid-1973, in this educated crystal ball, produce a dramatic turn-around comparable to mid-1971 when the president clamped on wage and price controls and re-valued the currency. He is capable of stealing the Democrats' clothes while they are happily swimming in the warm current of spending welfare programs.

As for the economy, prospects look favorable to very good. The upward trend in the last quarter of 1972 will be sustained perhaps through the entire year. The drop in the unemployment rate just disclosed from 5.5 to 5.2 is likely to continue. It will bounce around the five per cent mark, possibly even falling below that barrier.

INFLATION DOESN'T look good. While the rate had begun to come down, recent price increases threaten to start it upward again and that is particularly true for food. With the $1.2 billion wheat sale to the Soviet Union, wheat stocks have been run down. This carries over into corn and in turn into beef.

Yet the administration can take comfort from the fact that the rate is so much lower than in other western nations. Whem Prime Minister Edward Heath comes here just after the inauguration, he will envy the American rate of 3.5 to four per cent a year as against Britain's eight per cent plus. In West Germany it is 6.3.

So on the economic side it is almost all on the upbeat. On the political side the opposite is true. Congress and the President will engage in a long and bitter wrangle over spending versus economy. The President will come in with a new budget tailored like the '74 budget with cuts deep enough to preclude a tax increase. That along with the $250 billion Nixon spending ceiling will be the battleground.

The Democratic attack will come through pushing programs such as Sen. Walter Mondale's child care bill and the aid to higher education that he has sponsored along with Sen. Claiborne Pell. The strategy will center on grants in aid to states and municipalities. Here is the sensitive political nerve as localities discover that with the Nixon economy they are not going to get the help that seemed programmed into the spending measures. The President's slash of half the $18 billion voted to clean up America's rivers is causing wide crumbling.

But the cuts will not be sufficient and by mid-year, say, the administration will face a painful dilemma. The choice will be either new taxes or more deficit spending, and with $100 billion in red ink already on the ledger, the latter course is all but ruled out.

THEN COMES the great turn-around scene comparable to Aug. 15, 1971, when the President took the steps — wage and price controls — that he had been saying for two years he would never take. He proposes to wrap all grants in aid programs in one big bundle and with no strings attached get the federal government entirely out of the picture. This would mean a whopping bonanza of perhaps $40 billion compared to which the revenue sharing now being dished out is peanuts.

This will spell the end of administration resistance to cutbacks in the welfare-reform measures. The economic policy will have collapsed, to paraphrase that often quoted line of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper. And the President can blame the Congress for the tax increases that will have to follow.

The seer has come up with one other possibility after careful study of the computerized crystal ball. That is a sizeable cut in the defense budget based on optimism over progress in disarmament in the SALT II talks with the Soviet Union. But the chances for this happening are rated at 10 per cent.

Meandering Streams Become Ugly Ditches 'To Conserve Soil'

You may find it hard to believe the government is spending large sums of your tax money converting beautiful natural streams into ugly ditches.

But that is exactly what the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing.

They call it "channelization."

TO CHANNELIZE a meandering creek or river, you move in with chain saws and bulldozers and strip its banks of trees and brush. Then you bring in huge draglines to deepen and straighten the stream bed, eliminating all the bends and looping curves that slow down the flow of water —and incidentally make the stream a thing of beauty.

Because a channelized stream carries off water more rapidly, nearby bottomlands which once were subject to flooding may become suitable for agriculture.

This presumably benefits the farmers who own those lands, since they can look to the government rather than themselves to foot most of the bill.

OF COURSE, there is some question about the consistency of the Department of Agriculture spending tax money to create new farm lands at the same time it is ladling out funds to farmers to take other croplands out of cultivation.

But that is not the biggest objection that has been raised by critics of channelization.

Environmental protection groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society, say channelization is doing infinitely more harm than good. Even the farmers who get new land may suffer, they say, from a lowering of the water table that causes wells and springs to dry up.

The principal victims of channelization projects, they say, are swamps and floodlands that have served for centuries as natural habitats for many types of wildlife.

FOR EXAMPLE: in one of its current projects, the Soil Conservation Service proposes to dig a big ditch through the Horse Range Swamp in South Carolina. Conservationists say it will destroy the Horse Range Swamp and adversely affect the nearby Four Holes Swamp, which the Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy have purchased to protect perpetually as a classic example of the fast-disappearing ecology of the back-water cypress swamp.

Concern about the effects of the project also has been expressed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and even by the Army Corps of Engineers, which is not noted as an ardent exponent of conservation.

Political pressure is building up to halt the Horse Range ditching. But the same battle will have to be fought in hundreds of other places all over America.

The SCS already has gutterized 8,000 miles of American streams, and has scheduled another 13,000 miles for similar "improvement." Its ultimate goal is to convert 175,000 miles of winding natural woodland streams into nude-banked ditches.

Bicycle Paths For Petaluma At Last In Planning Stage

Petaluma's long-awaited bicycle path system is finally in the planning stages after months of discussion.

Responses from a survey mailed to all residences along with water bills showed most Petalumans want a system for recreational use rather than as alternate transportation to the family car.

Consultant Arnold A. Johnson, whose services are provided by a state grant, will be working out the system along with city staff members and citizens. If everything goes smoothly, the paths could be in operation in 1973.

The bicycle survey brought a 22.5 per cent return or a total of 2,114 replies, which is considered good for Petaluma. The streets most often listed as favorites for riding were Washington Street, South McDowell Boulevard, Ely Road, Petaluma Boulevard, and Western Avenue.

THE DANGER of auto traffic was listed as the main reason for not using bicycles for local transportation. The high rate of bicycle thefts was a distant second as the deterrent.

Although the questionnaire had only a tiny space for written comments, many of the responses included them. Most cited the need for bicycle safety near schools and made very general comments, but one citizen demanded that all city employees be required to ride bicycles to work. For some it might be practical, but the comment brought only chuckles from public works employees who live in Santa Rosa and Forestville.

If a bicycle path system is installed, next year's residential development allotment board will have better ammunition to require paths from developers.

This year's board often questioned builders on the lack of trails, only to be told the suggestion was "ridiculous" since there was not central path for a link-up. Next year they may have to think of some other excuse.

LAST WEEK'S Old Adobe School district special election will go down in history as one of the least noticed and most costly in local history.

The Sonoma County Board of Elections estimated cost of the election at $1,500, which figures out to nearly $5 per vote since only 310 were cast. The other 4,574 registered voters should have gone to the polls if for no other reason than to get their money's worth.

60 Days Jail Time Is Given To Driver, 18

A Marin Superior Court judge has ordered 18-year-old Newton Jeffrey Wise of Tiburon to spend 60 days in jail for felony drunken driving during an accident in which he and four others were injured.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also fined Wise $500 and placed him on probation for two years on the charge resulting from a two-car collision near Redwood High School in Larkspur Sept. 23.

Police said a car driven by Wise went through a stop sign at Doherty Drive and Riviera Circle and collided with a car driven by Stanley G. Walker, 39, of Larkspur.

Both drivers, two passengers in Walker's car and one in Wise's were taken to a local hospital by ambulance after the wreck.

ART BUCHWALD

Best Hope For Vietnam May Be Long-Lasting Warce

WASHINGTON — It is obvious from the recent Kissinger talks in Paris that we have been unable to work out a true peace treaty in Vietnam.

Hallaby Hegelstein, a political science professor, maintains the most we can get out of Indochina is a "warce."

"What is a warce?" I asked him.

"IT IS NEITHER peace nor war; it is actually a combination of both. For some time now the world has needed a new word to describe the situation many countries are in. In the Middle East you do not have peace, nor do you have a fighting war. The English language has no word for this predicament so I invented one which I call 'warce.'"

"How could warce apply to Vietnam?"

"If the United States signs a treaty with Hanoi which the South Vietnamese refuse to ratify, you will have a state of warce. President Nixon may call it a peace, but he would only be kidding himself and the American people."

"What would the warce consist of?" I asked.

"You would probably have a cease-fire with some fighting on both sides. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will continue sporadic probing of the South Vietnamese defenses, and the South Vietnamese will probably make occasional attacks on Viet Cong strongholds. But both sides will probably be stalemated and the warce could continue for years."

"WELL, I GUESS a warce in Indochina is better than nothing," I said.

"It might be the coming thing. Since peace treaties are so hard to come by, I would advocate that nations sign warce treaties instead. It could save face on both sides. Many of our world leaders consider the signing of a peace pact a sign of weakness. But no one could criticize them at home if they said they had agreed to a warce."

"I imagine if he couldn't have it any other way, President Nixon would settle for a generation of warce," I said.

"The advantage of warce," Hegelsten said, "is that Congress wouldn't have to declare it. If the President decided he wanted to involve the country in a warce, he could do it on his own."

"And if he succeeded," I said, "he could be nominated for the Nobel Warce Prize."

"I BELIEVE the nation would thrive on a warce footing," Hagelstein said. "You wouldn't have to shut down your defense plants and put a lot of people out of work, and at the same time you would use very little of the stuff to kill people."

"And you could sell warce bonds to finance it," I added.

"It would also solve the military problem. In a period of peace, the armed forces find themselves in disrepute. But if we were at warce, our men in uniform would still be respected and there would be plenty of opportunity for promotion," Hegelstein said.

He added, "The world is not ready for peace and may never be. At the same time, war is not the answer to our problems. Therefore, we must condition ourselves to warce — whether they be warces of liberation, limited warces or even a World Warce. Vietnam may be the big test. If we can have a successful warce there, it will prove that it's possible to have a warce anywhere."

"That's a good thought to leave with people at this time of year, Professor."

"Thank you. Merry Christmas, and remember, warce on earth —good will to men."

World Cup Skiing

The opening meet of the World Cup ski season ended last week in the French Alpine town of Val D'Isere. About half m the American team participated in the meet. In World Cup competition, both men's and women's teams vie for points in straight downhill races and zigzag downhill races. Skiing is a relatively new sport. The first ski competition was believed to be held in Norway about 1875. Skiing became a part of the Winter Olympic Games in 1924. Before the World Cup season ends in March, 1973, skiers will have traversed slopes in Yugoslavia, Germany, Alaska, Japan, and California.

Nixon's Reason For Bombing Resumption

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said today President Nixon ordered resumption of full scale bombing of North Vietnam to prevent Hanoi from using peace talks as a cover for continuing the war.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters the President was determined to prevent any buildup of Communist forces under cover of peace negotiations.

In response to questions, Ziegler stopped short of saying that a buildup actually was in progress, however.

Ziegler said the President had promised "not to delay a settlement by one day if it's right but not to agree to a settlement one day before it is right," he added.

"We cannot allow the peace talks to be filibustered or delayed for the purpose of continuing the war in the south."

Ziegler was asked if the United States was conferring with the Soviet Union and China in efforts to get them to put pressure on Hanoi to resume the private discussions with Henry A. Kissinger.

Ziegler said, "You should assume we are proceeding in every way we can, using every avenue available to us."

Asked if Nixon had conferred with members of Congress before ordering a resumption of full scale bombing, Ziegler said he did not know.

The presidential spokesman said he still stood by his statement Monday that "the road to peace through negotiations is wide open," and "we stand ready to negotiate in good faith."

Ziegler said the United States expected a meeting between U.S. and North Vietnamese technicians to be held on Wednesday in Paris as scheduled.

Ziegler also said that a regular weekly session of the four-party Vietnam talks — also including Viet Cong and South Vietnamese representatives — would be held as scheduled on Thursday "unless we hear something from the other side."

On Capitol Hill, the President's actions brought new calls for legislation to end the war and a demand that presidential adviser Henry Kissinger be summoned to testify on the breakdown in peace talks.

Communist World Reacts Angrily To Air Strikes

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Communist worl reacted angrily today to President Nixon's decision to resume the all-out bombing of North Vietnam. The North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry said efforts to force a solution on U.S. terms would fail and the Viet Cong and Hanoi delegations in Paris echoed the statement.

Communist diplomats in London told UPI diplomatic correspondent K.C. Thaler that the resumed American bombing of Hanoi can be expected to slow down temporarily the process of rapprochement of the Soviet Union and China with the United States.

But they said they did not anticipate a freeze in this process of improving relations, which began earlier this year. They said one direct result of latest developments in the Vietnam conflict might be a delay in the projected Washington visit of Soviet Communist Party Chairman Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The Communist diplomats also said a certain hardening of the Peking and Moscow policy lines may make itself felt — though probably more in public statements censoring Nixon's latest Vietnam moves than in negotiations on concrete issues.

On Monday, Hanoi condemned the resumption of fullscale U.S. bombing and said it was suspending indefinitely the technical-level negotiations with U.S. representatives in Paris. However, a spokesman for the American talks delegation said it had received no formal notification of the suspension of the private talks.

In a later statement, the North Vietnamese said no decision had been taken yet whether or not to boycott the 171st session of the weekly Paris semipublic peace talks Thursday on Kleber Avenue.

Piotr Abrassimov, the Soviet Union's ambassador to France, said today in Paris the renewal of U.S. bombing strikes would not make Hanoi soften its attitude on a cease-fire accord.

Mill Valley Surgeon Found Dead

A Marin County surgeon, missing from his Mill Valley home since Sunday, was found dead yesterday in his auto near Occidental in Sonoma County, apparently of an overdose of drugs.

The body of Dr. George Ordway, 53, of 734 Lovell Avenue, was discovered about 4:25 p.m., lying on the back seat of the car, parked on Coleman Valley Road one mile east of Highway 1.

Don Noriel, Sonoma County Coroner's investigator, said notes found near the body indicated the surgeon intended to take his own life, but gave no reason for doing so.

Coleman, who practiced in San Rafael, had been reported missing yesterday to Mill Valley police by his wife, Doris. Mrs. Coleman told officers her husband had left home at 5 p.m. Sunday and failed to return.

His body was taken to the Guerneville Funeral Home, where an autopsy was planned.

Traffic Deaths

CHICAGO (UPI) —The number of traffic deaths in the United States this year is expected to reach 56,700, the highest total in history, the National Safety Council said Monday.

Larkspur Sets Northridge Open Space Plan Session

The Larkspur Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on the Northridge Open Space Plan next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Larkspur City Hall.

Mayors, councilmen and planning commissioners from Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley took their first look at a joint meeting on Nov. 15 at a preliminary open space plan for Northridge, delineating 1,347 acres of ridgelands, hillsides and canyons to be preserved.

The plan, paid for by the Marin Conservation League, the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department, and the three cities, estimated the fair market value at $2,898,808.

At the joint meeting, mayors of the three cities agreed to take the plan back to their councils and planning commissions, and bring back their recommendations to another joint session on Jan. 29. Larkspur is the first town to hold a public hearing on the proposal.

All cities in the county have been asked to make a "shopping list" of priorities for open space purchase by the county. The funds will come from $700,000 budged by supervisors in this fiscal year. A similar amount will be raised in future years by the 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation authorized by passage of the open space measure in last month's ballot.

The communities of Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley already have declared Northridge their number one priority for such purchase.

Death Is Caused By Meningitis

A 23-year-old Corte Madera resident, who died in a local hospital after complaining of severe back pain last month, was the victim of acute meningitis, the Marin County Coroner's office said today.

The type of meningitis which killed Fred Thompson was relatively noncommunicable, not the type that periodically causes panic and quarantining on Army posts, according to Keith C. Craig, coroner's investigator.

Thompson died Nov. 13 after becoming ill at his home on Willow Avenue. He had gone to the emergency room three times in the five days before his death to seek treatment for pain.

However, Craig said, the symptoms he complained of on those visits did not match those of a meningitis victim.

Ousted Stanford Prof Faces Harbor Count

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI Tuesday arrested H. Bruce Franklin, the ousted radical Stanford University professor, and two others on federal charges of harboring a state prison inmate who escaped in an ambush in which a guard was killed.

At about the same time, state authorities arrested Robert Allan Seabock, 23, in Palo Alto in the investigation of the guard's murder. Seabock was the fifth person to be arrested for the murder.

Franklin, 30, a Maoist and an English professor, early this year became the first tenured professor to be fired by Stanford in 70 years. He was discharged on charges of fomenting violence on campus.

He was arrested along with Morton Newman, 30, Menlo Park, Calif.; and Bruce W. Hobson, 23, Mountain View, Calif., on charges of harboring Ronald W. Beaty, a Chino Prison inmate.

Beaty escaped Oct. 6 while being driven by two unarmed guards from Chino for a court appearance in San Bernardino, Calif.

Two cars forced their auto off the road. Three men and a woman opened fire on the guards, killing one, Jesus Sanchez, and seriously wounding a second, who apparently was left for dead.

Beaty was recaptured Dec. 11 when his car was stopped on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge. Beaty and the others were said to be associated with Venceremos, a Maoist revolutionary organization active on the San Francisco peninsula.

Since his dismissal, Franklin has continued living in Menlo Park, and has been active in politics.

Hobson is a son of Mrs. Jean Stevens Hobson who was arrested along with Beaty. Their car contained numerous firearms, and she subsequently was charged with murder.

Previously arrested on murder charges in the case were Andrea Holman, 18, daughter of a Stanford University medical professor, and Benton D. Burt, 30, a former cellmate of Beaty's.

Cure Seen For Athlete's Foot

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An Army doctor says he believes an inoculation can be found to prevent athlete's foot.

Dr. Henry E. Jones, a lieutenant colonel, said Monday he came to the conclusion as the result of a study into jungle rot, a fungus disease much like ringworm, which produces athlete's foot.

Dr. Jones said experiments with 200 volunteers at a state penal institution convinced him 85 per cent were practically immune to ring worm.

He hopes to protect the other 15 per cent by isolating an extract from killed fungus.

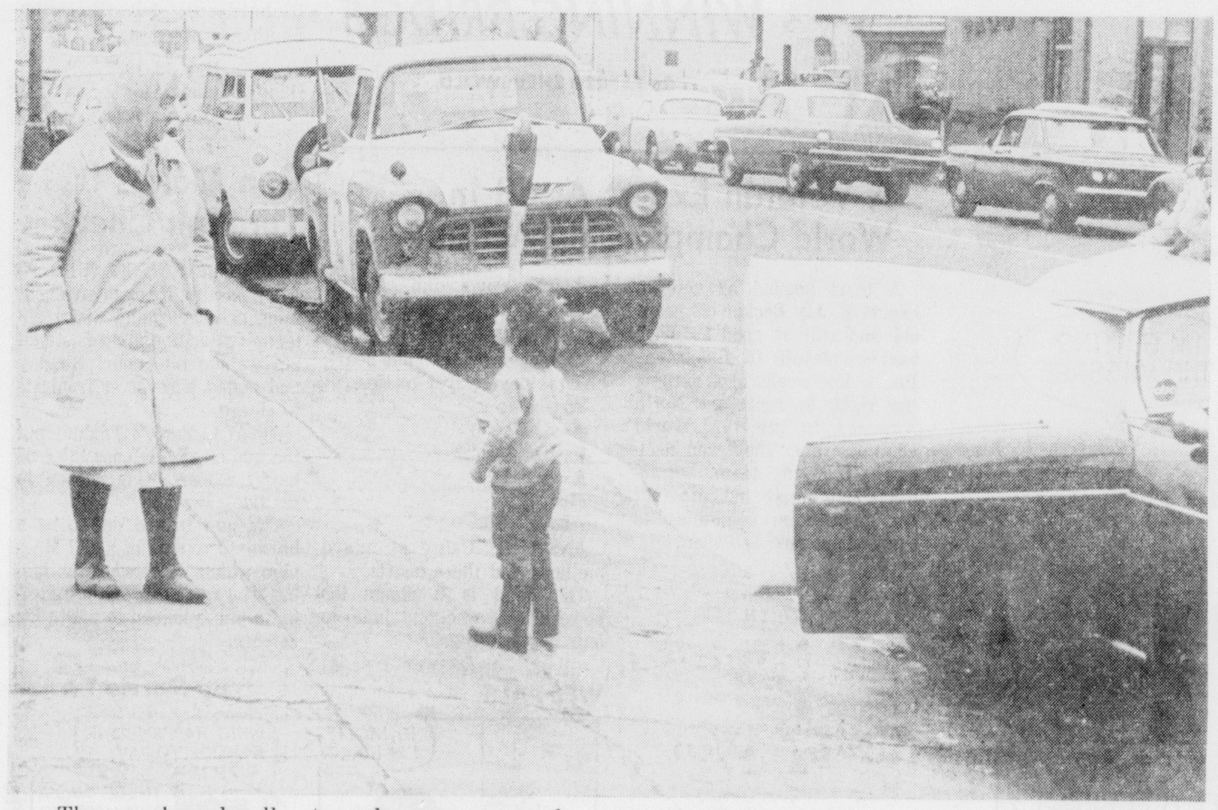
PROBLEM SOLVING ON FOURTH STREET

Three-year-old Justin Young (left) tries to see past the mass of foam mattress his father, Ron Young of Mill Valley, is trying to pull into his Porsche. The problem was not unlike getting a size 10 foot into a size 7 shoe. But problems are Young's business, as attested by this side of the business card he handed Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean.



The push-and-pull struggle was a real attention-getter today in the 800 block of San Rafael's Fourth Street and the unidentified pedestrian (left) was but one of many to pause for a quizzical glance.

But success comes to all who persevere — as the reverse of Young's business card asserts. It's just a matter of planning and implementing, though in this case growth was hardly part of the solution, unless growth of the Porsche. A moment later Young and his son were on their way home to 123 Peralta Way, where all that remained was to get it out of the car.

Dredging Permission Given Despite Biologist Warning

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

HAYWARD — The Army Corps of Engineers today won permission to dredge highly polluted mud at Mare Island straits, despite a state biologist's warning that the pollution will be a threat to "millions upon millions" of fish.

The regional Water Quality Control Board, confronted by Army and Navy claims that national defense would be hurt if the dredging were not approved immediately, voted 6-1 to approve dredging one million cubic yards to be deposited in nearby Carquinez Strait.

The Mare Island strait is the only access to the Navy's shipyard there.

The only board member who voted against the military was Roger A. McConnell, a Portola Valley electrical engineer. Noting that no one disputed that the mud was grossly polluted with poisonous metals, he said the effect on water quality would be severe.

McConnell also argued that by backing down before the Army, the major dredger in San Francisco Bay, the board has set a bad precedent that will allow dredging of polluted mud elsewhere in the bay.

He added that no other dredger could have gotten board permission to bend the rules.

Michael Rugg, a state fish and game department biologist, objected that millions of fish have to traverse Carquinez Strait.

Rugg said the state standards for dredging polluted mud are based on guidelines set by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

A spokesman for the EPA however argued that the pollution's hazard to fish and wildlife "won't be that great." Davie R. Minard, an EPA oceanographer, told the board the dredging is warranted because silting of the strait presented the Navy with "An emergency situation."

Board member Barbara Eastman asked why the Navy could not, instead, move its ships at high tide. A Navy spokesman said the need to get a ship out of the shipyard could not be made dependent upon tides.

"We have to be able to move on immediate notice," said Capt. Frank Day, public works officer at the shipyard.

He also testified the dredging must begin by Jan. 3 to prevent further siltation of the 30-foot channel to the shipyard.

The board's executive officer Fred H. Dierker, told the board that it was a "judgmental decision," whether a real emergency threatened the shipyard.

He noted that Army had claimed that no additional funds were available to pay the higher cost of dumping the mud spoils on land. The Army, Dierker said, never documented this claim.

The board's action eliminated the prospect of a legal fight with the Corps, which last month said it would dredge the strait even without the regional board's approval.

The state and federal limits on dredging polluted mud were set after it was found the pollution worked its way into the food chain and through fish marketed for human consumption.

Marinwood CSD Fills Five Spots

Directors of the Marinwood Community Services District last night reappointed three members of the community fire commission and two members of the park and recreation commission.

Genevieve T. Bolding, district business manager and secretary, said that in addition, a third park and recreation commissioner, whose term is expiring, was replaced and the seat of a commission alternate was left vacant for the time being.

Renamed to the fire panel were Kenneth Katz, Kirk Beales and Thomas O'Haire, while Emily Dvorin and David Paoli were reappointed to the park and recreation group.

Park and recreation commissioner Leland Spencer, leaving the panel because of work commitments, was replaced by Bernard Nangle of 399 Miller Creek Road. The seat of alternate Walter Johnson, leaving the commission for identical reasons, was left vacant.

The board also approved a full-time fire cadet program at an additional cost of $600; conditionally authorized purchase of a chemical mixer pump for the community pool at $600, and opposed planned division of the Weiss property off Millstone Terrace because of the property's steep slope.

Board Fails To Pick Strawberry Director

Recreation Mgr. David Roberts said Director Manuel K. Lehua nominated James Andrews of 296 Ricardo Road to take the seat of Schaefer, who resigned recently, but his move wasn't seconded.

Director Thomas Miller then nominated Patricia M. Jeremiah, who lost out in a recent board election, and Arthur R. Senter seconded. Lehua, however, voted against Mrs. Jeremiah, leaving the matter in limbo until the next board session Jan. 2.

Roberts explained an appointment must be confirmed by a majority of the four persons now sitting on the panel. Director Jane Brown was absent last night.

Prior to the vote, Mrs. Jeremiah and the third candidate, Fred Holmes of 58 Bayview Terrace, spoke on their qualifications, while Lehua spoke in behalf of the absent Andrews.

Decline In German Measles Is Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The number of reported cases of rubella, known as German measles, declined 44 per cent during the first nine months this year in the United States, the Public Health Service (PHS) said Monday.

This follows a nationwide vaccination campaign begun in 1969 against the disease, which, when contracted by pregnant women, can cause birth defects in the children they bear.

Map For Wolfback Ridge Due Another Look Tonight

Edward R. Fitzsimmons' tentative map for a controversial subdivision on 160 acres of Sausalito's Wolfback Ridge, will again be before the city council when it meets at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Mayor Robin Sweeny and Councilman Stephen A. Fraser traveled to Washington in October to attempt to get Congress to include the property in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, but were unsuccessful.

In August, Fitzsimmons had asked the council to delay action on his map until the city had tried to persuade government officials to place the land in the national park.

Fitzsimmons, who owns the land in conjunction with Frank Lynch, has been trying to develop a subdivision on it for two years, but has been fought by people who want the ridge to remain as open space.

In other business, the council will consider proposed amendments to the strict houseboat ordinance which it recently adopted. A group of houseboat residents have proposed some changes and will present them tonight.

The council will also consider adoption of a noise control ordinance for the city.

Pollution Funds

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese industries and the government will spend at least $34.7 billion in the next 10 years to combat pollution in Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and nine other major cities, government officials reported today.

License Check Turns Up Grass

SANTA CRUZ (UPI) —The California Highway Patrol says a check on an out-of-state license plate led to the discovery Monday of $100,000 worth of marijuana in a camper truck.

Patrolmen said they stopped Conner Moyle Petrie III, 24, Monday because of the Oregon plate and searched the truck because he tried to elude them.

Officers reported finding 360 kilos of the narcotics tucked into a back panel of the vehicle.

Petrie gave no address.

A team headed by veteran expert B. Jay Becker (68 years old and still as good as ever) won a playoff in Lancaster, Pa., a few weeks ago, earning the right to represent North America in the 1973 world championship. They won decisively from my team, but today's hand may indicate that we gave them something to think about now and then.

FOUR HEARTS

At the first table of the match, William Grieve, a member of my team, got to four hearts and made it. Incidentally, if you're puzzled by North's jump to three no-trump, relax: Grieve and his partner, George Rapee, use this response as a forcing raise of the original bid, not as a true no-trump bid.

Grieve tooc the queen of clubs, drew a few rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to dummy's kind. When this held, he returned the low spade from dummy.

CRAFTY RETURN

East stepped up with the queen of spades and craftily returned the queen of diamonds. If South held K-x-x of diamonds he might play low on the assumption that East had led from Q-J-x of diamonds. If so, East would lead a low diamond next, and thus might hornswoggle his way into getting three diamond tricks.

A GOOD PLOT

It was a good plot, but South had the nine of diamonds and could therefore afford to cover the queen of diamonds with the king. When this won, South was home.

At the other table of the match, Becker opened the South hand with one heart, and Los Angeles expert Lew Mathe overcalled with one spade! Don't take this overcall as a model; just admire it from a distance.

Don Krauss bid four spades with the East hand, and Becker could no longer play the hand at four hearts. He could have collected a penalty of 500 points, but he chose to bid on —

Target Launched

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) — A missile target was launched Monday for use by aircraft from Point Mugu testing air-to-air missile firings over the Pacific Ocean, the Navy reported.

Gun Makes It Through Check

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — After passing through stringent security checks and metal detectors, a criminal case defendant walked into court Monday and pulled a revolver from his briefcase.

Albert L. Zero, 44, calmly put the gun on the defense table as bailiff Robert King rushed to his side.

The gun turned out to be a harmless replica of a .357 Magnum which Zero, who was facing trial for allegedly brandishing a gun, planned to use in his defense.

Scientists Track 'Hot' Molecules

The chemistry of living organisms is very complex, and biologists are forever looking for simple ways to follow the path of specific molecules within living systems. One valuable technique used by scientists at The Salk Institute in San Diego, is called radioactive labeling. It consists of making the molecules 'hot' by placing radioactive atoms in them and then simply following the radioactivity. Without radioactive labelling techniques, elaborate chemical analyses would be necessary, and whole areas of biology would be virtually impossible.

If, for example, a bacteriorolgist wants to know whether a certain protein can bind to the surface of his bacteria, he could grow the bacteria in a medium that contains a radioactive version of the protein, washing the medium away after a while, and then merely check for radioactivity on the surface of the cells. Or an endocrinologist may want to know how much hormone a cell produces under special conditions. He could provide the cell with radioactive versions of the ingredients for making the hormone.

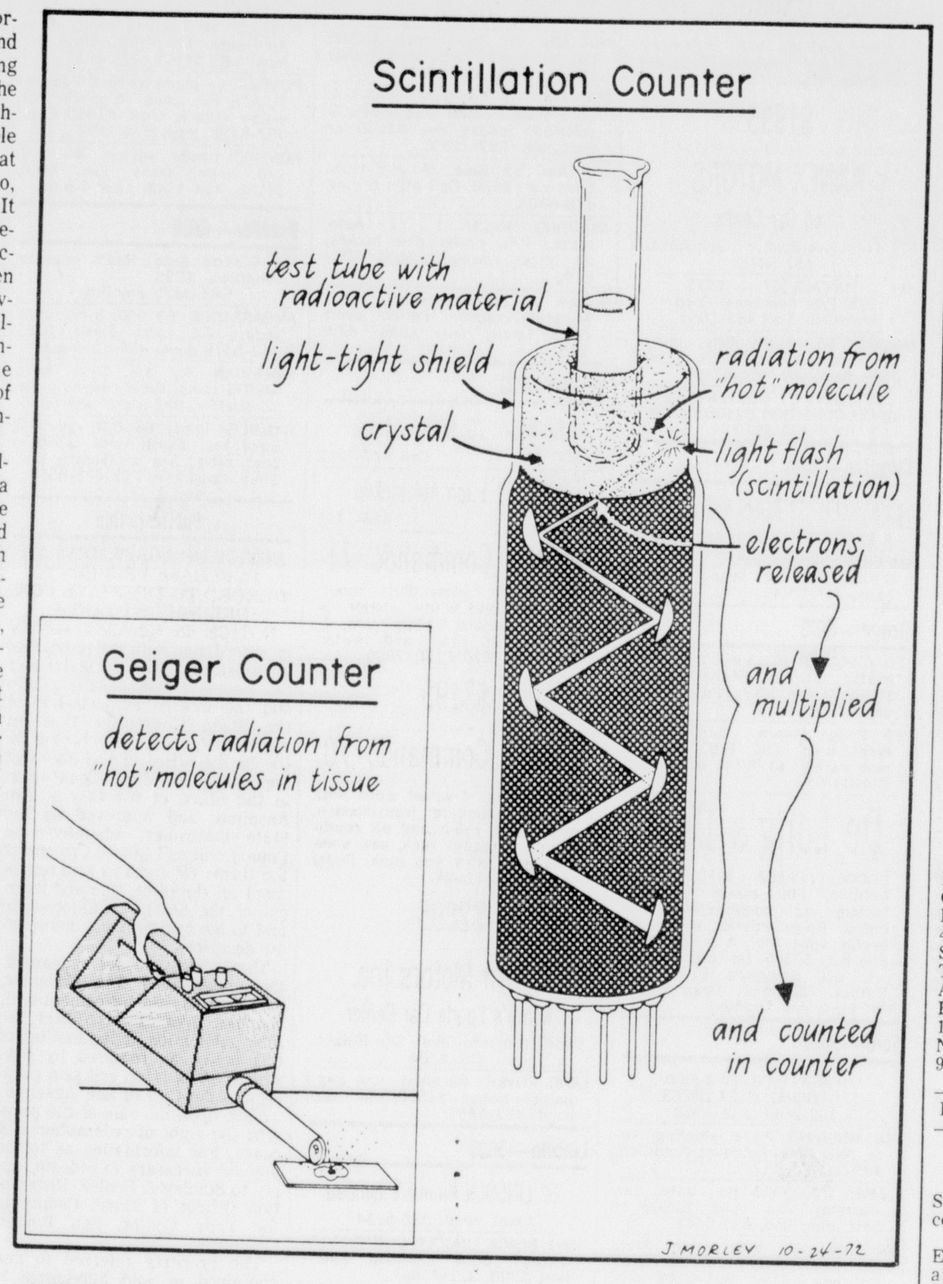
Later, he could separate out those parts of the cells' products that should contain the hormone and measure the amount of radioactivity in those samples.

Radioactive labelling is most often done with atoms of carbon, hydrogen, or phosphorus, because they occur frequently in living organisms and because they have radioactive variants which are relatively safe for the scientists to work with. The biologists can usually buy radioactive forms of most of the organic compounds they need from commercial firms; the firms specify in each case the site of the radioactive atom within the molecule and the amount of radioactivity in the whole sample.

Depending on what information the experimenter wants, there are many ways of detecting the radiation. One simple way is to lay some photographic emulsion directly over a dish containing cells. If the cells contain radioactive molecules, the radiation will make a pattern of dots on the film.

The number and distribution of these dots give the biologist the information he wants. An even easier method is to hold a Geiger Counter over the dish, but this method gives less precise information — merely whether there is any radiation in or near the dish.

A more complex technique, but a very common one, involves using a machine called a scintillation counter. The researcher dissolves each of his samples in a vial of special liquid that gives off flashes of light (scintillations) whenever it is struck by radiation. The machine counts the number of flashes coming from each vial, and these numbers tell how much radioactivity is present in each of the samples — in other words, where the labelled molecules have gone during the experiment. A scintillation counter usually costs about $17,000.



These radioactive compounds are relatively safe, but they are not completely safe. Every biologist who works with them learns certain basic precautions — such as frequent washings, bright yellow labels for all containers with radioactive materials, care in cleaning up spills, and separate sinks for radioactive liquids.

The precautions vary somewhat for each of the three elements. Radioactive hydrogen, or tritium, is essentially harmless in the amounts normally used unless it is swallowed. The radiation from Carbon 14 will penetrate the skin at close range, so it is more dangerous. Radioactive phosphorus is the most dangerous of the three.

Each laboratory is also subjected to periodic safety checks. Each scientist wears a film badge which is checked after one month to see how much radiation he has been exposed to; each laboratory and sink is checked for radioactive contamination at frequent intervals.

The extra effort of these precautions is far less than the effort saved by radioactive labelling techniques; that is why The Salk Institute and virtually every other biological laboratory are equipped for handling radioactive experiments.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Writer's Cramp Makes Return Among Workers In Australia

In the past, writer's cramp was fairly common because most letters, books and business and legal documents were handwritten. The cramping was brought on by the repeated use of special groups of muscles laboring monotonously in the preparation of volumes of meticulous script, without rest or relaxation.

Seamstresses, barbers (scissors), milkers, and piano players also developed these cramps. Tyepwriters changed much of this and, until recently, writer's cramp has been on the wane.

BUT DOWN in Australia, the condition has developed among those whose jobs involve constant writing or keyboard telegraphy. Almost 14 per cent of male telegraphists in three large Australian cities were bothered on the job and half of them had similar symptoms when writing. Since the cramp involves impairment of a learned skill, the workers consider the condition to be an occupation cramp or craft palsy.

Incoordination of the arm ensues on attempting to write. Muscular cramping, weakness and stiffness, or pain follows. Many tell of tremor or jerking when using the involved arm. All of this makes writing difficult or nearly impossible.

The disability may worsen or remain the same unless the person learns to write with the other hand. The victims have no trouble using the arm for other purposes. Meanwhile, activities requiring fine skills of the upper extremities are not affected. The victims can play games and musical instruments and feed and dress themselves.

ALL OF THIS is highly suggestive of a neurotic illness because no abnormalities, including signs of weakness or nerve involvement, were found. Apparently when the same set of pulleys are used over and over again, the muscles rebel and refuse to cooperate. It is mind over matter and, more so, when the work is dull.

Writer's cramp is difficult to treat. Some physicians recommend changing the style of writing or shifting the way the pen or pencil is held. Enlarging the size of the letters may also help. One program advocates exercise to strengthen the hand. This is followed by teaching the person to write without manipulating the fingers via full arm strokes. But more recently, relaxation is advocated in conjunction with a program of using a pen with a wide soft felt point to draw simple shapes and progressing to adult script and a normal pen. Regardless of the method, psychotherapy is needed.

325 GALLSTONES

A reader writes: Could a person have 325 gallstones? Incidentally, who counts them after the operation?

REPLY

Yes, to your first question. These would be pebble-sized, of course. The auditor is the hospital pathologist who must examine and describe thoroughly all tissues removed by the surgeon.

VOICE LOSS

H. Writes: What would cause a person to suddenly lose his voice?

REPLY

Nervousness or a stroke. A more gradual loss follows infection, irritation, abuse of the voice, or a tumor on the vocal cords.

Marin Trio Cleared In Drug Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Charges have been dismissed against three Marin residents arrested in connection with a large seizure of cocaine but five other persons, including four who live in Marin, have been indicted on felony charges.

Due to enter pleas in U.S. District Court Dec. 29 are Thomas F. Steinberg, 23, and Frank J. Keicher, 21, both of Sausalito; Louis J. Katzberg, 25, of Mill Valley; Gregory J. McGuire, 26, of San Anselmo, and Stephen D. Moran, 21, of Palo Alto.

They are charged with possessing cocaine with intent to distribute it.

Dismissed because of lack of evidence were Katherine Steinberg, 19, and Maria Keicher, 21, and John R. Morris, 22, all of Sausalito.

Federal agents said they negotiated for the sale of five pounds of cocaine at a wholesale price of $80,000. The men were arrested early this month at the Hyatt House in Burlingame after being followed from a Sausalito residence.

Promotion For Sonoma Aide

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — C. Lawrence Andrew, deputy Sonoma County administrator, has been promoted to assistant county administrator.

The position has remained unfilled since March 1969 when David L. Nichols was promoted to administrator.

Andrew, who has been a deputy since 1969, has been on the administrator's staff since 1964. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Long Beach State College and master of arts degree from Golden Gate College.

Andrew will assume the new position on Jan. 1. The salary has not yet been set.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS SAN RAFAEL SANITATION DISTRICT
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the San Rafael Sanitation District, San Rafael, California, will receive bids for the construction of Sewer Plant Expansion, Pump Station, Transmission and Collection Facilities in San Rafael, California. Each bid or proposal is to be in accordance with specifications and contract documents now on file with the District Administrator, City Hall, 1400 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, California, where they may be examined, and with Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins, 201 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Greenbrae, California. Copies of same may be obtained by General Contractors from Coleman, Selmi & Simpkins upon payment of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) which will be refunded upon return of the plans and specifications in satisfactory condition with ten (10) days of bid date.

Bidders are hereby further notified that pursuant to the Statutes of the State of California or local laws thereto applicable, it shall be mandatory upon the Contractor to whom the contract is awarded to pay not less than the general prevailing hourly wage rate, per diem wages and rates for legal holidays and overtime work in the locality in which the work is to be performed.

A schedule of the prevailing rates has been approved by the Board of Directors of the said Sanitation District, and is filed with the Secretary of said Board in the offices of the District Administrator, and said schedule is hereby referred to and by such reference incorporated herein and made a part hereof as fully as though set forth in length.

Each bid shall be made out on a form to be obtained at the office of said Engineer at the address hereinabove set forth; shall be accompanied by a certified, or cashier's check or bid bond for not less than ten percent (10%) of the amount bid, made payable to the order of the said San Rafael Sanitation District, shall be sealed and filed with the said District Administrator, at his office on or before 10 a.m., January 11, 1973, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The above mentioned check or bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder will enter into the contract if awarded to him, and will be declared forfeited if the successful bidder refuses to enter into said contract after being requested to do so by the said District Board.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a Faithful Performance Bond in the amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price and a Labor and Materials Bond in the amount of fifty percent (50%) of the contract price; said bonds to be secured from a surety company satisfactory to the District Board.

The project has been prepared as 3 units:

Bidders may bid on one or more of the units, it is not necessary that a bid be submitted for three units.

The grand total on each project will determine the low bidder.

Unit No. 1 - Marin Bay Wastewater Treatment & Reclamation Plant Enlargements

Unit No. 2 - Pump Station No. 4.

Unit No. 3 - Transmission and Collection Facilities.

The District Board may let the project as one contract for all 3 units; one contract for each unit; or such combination of units that is in the best interests of the District.

The District Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to waive any informality in a bid, or to award a contract on the basis of the proposal which serves the best interest of the Sanitation District.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of forty-five (45) days after the date set for the opening thereof.

Date bids will be received: January 11, 1972

Dated this 6th Day of December, 1972

Publication Dates: December 19, 1972, December 26, 1972.

Bus Cost Sharing Before Committee

The dispute between the County of Marin and Golden Gate Bridge District over a cost-sharing formula for local bus service will be before a district committee tomorrow.

The joint finance-auditing and transportation committee will meet at 9 a.m. in toll plaza offices. The district and county have been at odds for almost six months over how to share local bus costs, with their computations several hundred thousand dollars apart.

'Female Rat Pack' Trio Is Arrested

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Three teen-age girls, known as the "female rat pack," were held today on charges of robbery and assault.

Officers said the trio of 15 and 16 year olds were suspects in a dozen muggings in which elderly persons were the victims. They were arrested during an attempted purse snatching.

Have the I-J delivered to the home of a special friend for less than a dime a copy. Isn't that a good example of imaginative gift-giving? It shows that you don't have to spend a bundle to let someone know you're thinking of them, not just on Christmas morning, but six days a week. They'll appreciate your gift each time they reach down on their doorstep and bring in this bright, well-written newspaper. It'll bring them the news of their neighborhood, of their town and of the whole world, edited with integrity and style.

The I-J will make a special welcome to a newcomer to Marin or to a serviceman or student far from home. Clip out the coupon below and send it in with your list of special friends. Share a friend with a friend this Christmas.

RONALD WILLIAM KOPF
Achieves eagle rank

Kopf Due Eagle Rank Thursday

Ronald William Kopf, a senior at Redwood High School, will be awarded the rank of eagle scout in a court of honor at 8 p.m. Thursday at San Clemente school in Corte Madera.

Kopf, 17, is a scribe and assistant senior patrol leader in Troop 90. He has been in scouting four years. He has 21 merit badges and is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

In scouting he has six one-mile swimming awards and two 50-mile hiking awards.

His eagle project was to move 80 cubic yards of tanbark into two playgrounds at Granada Elementary School in Corte Madera.

His hobbies include mountaineering, backpacking and scuba diving. He is a certified scuba diver and is a member of the Sierra Club.

In school, he has been on cross country, wrestling and baseball at Redwood High School.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kopf of 159 Prince Royal Drive, Corte Madera.

Homes Needed For Children During Holidays

The Sonoma County Social Services Department is seeking homes for 19 children in time for the Christmas holidays.

Children range in age from 1 to 17, most of them teen-agers. Barbara McIver, foster home recruiter, said a special effort is being made to place the children this week so they need not spend the holidays in an institution.

She said 10 of the children must be placed in homes with other children while others may be placed in groups in homes without children. Persons interested in providing either temporary or long-term foster homes may contact Mrs. McIver at the social service department in Santa Rosa, she said.

Novato Planning Commission Hopeful Likes Industrial Parks

W. Stanley Nordstrom, a candidate for appointment to the Novato Planning Commission, advocates more industrial zoning near Gnoss Field and Hamilton Air Force Base.

"Hamilton Industrial Park is a great asset and should be expanded," he said the other day. The area south of Highway 37 and east of Highway 101 is suitable for light industry "such as Fairchild," Nordstrom said.

Nordstrom, manager of technical services, for the Multiwall Bag Division of Crown Zellerbach Corp., said he didn't want Novato to experience the fate of the San Francisco Peninsula.

"The first time I lived in California, on the peninsula, was in 1953, and it was a pretty area." Now, he said, "to me it's an abomination."

Nordstrom said he believes there should be some restriction on growth "but setting a hard and fast limit, I don't think that's quite the way to do it. We have to grow within our means to handle it."

He suggested that the city "go slow" on approval of more townhouses. "This is the only area in Marin that has had a lot, the first big group, and to me they have not proven themselves."

He said the proposed new Novato general plan "has some good points" but essentially is only a guideline "A plan is a plan until it becomes a fact," he said.

On open space, Nordstrom said: "I think a lot would have to be purchased," but people in Marin have been willing "to vote money for that and I don't think Novato people would be all that different."

Some of the area designated for open space in the proposed plan could be achieved if it were placed in agricultural preserves and owners given tax breaks, he said. Many land owners have been forced to develop because their taxes have gone up, Nordstrom said.

Nordstrom, a resident of Novato since 1966, is a member of the Domingo Canyon Homeowners Association. He and his wife, Mary Janice, live at 185 Montura Way. They have two daughters and a son.

Guilty Pleas To Receiving Stoler Goods

UKIAH (UPI) —George and Helen Wethern, owners of a ranch used as a Hell's Angel burying ground, pleaded guilty yesterday to charges of possessing stolen property and were placed on probation.

The couple was granted immunity earlier from narcotics charges in return for testifying against members of the outlaw motorcycle gang who allegedly buried three bodies on their ranch.

Wethern, a 260-pounder known as "Baby Huey," testified two weeks ago at a preliminary hearing in Richmond that he allowed the burials because of a "debt" he owed a gang member.

Four Angels are held and four others are sought on murder and accessory charges in the slaying of two Georgia men who were allegedly killed during a drug orgy in El Sobrante and later buried at Wethern's ranch.

The body of a young woman, still unidentified, was also excavated from the ranch on Oct. 30.

Correct Time Of Ferry Feeder Bus

The new ferry feeder bus service between San Rafael and Sausalito leaves Fourth and Hetherton streets at 6:35 a.m., not 6:40 as reported Friday on the basis of information provided by the Golden Gate Bridge District.

The time was changed after district directors approved the new weekday service. The bus leaves the Sausalito ferry terminal at 6:05 p.m., and makes freeway stops on both the morning and evening runs.

City Impounds Jetliner Over Unpaid Taxes

ATLANTA (UPI) —Officials of suburban College Park impounded a $3.7 million jetliner Monday because of Eastern Airlines' alleged failure to pay the city $55,000 in back taxes.

City marshal T. O. Smith pasted the attachment papers on the door of the DC9 Whisperjet which was undergoing engine repairs in a huge maintenance hangar at the Atlanta airport.

"They sure were surprised," said Smith of the Eastern officials.

Eastern issued a brief statement regretting its "honest differences of opinion" with College Park and promised to "pursue appropriate judicial remedies."

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again... Anacin.

Each year, doctors give up to 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend most than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin®.

The Golfing Routes Of Cerrudo, Leach

Ray Leach of Novato and Ron Cerrudo of Napa, two young men who make their livelihood by chasing little white balls all over large green fields, found that there is money to be made at out of the way places such as Tijuana and Morocco.

Leach, graduate of Brigham Young University who failed in a bid to qualify for a Professional Golfers Association playing card, won himself $1,600 for a fourth place finish in a pro golf tourney at Tijuana the other day. And then Sunday Cerrudo won himself a check for $13,000 and a gold dagger with 210 diamonds as winner of the International Grand Prix du Maroc, a little golfing affair put on by King Hassan.

That one tournament gave Cerrudo nearly half of what he had previously earned during the entire 1972 PGA tour, $27,348. Before his marriage and subsequent move to a condominium on the Silverado Country Club course in Napa, Cerrudo lived in San Rafael a short while. His parents still live here.

CERRUDO AND LEACH will both be trying to win some of the $25,000 purse in the Laguna Seca, Del Monte Hyatt Pro-Am Invitational (phew, I'm tired just saying the name) Dec. 27-30 on the Monterey Peninsula.

While Cerrudo has been playing on the PGA tour for six years, Leach will have to wait at least a year before he gets another chance to qualify to play with the big boys. But during that time he won't be sitting in an office or ringing door bells as an encyclopedia salesman. He'll be playing pro golf. It's called playing the satellite tour. And although it doesn't have the glamor of the big tour, there's a chance to make some good money and get pro experience at the same time.

RAY WILL BE COMPETING in the Western Golf Asociation's 21-week tour in Southern California, starting Jan. 8, and will also play in some of the Golf Professionals Association tournaments that spread throughout the state and spill into Nevada.

There are a half dozen of these satellite tournaments in the country, including a pair in Florida, one in Georgia and another in Texas.

"The purses for these tourneys will be from $25,000 to $50,000, with first place usually worth $5,000," said Leach. "I think my chances of winning are good." But he admits that of 130 or so golfers on the Western Golf Asociation tour, only 12 to 15 will make enough money, after paying all expenses, to call it a good living.

HE WAS INTRODUCED to the Golf Professionals Association, of which the Tijuana Open was part, by Jim Perron, pro at Fallbrook Country Club in San Diego County. Now the president of the GPA, Perron had been the head pro at Indian Valley Golf Club in Novato where Leach got his golfing start, in the early '50s.

Leach had a share of the second-round lead in the Tijuana tournament but slipped toward the end of the 54-hole test. "Coming down those last four or five holes I could really feel it," said Leach. "I realized I needed to be in this situation more."

Has Leach set any goals for himself for his first full year on the tour?

"MY FIRST GOAL would be to win a tournament, and then I would hope to make enough to cover the expenses."

Then he would try again to earn a PGA playing card to qualify for the big tour. Only 20 golfers, just one of every 25 who tried, made the grade last year at the PGA players tournament school. The odds are not very good.

AFTER TOURNEY WIN

A Big Year Is Seen By Golfer Cerrudo

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Ron Cerrudo thinks he's ready for a big year on the pro golf circuit in 1973 — and he's got a $13,000 check and a dagger with 210 diamonds to prove it.

The big-hitting Cerrudo, who never has quite reached predicted stardom, won $27,000 on the pro tour in 1972.

But he went across the Atlantic last week and captured the $60,000 International Grand Prix du Maroc, a tourney run by King Hassan which ended Sunday afternoon in Rabbat.

The former San Rafael resident fired 72 holes over a 7,500-yard golf course in three-under-par 289, then parred an extra hole to break a tie with fellow Californian Al Geiberger, who bogied

The dagger was presented by the king "as a special present."

The 27-year-old Cerrudo of Napa says a few visits to a psychiatrist and a slight change in the way he grips his club have convinced him he's ready to go for some of the big money on the pro trail.

But he says whatever happens, he'll be back to defend his title in Morocco.

"Everything was fantastic there," he says.

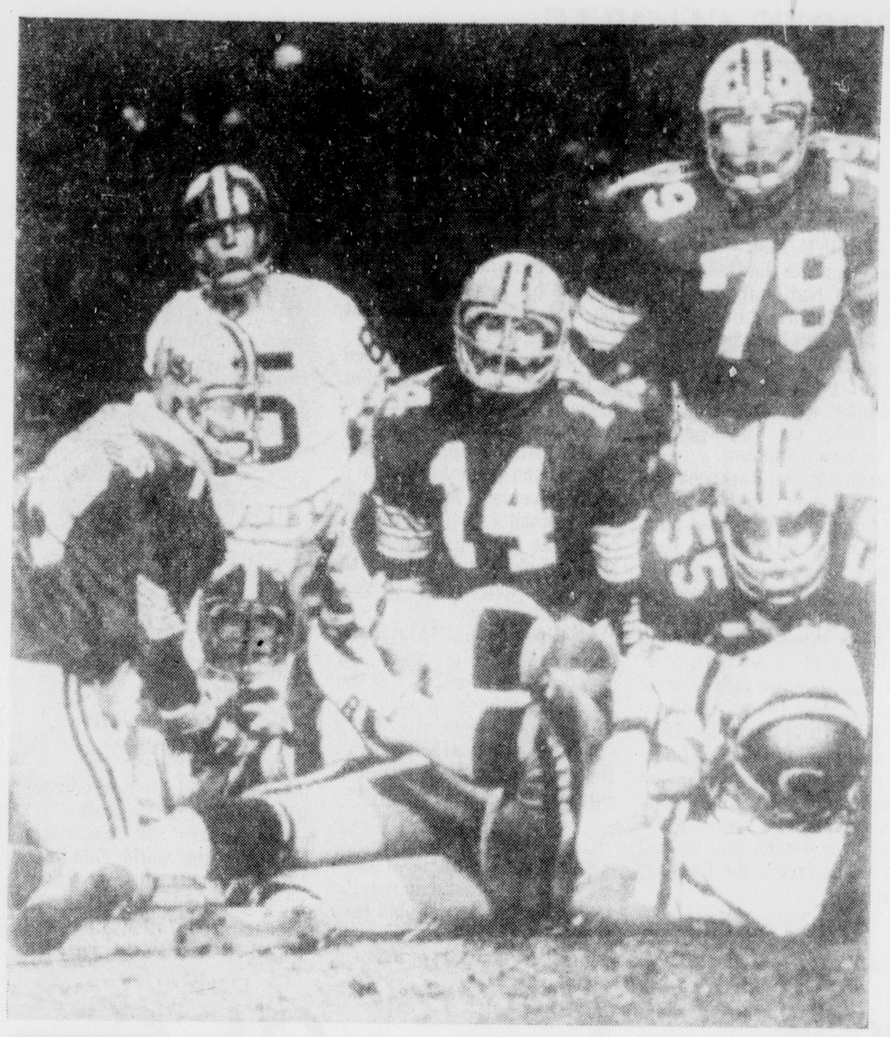
TEXAS TEAM SELECTS FRY

DENTON, Tex. (UPI) — Hayden Fry, former football coach at Southern Methodist University has been hired as head football coach at North Texas State University.

NTSU athletic director Fred McCain today acknowledged Fry's hiring and called the man who led SMU to a 7-4 mark this past season "extremely capable I think he has the ability to give us some excitement. He's certainly knowledgeable."

Fry, who led the Mustangs to a second place tie in the Southwest Conference, was in Denton Sunday and again Monday discussing the possibility of a job with NTSU officials.

"I think its a wonderful opportunity," Fry said. "It's a great challenge. I am impressed with the university officials. I am enthusiastic about the people. They want to put North Texas on top.'



RECOVERY — Iowa State defenders Larry Hunt (8), Randy Bozich (14), Ted Jernov (55) and Merv Krakau (79) looked on dejectedly as Georgia Tech's Glenn Costello clutched the football after Iowa State attempted an unsuccessful on side kick in the Liberty Bowl game in Memphis, Tenn. The action took place in the final minutes of the contest last night in Tech's 31-30 victory.

Coach Fulcher Isn't Shy After Win Over Iowa '11'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)— Georgia Tech Coach Bill Fulcher, who has been walking a tightrope for two weeks, wasn't the least bit shy about the outcome of Monday night's Liberty Bowl.

"This has to go in the books as one of the great victories of Georgia Tech, perhaps of college football," he bubbled after his team's 31-30 upset of Iowa State before 50,021 and a national television audience.

"After all this ball club has gone through in the last few weeks," he added, "it is hard to find the right words to express just how I feel about the way it played tonight. Somehow I knew they would."

Fulcher never mentioned black quarterback Eddie McAshan, the senior star he booted off the team before Tech's final game of the season in a controversy over complimentary tickets.

"Didn't Jim Stevens do just great? Didn't he? He just got better as the game progressed," said Fulcher.

He referred to the junior substitute who stepped in for McAshan and tossed touchdown passes of 22, nine and three yards to Jim Robinson, Rob Healy and Kevin McNamara to win the game. Stevens also ran for a two-point conversion as he started only his second game for the Yellow Jackets.

Fulcher was hit with charges of racial bias by McAshan after he was unable to get extra tickets to the Georgia-Georgia Tech game. About 200 civil rights pickets marched outside the Liberty Bowl Stadium briefly at the beginning of Monday night's game

"It was just fantastic, fantastic," said Stevens in the steamy Tech dressing room. But he still seemed as calm as he seemed on his fourth-period pass to McNamara which gave Tech the victory with less than 12 minutes to play.

His antics barely overshadowed two touchdown passes by Iowa State quarterback GeorgeAmundson. Both went to end Ike Harris and the second was for five yards with less than two minutes in the game.

The short pass made the score 31-30 in favor of Tech. But Amundson rolled out for a two-point conversion pass attempt with only 1:36 to play and threw the ball out of the end zone under pressure from Tech's Tim Macy and Beau Bruce.

Pro Grid Front Offices In Christmas Housecleaning

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Football League's annual Christmas housecleaning began early this year as two head coaches were handed their walking papers Monday and at least five others wondered about their fate

Ed Khayat, a hero last season when he boosted the Philadelphia Eagles to victory in six of their last nine games after an 0-3 start under Jerry Williams, and Bob Hollway, a defensive whiz who never got his message across to the St. Louis Cardinals, were fired Monday.

The Eagles finished last in the National Conference this season with a 2-11-1 record while the Cardinals barely nosed them out for fourth in the NFC East with a 4-9-1 mark.

Left wondering about their future were Tommy Prothro of Los Angeles, Joe Schmidt of Detroit, J.D. Roberts of New Ojleans and Bill Peterson of Houston. Phil Bengtson of New England is an interim coach and will be replaced in all probability.

"Our loyal fans deserve to be in the game and deserve a winning team,' said Eagles' owner Leonard Tose in announcing the dismissal of Khayat and General Manager Pete Retzlaff. "There was no way this was a 2-11-1 team on merit."

Khayat said he was "sorry we weren't able to give the people of this area a winning football team. I believe they will have a winning football team in the near future."

Hollway admitted he was, "a little angry and a little disappointed" when notified of his dismissal. "I expected to fulfill the last year of my three-year contract," said the man who put together the "Purple People Eaters" at Minnesota before taking over for Charlie Winner at St. Louis. "A team has to have patience with a coach but apparently this team doesn't feel that way. I think I'm a winner as a football coach and I think I can go someplace else and help somebody else win."

Two other coaches are set for next season but the New York Jets' Weeb Ewbank, the only man ever to win titles in both the National and American Football Leagues, said the 1973 season will be his last after 44 years of coaching. Ewbank, now 65, will fulfill the second year of a two-year contract and might remain as general manager after next season. He currently holds both titles.

Alex Webster, who turned the New York Giants into one of the surprise teams of 1972, also had his contract renewed for another season. Webster took a club apparently going nowhere and directed it to an 8-6 season.

The annual disenchantment cries began to rise Monday following the end of the season. Star defensive end Elvin Bethea of the Houston Oilers threatened to quit if he was not traded and Pat Holmes, the Oilers' other end, also said he is contemplating retirement. Defensive tackle Mike Tilleman played out his option with Houston and probably will be traded.

Defensive end Gerry Philbin led a host of New York Jets players who said they were disenchanted with Ewbank, among them linebacker Larry Grantham, guard Dave Herman, quarterbacks Bob Davis and Al Woodall and safety Gus Hollomon and tight end Dave Parks says he's had it in New Orleans and has asked to be traded to a contender

Raiders, 49ers Set Playoff Activities

Oakland Avoided Injuries

ALAMEDA (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders did about everything they wanted to in their 28-21 victory over the Chicago Bears

For one thing, nobody got hurt, which means that they'll go into Saturday's playoff battle at Pittsburgh in good physical shape.

For another thing, they got five passes to Fred Biletnikoff, giing him 58 catches for the year and the American Football League title.

And big Marv Hubbard moved for 41 yards, giving him 1,100 for the season and breaking Clem Daniels' old team record by one.

"Clem didn't work behind the kind of offensive line I have now," said Hubbard. "It's the best in football. I feel a little humble about Clem's record. Hubbard, who runs into people instead of around them, plays with such abandon that he was voted the William Gorman Award by his teammates as best exemplifying the pride and spirit of the team.

"We play Pittsburgh in the opening round Saturday and it's a short week for practice. Also we lose one day in travel," he noted.

The club resumed workouts today and will leave Thursday for Pittsburgh. They'll work out Friday at Three Rivers Stadium, site of the battle.

The Raiders traditionally don't like cold weather or artificial turf and the artificial turf at Three Rivers' Stadium lay frost-encrusted in 20 degree temperature Monday.

Oakland lost its season opener at Pittsburgh when a Daryle Lamonica-led comeback failed and the Steelers held on for the 34-28 win.

Ski Trip Slated To Squaw Valley

The Rohnert Park Recreation Department will offer a family ski trip to Squaw Valley Feb. 23-25.

The trip includes roundtrip bus transportation, two nights lodging at the Olympic Village Hotel, three meals and price reductions on ski lift tickets and equipment rental.

Cost based on triple occupancy, is $31.25 per person and on double occupancy is $33.25. Reservations with a $10 deposit must be made by Jan. 5 with recreation director James Pekkain. A minimum of 33 persons will be necessary to make the trip possible.

Celtics, Warriors, Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Golden State Warriors host pro basketball's hottest team tonight, which does not mean that the Los Angeles Lakers are coming to town.

The Boston Celtics bring a 263 record into the Oakland Coliseum Arena despite the fact that they have no starter over 6-9 and no scorer in the top 10.

But they have a 6-5 superstar who can go either at forward or guard in the person of John Havlicek and he is surrounded by a bunch of young players who seem to fit well together.

There is third year man Dave Cowens at center while guards Jo Jo White and Don Chaney are in their fourth and fifth year respectively.

The Warriors hope to have big forward Clyde Lee back in the lineup. He has been out with an arch injury.

Although Golden State was 32 on the latest road swing, Lee's absence was never felt more than in Sunday's 105-99 loss to Baltimore, which the Bullets won 105-99. Big Elvin Hayes rolled for 33 points and blocked 11 shots but the Warriors figure Lee could have slowed him down a bit.

Boston also has a big, tough forward in the person of newlyacquired Paul Silas. The Warriors hope Lee will be ready to battle him for the rebounds tonight.

"They blew us off the court in Boston," Warriors center Nate Thurmond said Monday.

Niner QB Issue Is Undecided

SAN FRANCISCO — Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers and Tom Landry of Dallas are each positive who will start at quarterback in Saturday's playoff battle—for the opposition.

Nolan says "I name my starting lineup Thursday" when asked whether he will go with Steve Spurrier, the cool benchwarmer who took the team to a 5-3-1 mark after John Brodie wau hurt—or Brodie, who replaced the faltering Spurrier last Saturday and rallied the 49ers to a heartstopping 20-17 win over Minnesota.

But Nolan says that Landry will start the scrambling Roger Staubach ahead of the classic dropback thrower Craig Morton.

Nolan recalled in the 31-10 49er win over Dallas on Thanksgiving, his Prospector defensive line got to Morton nine times. "It's tougher to sack a scrambler like Staubach," he says.

Landry says "I haven't decided yet whether Staubach is ready to start in Morton's spot I'm going to wait until later in the week."

But he adds "there's no question in my mind that Nolan will start John Brodie. He has little choice after what Brodie did Saturday against Minnesota."

Although Nolan won't name a Saturday starter, he says the plays will be called from the bench.

"Brodie was permitted to call his own plays against Minnesota only because we were playing catch-up football," said Nolan. "We intend to keep Dallas guessing by calling plays from the bench. It worked the last time out. There's no reason to change."

Nolan also praised offensive guard Randy Beisler for the job he did on Minnesota's Alan Page. "That was one of the reasons our pass protection held up so well," he said.

Both Nolan and Brodie complained that Vic Washington did not receive enough credit for his run after taking a short pass from Brodie late in the contest. It appeared he would be trapped on the 20, but broke a pair of tackles and got down to the two, from where they scored three plays later on a pass to Dick Witcher

Nolan said rookie Windlan Hall will take over Saturday at strong safety for Mel Phillips, who broke his shoulder against the Vikings.

"He's small, but he's tough and likes contact," said Nolan. "Windlan did a good job as Phillips' replacement Saturday. If he should have any problems,

SHRINE GAME

A Fight Against Pros' Madness

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Shrine East-West Game, one of college football's oldest talent showcases, is fighting pro football madness here again.

PEOPLE KNOW

"But I'm not really too worried. We'll make out. There aretoo many people who know how important this game is," he added in an interview Monday.

The San Francisco 49ers and neighboring Oakland Riaders are both in the National Football League playoffs, opening this weekend. Playoff games have been held here three straight years.

49ERS

If the 49ers beat Dallas Saturday, the National Conference title game could be at Candlestick Park Dec. 31, the day after the Shriners' game and pageant there. The NFL has already asked permission for its teams to practice at Candlestick the morning of Dec. 30.

The 49ers' and Raiders' season ticket holders are potential East-West game customers. The postseason event that was once an automatic sellout is no longer that, and it has lost its major network television contract to boot.

Luckily, though, the number of East-West Game supporters grows every year — with the selection of the 56 college stars who play in it.

FIND OUT

"A lot of the boys don't have any idea what the game's about when they arrive. But they find out quickly," said Engle, who selects the East players each year.

The players, arriving here today, will visit the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children Wednesday morning.

The players in this year's game include All-Americans Calvin Jones of Washington, Otis Armstrong of Purdue and Brad Van Pelt of Michigan State. Many others made second and third-team All-American.

PRESTIGE

The East-West Game's prestige among college coaches has not waned.

Engle pulled a letter out of his pocket and said, "Don't tell on him."

The coach, on the committee of another college all-star game, wrote Engle this fall that the top players from his team would accept the invitation to play in the East-West Game.

"I did the same thing when I was at Penn State," Engle said. "I was coaching in another game, but I told my best player, Pete Liske, to go to the East-West Game.

"I knew that 20 years later he'd thank me for it."

Wooden's Return Is Predicted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA basketball coach John Wooden will return but even athletic director J.D. Morgan doesn't know when.

"It's a day-to-day situation," Morgan said Monday. "He'll be back with his team when his doctor says he can go back."

The 62-year-old Wooden, in his 25th season at UCLA, was released from St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., Sunday where he had been a week with a mild heart condition.

"He's well now I think," Morgan added, "but he underwent a series of tests at the hospital and that sapped his strength."

Speaking to the weekly meeting of the Southern California Basketball Writers, the athletic director said he could not amplify on Wooden's ailment.

"I just know what the doctor told us," he said. "I can't give you any technical information because you know what I know."

Assistant coaches Gary Cunningham and Frank Arnold, who guided UCLA to a 98-67 victory over UC Santa Barbara Saturday night, talked to their head coach at Wooden's home Monday, according to Morgan.

"John watched the delayed replay of the game on television and I guess he just wanted to let them (Cunningham and Arnold) know what he thought," Morgan said.

He added, "We're going to have to restrict John from interviews until he's stronger."

Raiders Underdogs; 49ers 'Even'

Combined AP & UPI

STATELINE, Nev. — Nevada oddsmakers rate the Dallas-San Francisco National Football League playoff game dead even. The 49ers host the defending Super Bowl champions Saturday, 1 p.m., at Candlestick Park after whipping the Cowboys, 31-10, on Thanksgiving Day in Texas Stadium.

Harrah's Tahoe Racebook tab Pittsburgh over Oakland by a point, while Las Vegas set up a 2½-point spread for the host Steelers Saturday, 10 a.m. This 10 a.m. clash is the second meeting between the two clubs this year. Pittsburgh edged the Raiders 34-28 on Sept. 17.

In the other two NFL playoff games, Nevada oddsmakers feel Miami will have little trouble with visiting Cleveland Sunday; the Dolphins are 12-point favorite among Las Vegas point setters. Harrah's rates Washington over Green Bay by 4½; Las Vegas favors the Redskins by five.

DENVER — Running back Floyd Little of the Denver Broncos underwent surgery to remove cartilage from both sides of his left knee Monday and was reported in excellent condition.

Surgeons said Little suffered no ligament damage and that he could have his cast removed in about a month.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Johnny Majors, who made Iowa State a pesky adversary in one of college football's toughest conferences, the Big Eight, was hired Monday night to rebuild the tattered fortunes of the University of Pittsburgh.

At Pittsburgh, Majors, 38, succeeds Carl DePasqua, 45, who was fired Nov. 27 after the Panthers suffered through a 1-10 season, the poorest in Pitt's 82-year football history. DePasqua's four-year record at Pitt was 13-29.

SAALBACH, Austria — Annemarie Proell of Austria won the ladies World Cup downhill here today in a ski race that put Jaqueline Rouvier of France,

The victory put Annemarie ahead in the world standings with 50 points, 10 more than Miss Rouvier, who fell as she crossed the finish line and pulled a tendon in her left ankle. Miss Proell was timed at 1:29.58 minutes.

MADONNA DI CAMPIGLIO, Italy — David Zwilling of Austria carved his way to victory in the World Cup giant slalom today, coming from third place after the first leg to move into the lead of the World Cup competition.

Jim Hunter of Canada, 4-10ths of a second in front after the first leg, fell within sight of the finish line as Adolf Roesti of Switzerland took second place behind Zwilling's combined time of three minutes, 42.99 seconds.

Baseball

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers announced Monday that second baseman Jim Lefebvre, 29, who was recently released by the club, has signed a three-year contract with the Lotte Orions baseball team of Tokyo, Japan.

Lefebvre, an eight-year Dodger veteran who was the National League Rookie of the Year in 1965, will reportedly become the highest paid American athlete in the history of Japanese baseball, Dodger officials said. Specific terms of the contract were not disclosed.

CHICAGO — Owners of the new Kansas City franchise in the National Hockey League have until Jan. 25 to come up with plans for a suitable arena or lose their franchise.

The NHL's Finance Committee received plans Monday from the Kansas City group for possible construction of an arena at Union Station in downtown Kansas City. But league officials said some "details and transactions" remained incomplete.

Firing Of Coach Khayat

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eddie Khayat had put in a long day, the kind which would've been extremely painful for most men.

Nobody likes being fired.

That's what happened to Eddie Khayat yesterday after a bit less than 15 months as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles. He had another year to run on a two-year contract, but Eagles' owner Leonard Tose told him he needn't bother. Pete Retzlaff, the Eagles' general manager who, like Khayat, once played for Philadelphia, was told the same thing.

Eddie Khayat got the news from Leonard Tose himself about a quarter to 10 yesterday morning.

Now more than six hours later, after talking to the media people and answering all the phone calls, Eddie Khayat was about to leave the Eagles' office in Philadelphia and drive back to his Cherry Hill, N.J. home.

"Rough day, wasn't it, Eddie?" someone said to the tall, straight 37-year-old Moss Point, Miss., native.

Eddie Khayat shook his head.

"I never had a bad day in my life," he said.

"Another thing is that you have to know my background. I've been in the NFL all my adult life, 16 years. I've seen it all. As a player I was waived, injured, on a last-place club, a championship club and a coupla runner-up clubs. This isn't the first time I've been cut. I was cut before I even played college football. That's right, cut by Ole Miss and Mississippi State before I played with Tulane.

"I didn't go straight to Tulane. I went to Millsaps College and Perkinson Junior College first. They don't even call it Perkinson anymore. It's since been renamed Gulf Coast Junior College. And when I got out of Tulane, I wasn't drafted by the Washington Redskins. I went to them as a free agent. So I've been around a little."

Enough to know that in any professional sport, a man can be a hero Monday and a bum on Tuesday.

In a way, that's what happened to Khayat.

Last year he was a hero.

He took over the Eagles from Jerry Williams after Philadelphia had been blown out of the ballpark in its first three ball games and finished with a strong 6-2-1 record over the last nine games.

Leonard Tose, the owner, became a victim of his own enthusiasm.

Visions of a possible playoff berth began dancing in front of him. Maybe even a trip to the Super Bowl. Why not?

They finished with a sorry 2-11-1 log that entitled them to the cellar in the NFC's East Division on merit.

There were no tears when Khayat was informed his services were no longer required Monday.

He was having a post-season meeting with his players when the call came saying Tose wished to see him. It says something for Kmayat's character that even after he was told he was finished, he went back to his players, concluded the meeting and then said goodbye to them, as did Retzlaff.

Upstairs in the Eagles office later, one by one the majority of the Philadelphia players came by to say a few private words to Ed Khayat, shake his hand, wish him well. You could see how his players felt about him. And him about them.

"The association a coach has with his players is something, well, you simply can not know unless you happen to be the coach or one of the players," said Khayat. "I can't tell you how close I was to these boys. I wouldn't say I'm very emotional, but I'd also have to say that was one thing, the relationship, that has to touch a man. You go through a lot together, a coach and his players. You all bleed and sweat and fight for the same thing."

Eddie Khayat ran into a lot of criticism when he first took over the Eagles and decreed they had to wear their hair and sideburns a certain length. He became a symbol of The Establishment and the longhairs all snickered at him.

The fact is with Eddie Khayat's "rule" about the length of hair the Eagles won last year; this year they didn't. What does it all prove? Nothing, really.

COAST ROUNDUP

Basketball Teams Come Back To Earth

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Coast basketball teams have come back to earth with a thud after acting as though they were in orbit over the weekend.

Santa Clara, for instance, was the underdog of four teams at the Utah Classic and won it. But Monday Santa Claraflopped at Creighton 86-73.

Three other Coast teams also tasted defeat far from home.

Oklahoma City took care of California 95-84 despite 22 by the Bears' Rickie Hawthorne while Denver nipped Stanford 77-74 although big Rich Kelley tallied 24 for the Cards. San Francisco State fell 89-64 at Northern Illinois.

Un action on the Coast, Seattle ran its record to 4-1 with an 84-65 win over Portland with Rod Derline getting 28 for the victors.

Dave Webber had 22 as Nevada-Reno disposed of Humboldt State 88-77 with Dave Massey of the losers accounting for 25.

It was Lewis and Clark 71 and Simon Fraser 70 and Montana State 98 Hayward State 72.

Meanwhile, latest UPI ratings showed UCLA still the unanimous No. 1 pick and Long Beach State in sixth. USF clings to 19th place.

Long Beach State goes on display in the East tonight at the Nassau Classic. Stanford Stanfordat Colorado State; Oregon at tough Providence; and San Jose State clal on Purdue. San Diego State is at DePaul; San Francisco State at Minnesota and Pepperdine at John Brown.

WHA Raiders' Ward Is Leading Scorer

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Ron Ward spent the week helping out.

He picked up a pair of goals, but his nine assists gave him an 11-point week and further cemented his hold on the World Hockey Association scoring lead. Ward now has 28 goals and 30 assists for 58 points in 33 games with the New York Raiders.

Chris Bordeleau of Winnipeg remains in second place with 26 goals and 21 assists for 47 points. Terry Caffery of New England moved from a tie for seventh to sole possession of third place, with two goals and seven assists for a nine-point week. He has 16 goals and 29 assists for 45 points.

Ex-Cub Hartnett Is Hospitalized

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gabby Hartnett, a catcher with the Chicago Cubs for 18 years and a member of baseball's hall of fame, was in "very serious condition" Monday in Lutheran General Hospital in suburban Park Ridge, Ill., with kidney and stomach ailments.

A hospital spokesman said his vital signs "tend to be abnormal." Hartnett will be 72 Wednesday. He was not allowed visitors.

Hartnett played in 1,926 games with the cubs before he retired in 1941. He was player-manager of the cubs from 1938 to 1940 and had a lifetime batting average of .298.

Banquet Time For Marin Rod-Gunners

By AL GIDDINGS

The Marin Rod and Gun Club is beginning to put together its annual stag banquet for Saturday, Jan. 27. The get acquainted "Good Time Hour" starts at 6 p.m. at the clubhouse at Point San Quentin. Dinner will be served at 7:30, and during the evening entertainment will be presented. You better get your reservations as soon as possible. This event is always a sellout! Write P.O. Box 900, San Rafael, 94902.

THINGS HAVE been generally slow throughout Marin County with the extremely cold weather, rains and wind. Bill Boyle of the Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge had one sale of bait for each of three straight days this past week. But with the weather breaking, fishing for stripers and sturgeon should really pick up.

We've had enough heavy rains to wash out the delta, putting the bait for these fish right in San Pablo. The fresh water should keep the bullheads, crabs and sharks generally out of the bay. This gives your baits time to be found by the stripers and sturgeon as the fresh water doesn't bother them at all. I know many of you would like to catch a sturgeon. Ghost shrimp sell for about $3 per dozen; they are well worth the price.

But don't under estimate the bay shrimp which are sold live and fresh. They are also a top bait. But, you should use a 4/0 hook and load the hook with from 4 to 6 of these little morsels. Big baits catch big fish. Even an anchovy is a good possibility, but use the whole fish. Joe Mello, the Santa Venetia fish champ, says he had taken a couple using salmon roe. Sturgeon feed heavily on herring roe, so I'd bet salmon roe would be a hot bait.

KEITH FRASER called to report he was out Sunday in the rain fishing outside of the Marin Islands in the outgoing tide with Tom Miller. They saw two boats, each with two men aboard land two sturgeon. Estimated weights were 60 and 110 pounds. They also saw three jump, but couldn't get a hookup. You'd better get out there quick!

THE PAIR OF predacious poachers that found easy pickin's purloining prime salmon from the Department of Fish and Game's Station on the Noyo River has been broken up.

The DFG says one of two river otters that had developed a penchant for pirating fish from the state's salmon trapping and egg collecting facility was trapped last week as she attempted to pursue her proclivity for procuring provisions from the fish pens.

Problems arose at the station several weeks ago when a pair of predacious river otters found out how to sneak into the tanks where the fish are held for artificial spawning and pick off a piscatorial treat for their dinners.

THE NOYO RIVER station is the State's sole source for silver salmon eggs which are the basis for the DFG's extensive silver salmon stocking program. Fisheries biologists understandably took a dim view of the otters' midnight forays at the station and they called on wildlife experts in the Department to help them with their problem.

Beaver traps were set up near the underwater entrance to the holding tanks and last week one of the otters was snared, alive and unhurt. The female otter was taken to a remote area along the Big River and released. There she probably will have to work a little harder for her dinner, but she won't be dining at the expense of the DFG's silver salmon program.

NBA Kings' Win Aided By Green

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Veteran Johnny Green was pulled from the Kansas City-Omaha bench in the third quarter Monday night to neutralize Portland scoring ace Sidney Wicks. Green ignited the Kings to a 113-95 win over the Trail Blazers in the night's only National Basketball Association game, played at Kansas City.

Wicks, who finished with 23 points, had been mainly responsible for the Blazers' 51-49 halftime lead.

Green entered the game with 6:31 left in the third period, when the Kings had a one-point edge, 65-64. He scored seven points in the remainder of the quarter and held Wicks in check.

KC-Omaha's Nate Williams shone in the fourth when he scored 13 points.

NBA high-scorer Nate Archibald hit 30 points and dealt off 15 assists before going out with four minutes remaining.

Hot Stars Rip Dallas In ABA Play

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Shooting nearly 80 per cent in the first period, the Utah Stars built up an insurmountable margin and took their eighth straight victory with a 146-126 win over the Dallas Chaparrals Monday night.

Utah's Willie Wise led the scoring with 32 points as the Stars rolled to a 44-26 first period lead and spread to 75-56 at intermission.

At one point during the first quarter, Utah led 33-7 before Dallas came to life.

The Chaps' James Silas scored 31 points in a losing effort to match Wise's output. He was followed by Joe Hamilton's 23 counters.

Utah's Glen Combs hit four three-point goals for the night and finished with 22 points behind James Jones' 23.

The Stars, following their hot shooting first quarter, evened out to 63 per cent shooting for the first half and 60.4 overall, while Dallas finished the night with 48 per cent.

CAGE PROSPECTS

Redwood Always Title Contender

By LEW CODDINGTON

(First in a series on Marin County Athletic League varsity basketball prospects.)

For the first time within memory, Redwood High School will not have the most feared basketball team in the Marin County Athletic League.

But nobody ever went broke betting on the Giants, and the league's coaches anticipate that Redwood once again will have a title contender by the time the MCAL season begins Jan. 5.

Certainly, the names on the roster have a ring of greatness about them — Boro, Hennessy, Trobbe. The trouble is that the first names don't match up — Steve, Neil, Steve. And there lies the crux of the Giants' problem, for the names were made famous by the older brothers of the little-used players now on Redwood's roster.

"We're very inexperienced," warned coach Dick Hart. "We're not as deep, not as big, not as good at shooting," as last year's team, which went 24-3 overall and finished second in the MCAL at 11-3 after winning three straight titles and 45 straight league games.

"We make up for the lack of experience with outstanding hustle, however," said Hart. "We're kind of a surprise team."

The Giants are missing all-league center Steve McGee, all-league forward Tim Hennessy and honorable mention guard San Farb from last year's powerhouse.

Two stars return. Mike Connor, a 6-foot-2 wing man in the one-guard offense, plays the game with intelligence and consistency and has been honorable mention all-league two years in a row. Darrell Elder, 6-6 junior center, can be an intimidating force in the middle.

"For my money, Connor is the best all-round athlete in Redwood's history," said Hart.

Katsumi Johnson, a senior guard who didn't play last year, will run the offense after shaking off the effects of a hand injury which kept him out of the lineup the past two weeks.

Beyond Connor, Elder and Johnson come the mystery players who, if they develop, could thrust the Giants toward the title.

Steve Boro, a 6-3 senior forward up from the junior varsity, is the younger brother of former Redwood star John. Neil Hennessy, a 6-2 forward, is Tim's younger brother. Steve Trobbe, a 6-5 sophomore, is the younger brother of Scott. Dave Payne, a 6-2 forward, and Mark Kilmer, a sophomore guard, are other young Giants bidding for key roles.

Berra Looks to Football Field

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Even before the World Series began New York Mets manager Yogi Berra was looking forward to seeing some football games.

His son Timmy plays flanker back for the University of Massachusetts eleven. His youngest of three sons, Dale, is quarterback for Montclair High School. Yogi's oldest son, Larry, 22, says his baseball career as a Mets' farm team catcher is over. He recently underwent a second operation on a knee he reinjured while playing for the Marion, Va., Mets in the Appalachian League.

Redwood, Vacaville Cagers Play

Redwood High School will open the Yuba City Invitational Basketball Tournament Thursday at 4 p.m., against Vacaville High. The Giants will be defending the championship they have won the last two years.

In five years of Yuba competition, Redwood finished first (twice), second, third and fourth.

Redwood beat Yuba City in the finals last year, but coach Dick Hart says he knows very little about the other teams who will be contending for the title. Liberty of Brentwood and Livermore High in addition to Redwood and the host team should be the tourney's strong teams, according to Hart.

Friday, the Giants will either play Mira Loma of Sacramento, or Livermore in semi-final action.

Santa Clara's Stewart Picked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The Northern California basketball writers have named Santa Clara Center Mike Stewart the area's Player of the Week for leading the Broncs past Providence in the finals of the Utah Classic.

Stewart scored 57 points and grabbed 20 rebounds as the Broncs took a pair of upset wins and Coach Carroll Williams admitted he was happy that the pivot man was named the player of the tourney.

University of San Francisco finally tasted defeat when host Kansas edged the Dons 60-58 in the finals of the Jayhawk Classic. Coach Bob Gaillard told the writers Monday that he thought the tip-in which beat his team was a questionable call, sort of "a semi-dunk."

Iowa Coach Tabbed

AMES, Iowa (UPI)—Harold Nichols, who guided Iowa State University to the National Collegiate Athletic Association wrestling title, was named 1972 wrestling coach of the year Monday.

HAYWARD BOXER

Foreman A Year Behind Plans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm about a year behind schedule in fighting for the heavyweight championship," says a confident George Foreman. "The chance came later than I expected."

Battling in Jamaica on Jan. 22, Foreman talked better than he boxed in the Los Angeles visit.

His jab was sharp against a sparring mate, but he showed a slowness apparently from inactivity. Manager Dick Saddler said Foreman had been working only two days prior to the Southern California visit.

Asked if he thought the negotiations for a possible rematch between Frazier and Muhammed Ali had hurt his own chances for a title fight, Foreman replied:

"Nothing can hurt me. I'll set it all straight once I have Joe Frazier in the ring. Anybody else talking then will be just a contender like me, or like I was."

Foreman carries a 37-0 record including 34 knockouts. Both he and his manager, Dick Saddler, were asked if some of those were "stiffs."

Saddler replied, "Well, George knocked them stiff."

The challenger gets $340,000 guaranteed for this try at tye championship while Frazier gets more than double that amount.

As the challenger sat in his dressing room, he had a top advisor wrapping his hands — Archie Moore, the venerable former light heavyweight king who acts as Foreman's advisor.

It remained doubtful if the young heavyweight could duplicate the moves and pound for pound striking ability of his advisor in Moore's prime.

"We're all working together to bring about a change," said Archie who must be in his mid-50's although he guards his true age.

Foreman was asked about criticism that he hasn't been fighting top caliber opposition and replied, "If people think I've been fighting guys of low caliber, tell them nothing is going to change. He's just got the championship."

The bout brings together two former United States heavyweight champions of the Olympic Games, Frazier winning in 1964 and Foreman four years later.

Decision On Mill Valley Fire Station Is Delayed

Despite a tongue-lashing from City Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker for "negative attitudes," the Mill Valley City Council last night voted 4-1 to postpone any decision on the long-argued East Mill Valley fire station until Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, city staff members were instructed to look into whether a new state law limiting taxation would leave the city without funds to man the station if it is built, and whether a developer's offer to build a new station and lease it to the city is legal.

Tom W. Newton, director of community development, said a citizens' advisory committee on Dec. 12 recommended the council hire architect Matthew R. Mills of San Francisco to prepare preliminary plans for the building, at an estimated fee of $9,000. In October, Mills warned the council that the station probably would cost more than the $275,000 bond issue that city voters had approved for the station.

Boessenecker last night blasted renewed suggestions that the city solve its problems by contracting with the Alto Fire District to serve East Mill Valley. He demanded that "if you feel Alto should serve us, for God's sake de-annex us. The reason we live in Mill Valley is that we want Mill Valley to serve us."

He said the Alto contract would cost at least $60,000 a year, and that the idea had been carefully considered and rejected before the bond election was held. When Mayor Jean S. Barnard countered that manning the proposed station with five firemen would cost $60,000, Boessenecker retorted that was "poppycock" and lashed at "the negative approach of my colleagues."

"It seems to me squandrous to spend more money just to say we can do it ourselves," retorted Councilman Robert E. Capron.

Councilman Robert E. Burton warned that the expense of manning the new station might run the city afoul of recently enacted Senate Bill 90, which put a freeze on local agency tax rates.

Developer Bradford H. McNutt injected a new element into the argument when he said his firm would be willing to build a new fire station on Shelter Point and lease it to the city.

Planning Commissioner Paul E. Rosenthal charged that "a delightfully clubby situation is developing" and called for the city to advertise for lease proposals rather than accept a single offer. Planning Commission Chairman Ivan S. Poutiatine and Councilman Burton asked McNutt to detail his offer in writing before the Jan. 2 council meeting.

The council also asked City Atty. Leland S. Jordan to investigate the consequences of the Legislature's tax freeze.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala, Burton and others favored having architect Mills begin working on preliminary plans as soon as possible so he could give more accurate cost estimates on the proposed building. He said he could complete the drawings 60 days after being hired.

Curfew Rule Is Invoked By Mill Valley Council

Four Mill Valley city councilmen invoked a standing curfew policy at 12:25 a.m. today, leaving last night's regular meeting agenda half finished.

Councilmen Gerald J. Hood moved to adjourn, citing the council's agreement not to take up any new agenda matters past midnight. With only Mayor Jean S. Barnard dissenting, the council adjourned to 8 p.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Barnard unsuccessfully argued that several agenda items had been "hanging fire for a long time."

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham announced that the Thursday meeting would begin with a brief, closed session to discuss possible litigation, which had not been on last night's agenda.

The Mill Valley City Council Also:

ENVIRONMENT — Adopted a resolution that the city will require interim environmental impact reports on all new private developments as outlined in the Friends of Mammoth vs. Mono County decision. The state is to provide new rules covering the impact reports within 120 days, under Assembly Bill 889.

BOOSTERS — Unanimously approved citizen Samuel Schneider's proposal to create a business improvement committee of three businessmen and four other citizens to encourage retail trade in the city while enhancing the city's charms — without any expenditure of city funds or staff time.

BALLOON — After applicant Stuart A. Archer failed for the third meeting to appear on behalf of his request to use city property as launching site for a hot air balloon, denied the request.

WINWOOD LANE — After lengthy debate, rescinded the council's Nov. 6 decision to bar auto traffic from the lane, and referred it back to the planning commission for recommendations.

LIGHT — Approved an agreement with Pacific Gas and Electric Co. to install 30 new street lights on Camino Alto between East Blithedale Avenue and Miller Avenue, at a cost of $12,417.42.

CONSULTANT — Approved proposals by Tom V. Newton, director of community development, on procedures for hiring a consultant to work on the city's general plan. A committee will screen applicants' letters due by Jan. 8 and recommend the three top choices for council decision.

OPEN SPACE — Set Jan. 15 for a council hearing on the interim open space plan recommended by the planning commission.

DRAINAGE — Authorized City Engineer Stanley M. Bala to call for bids on work on Nelson Avenue at Ryan Street, at an estimated cost of $11,040.

LAGOON — Acting on citizen complaints that Shelter Ridge grading work was causing siltation of the lagoon nearby, instructed city staff to inspect the area this afternoon at low tide.

Delta Is Checking Skyjack Device

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Delta Air Lines has begun testing a new electronic antihijack weapon.

The device is designed to detect weapons and explosives and went into operation temporarily at the airline's terminal at New York's Kennedy Airport on Monday.

The 3,000-pound X-ray and fluoroscope instrument will be used to inspect hand luggage without opening it. It will not replace metal detectors now in use, but will be used in conjunction with them.

Mill Valley Council Appoints Two To Planning Commission

Louis G. Millin was appointed to one vacant seat on the Mill Valley Planning Commission last night, and Marlene Kaulum was reappointed to the commission by the Mill Valley City Council.

The appointments by unanimous vote followed a closed session at which the councilmen interviewed candidates for the seats.

Millin, president of Enchanted Knolls Homeowners Association, succeeded Commissioner Paul E. Rosenthal, whose second term expired today. Council policy is that no commissioner may serve more than two full terms, Mayor Jean S. Barnard explained.

Mrs. Kaulum was appointed to the commission six months ago, and will be serving her first full, three-year term.

Councilmen postponed filling several other vacancies on city commissions, and sounded a call for more applicants.

These included the parks and recreation commission seat of Dr. James Knez, whose term will expire Feb. 1; the arts commission seat of Pat Ostler, whose term will expire Feb. 15; the human rights miniboard seat of Frances Adams, who has resigned, and the youth commission, whose adult member Mary J. Stetson has resigned.

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham pointed out that the youth commission applicants need not be Mill Valley residents, but must live within the Tamalpais High School attendance area.

Agnew Supporters Little Too Early

His office has repudiated as unsanctioned the group's fund-raising efforts toward an Agnew presidential candidacy in 1976.

Council Backs Away From North Ridge Advisory Unit

Mill Valley city councilmen last night shied away from creating a North Ridge citizens advisory committee before Feb. 5, but voted to make a field trip through the proposed open space area on Jan. 6 or 7.

Appointment of the advisory committee was on the council agenda last night. The councilmen, planning commission members and citizens wrangled for more than an hour over whether owners of some of the property involved should serve on the panel.

The name of Dr. J. Alfred Rider, who owns 200 or more acres in the proposed open space area, was mentioned repeatedly. Councilman Robert E. Burton and others objected to his membership "on anything having to do with boundaries."

The council finally decided to tell the volunteer committee of five women members of the Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club to continue present work on its inventory of the possible acreage for the preserve. The women will lead the council and city officials on a jeep tour of the land on Jan. 6 or 7. The date will be firmly set at the council's Jan. 2 meeting, it was decided.

Mayor Jean S. Barnard warned that a major crossroads in the North Ridge campaign was scheduled for the Jan. 29 meeting of Mill Valley, Larkspur and Corte Madera city councils.

The three councils will propose overall boundaries for the open space area at that meeting, and "it will be quite a monkeywrench" if Mill Valley proposes any idea other than outright public ownership of the land, Mrs. Barnard argued. Rider favors development of part of his acreage and negotiated public use of the remainder short of outright fee title transfer, several speakers said.

Councilman Robert E. Capron resolved the dispute with a complicated motion that the city council should essentially wait until Feb. 5 to appoint a committee — including landowners — to advise the council whether to press for outright acquisition of the land, or other means of public access to the acreage.

Capron's motion was unanimously adopted.

Hope In Korea

Ford Experimental Safety Car Delivered To The Government

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ford officially presented its experimental safety car to the federal government today, acknowledging that there is no certainty it could survive real-life crashes.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe accepted the Experimental Safety Vehicle (ESV), built for the government for a token cost of $1.

Plans for further testing call for a 50-mph barrier crash test on the car next year. Ford has subjected developmental versions of the car to 21 crash tests.

However, Harold C. MacDonald, a Ford vice president in charge of the Product Development Group, pointed out that available test manikins did not provide a realistic measurement of human responses.

"Until a representative test device is developed, such specifications are going to be largely meaningless," he said.

"It is essential to remember that these government limits — intended to describe 'survivability levels' for physical stress on car occupants during impacts—have not yet been proved to relate to real-world experience stress during crashes."

The most obvious special feature of the one-of-a-kind vehicle is its front bumper which extended far beyond that of a conventional bumper. The front end of the car was built, MacDonald said, to accomodate about 35 per cent of the crash energy absorbed in a front impact.

It contains a "controlled-collapse apron" located over the front wheels also to deflect the crash's impact.

Other protective features include "roll cages" which were to preserve the structure of the inside of the car in the event of roll-over collisions, air bag for the driver and passengers and a controlled-collapse steering column.

Pentagon Criticized For Secrecy In Lavelle Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A House subcommittee has criticized what it called "incredible" Pentagon secrecy surrounding the case of Air Force Gen. John D. Lavelle, relieved of his Vietnam command in a dispute over bombing policy.

The House Armed Services Investigating subcommittee, in a report issued Monday, questioned whether this secrecy was aimed at protecting Lavelle or someone else.

"One might be excused," the report said, "for entertaining an uneasy feeling that someone other than General Lavelle could be receiving the benefits of this secrecy."

Lavelle was relieved of command of the 7th Air Force in Vietnam March 31, following reports that bombing raids against North Vietnam went beyond policies set by the administration and that records of the raids were falsified. Lavelle later retired from the service.

The administration policy during the period in question required that only "protective reaction" strikes could be made north of the 20th Parallel. This meant that pilots were not supposed to attack unless fired upon.

Lavelle told his boss, Gen. John D. Ryan, Air Force chief of staff, and also told the hearing, that he ordered four to eight strikes against missile sites and other targets without U.S. planes having first been fired on. But he denied giving any orders to his men to file false reports.

The report reached no formal, overall conclusion on the Lavelle case. It implied some support for him by noting his 32-year career in the Air Force and questioning whether he would have jeopardized that record by extending bombing policy on his own or whether there was "tacit approval of General Lavelle's actions by his superiors."

Commenting on the report, House Armed Services Committee chairman F. Edward Hebert said in New Orleans that "the committee did not draw any conclusions—the report speaks for itself." But he added that "what Lavelle did should have been done six years ago and the war would have been over."

The report also said the Pentagon refused to turn over files on the case. It said "the incredible secrecy with which some (Pentagon) representatives have surrounded this case suggests that the files may have been thoroughly sanitized by this time."

Man Treated Then Booked At County Jail

A fight between a man and his former wife ended last night with his being treated at Marin General Hospital, then booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

Edmund Thomas Biagini, 31, of Inverness was released from county jail on $500 bail to appear Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to San Rafael police, Biagini was visiting his former wife, Judith Kay Biagini, 32, at 45 Woodland Avenue, Apt. 21, where she was staying with a friend, Dalrie Vail. The fight started and he knocked her down and repeatedly kicked her with his boots, police reported.

Her friend hit him across the forehead with a crowbar, and called police. Biagini was treated at Marin General Hospital and then taken to jail.

GAS MILEAGE

A Most Unusual Race Is Staged

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ALTON, Ill. — How far can you go on a gallon of gas?

Here, in Illinois, just across the Mississippi River from St. Louis and a ston'e throw from the Shell Oil Co.'s huge Wood River Refinery, a most unusual race was held recently.

The idea was to squeeze as much distance as you could out of a few drops of fuel — Shell's Super variety.

The winning vehicle, designed and run by a team of researchers at the refinery, came through with (and you won't believe this) 297.730 miles to the gallon — or, to put it another way, based on the weight of the vehicle, 306.662 ton miles per gallon.

They actually drive only 14 miles. But in theory, they would use only 10 gallons to go coast-to-coast across the U.S.

The route covered was along a substantially flat road beside nearby Piasa Creek. The "car" — and the term has to be used lightly — was a highly modified 1959 Opel, the requirement being that the contestants use as a source of power the engine which came with the chassis.

Beyond that, anything went. The engine was mounted midstream in the car and a chain drive used to carry the engine's power to the closely mounted wheels in the rear.

"Gears might have been better than the chain," says B.E. Visser, one of the two engineers who modified the car — the other was John Martin — "but they would have been far too costly." The engine had a 10-to-1 compression ratio, and special lubricants were used.

No car looked less like a winner. It was probably the hardest-riding vehicle around and had absolutely no suspension. Its four aircraft tires were inflated to 180 pounds. "You go over an oil spill in the road," smiles Mr. Martin, who drove the car, "and the car goes bump."

Obviously, this has absolutely nothing to do with what the average motorist can expect to get out of the car he drives. They're different creatures, entirely.

The only purpose of the Shell Mileage Marathon is to show how much movement human engineering and ingenuity can squeeze out of a few drops of gasoline.

In this case, the team of Visser and Martin consumed 134 grams of fuel or, to put it another way, five ounces, on the test run.

No one could drive a car this way on the highway. The idea is to accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast, accelerate and coast. That said, the Visser-Martin car has covered about one mile.

"We figure on four accelerations a mile," explains Visser, who, by the way, was chairman of this year's marathon, "hitting the throttle hard and getting up to 15 or 16 miles an hour, then coasting down to 8 or 9, then stepping on it again." It took about two minutes for each acceleration-and-coast period, or eight minutes a mile.

"A wide-open throttle is the most efficient," declares Visser, so we step right to the floor." In effect, what they did was run a very short drag race, plus a lot of coasting.

The runner-up team, which held the record for the past five years, had, until recently, been known as the Three Blind Mice: R. C. Trokey, J. M. Jones, and D. C. Carlson. Carlson no longer is with Shell. Last year, the trio checked out at almost 250 miles a gallon in a highly modified 1959 Fiat with over 50,000 miles on the odometer.

This year, because of a broken starter cable which had to be repaired en route and other causes, they lost the cup.

"Ah, but wait till next year," they sigh.

The Shell Mileage Marathon began in 1939 because of an argument between two employees of the Wood River lab who disagreed on how far a gallon of gasoline would move a passenger car.

The argument will likely never be settled. It did, however, spark an annual competition between workers in the lab who, although the "race is not sanctioned by anyone, maintain that it is a world record. No one seems to dispute the claim. Only Wood River lab workers compete.

The first race, in 1939, was won by R. J. Greenshields, later director of research, when he cozxed almost 50 miles per gallon from a 1933 Plymouth coupe. The races were discontinued during the years of World War II and again between 1959 and 1964.

When resumed in 1964, new classifications and regulations were added. In 1966, a Sportman's Division was added to encourage anyone who simply wanted to enter the family car without making modifications.

Viet Peace Still Major Stock Woe

The stock market opened lower and was beset by trader selling pressure throughout the morning. Again, investor disappointment over the breakdown in the secret Vietnam peace negotiations was the main cause of the sell off. A report the prime interest rate soon may rise also encouraged selling.

Amerada Hess was the most active issue, up ⅛ at 44 ¾ on 139,300 shares, including a block trade of 123,500 shares at 44, off ⅝.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were lower in moderate trading.

Increase In Hotel Earnings

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I have been given conflicting advice on what to do with my shares of Hyatt Corp. (OTC). Which should I do, hold or sell? — L.H.

A. In my opinion shares should be held. Not only are earnings expected to grow by about a 20 per cent rate over the next few years but an upward adjustment in the multiple is possible. Approximately 50 per cent of earnings are derived from the hotel business, the remainder from a hotel service operation, a hospital chain, motels and a 27 per cent interest in a Florida land company.

Hyatt's concentration is in the luxury hotel field, a relatively stable area. The company operates 25 hotels with 8,000 rooms and another 15 with 8,000 rooms are under construction or planned. Occupancy levels are up substantially over the 1971 rate and at least two of the company's hotels are operating at near capacity. Dilution from conversion of long-term debt would be immaterial because of interest savings.

Q. I have wondered for some time why Chesebrough-Pond's (NYSE) stock doesn't split. I bought it at 21+ and it is now about 87; it could split 4 ways. Lately Standard Oil of New Jersey hasn't been listed at all on the New York Stock Exchange. Is this a mistake or it is off the market? — M.D.

A. Jersey Standard is still trading actively, but under its new title, Exxon. The decision to change the corporate name was made in order to avoid confusion with the three other Standard Oil companies. At the same time the company's retail gasoline units dropped their various brand names to adopt the Exxon acronymn.

Chesebrough last split in 1964, when the shares were trading at about 60. At that time a 3-for-1 split brought the price back to the 20 level. Now trading almost 30 points higher than before the 1964 distribution, the stock is certanly a split candidate.

If and when directors propose a split, I would not anticipate an exchange greater than three shares for one.

San Rafael Lumber Firm Will Build Warehouse At Black Point

Kelleher Lumber Sales at 15 Bay Street in San Rafael will take over the 5.5-acre property of Service Lumber Co. at Black Point next March and build a new 25,000-square-foot warehouse there.

Donald J. Kelleher, wwho heads Kelleher Lumber, said he will use the new Black Point facilities for his warehouse needs and retain his office in San Rafael on Bay Street.

Service Lumber Co., which has been in operation for about 29 years (first in San Francisco, then in Sausalito and the last eight years at Black Point), will then become the Kelleher Lumber Co.

Richard Bob Gehring of Healdsburg, who has owned Service Lumber Co. since 1944, will retire when Kelleher takes over next March.

CHARLES R. DAVIS of Novato, operations officer at Crocker Bank's 16th and Mission office, has been appointed operations officer at the bank's Market-Fourth branch in San Francisco.

Davis is a 19-year veteran with Crocker Bank. He was named operations officer of the bank's Tennessee Street office in Vallejo in 1961 and served in that capacity in Sacramento, Fresno and Eureka. In 1970, Davis was named assistant manager of the bank's Novato branch, and was transferred to San Francisco this year as operations officer at 16th and Mission.

ROBERT (BOB) BRACKETT, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.R. Brackett of Terra Linda, has been named associate director of publicity at Del Webb's Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas. He was formerly publicity director at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel in Stateline, Nev.

Davis

The 26-year-old graduate of San Jose State University rejoins the Del Webb organization after two years of service in the United States Army. Brackett is a 1964 graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and attended College of Marin.

LOCH LOMOND Live Bait Shop at Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor will be sold to new owners at the end of this month.

William S. Boyle of Santa Venetia, who has owned it about a year and a half, will sell to D. Keith Fraser of San Rafael and Arthur Donati of Corte Madera. Fraser is a teacher and coach at Terra Linda High School, and Donati works for a computer firm.

The new owners will call their shop the Loch Lomond Live Bait and Tackle Shop.

R.R. BUFFI of San Rafael has been appointed senior research associate, computer and systems division, at the Chevron Research Co. in Richmond.

Buffi wn his master's degree in mathematics from Stanford University in 1955, spend two years with the United States Army, and joined Chevron Research in 1957. In his new psotion, Buffi will direct the activities of the computer operations and programming section and will act as a consultant on computer techniques.

AXEL MIKKELSEN of San Rafael has been named director of passenger marketing in the Bay Area for Pan American World Airways.

Mikkelsen is part of a new executive team headed by M. R. (Dick) Denton, managing director at Pan American's San Francisco office.

WILLIAM BUSH, San Rafael realtor, was elected a director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards during the annual convention in Hawaii last month. He will serve a three-year term. He will tkae office during special ceremonies at NAREB's midwinter meeting in New Orleans Jan. 26 to 30, 1973.

HENRY L. HICKS, Novato realtor, announced the following four additions to the sales staff of Henry L. Hicks & Associates:

Bill Garl, formerly with Womack Realty, will specialize in Novato residential land and commercial properties. His wife Billie Garl is managing secretary of the Novato Chamber of Commerce.

E. Don King, who just retired from Standard Oil Co. of California after 41 years, joined Hicks as an associate.

Joseph L. Schweitzer, former manager of the Novato branch of Bush Realty Inc., also joined as an associate, to specialize in Novato residential, land and income producing properties.

ANNEX MOTORS in San Rafael reported the sale of 51 Volvos in November, the best ever retail month for the dealer. In the 10-state western sales area, Volvo sales hit a new record, with 1,128 new cars sold, a 36 per cent increase over the same month in 1971.

Council Will Help Fund Study Of Dollar Estate

Preservationists last night won another victory in their battle to preserve the Robert Dollar estate in San Rafael as the San Rafael City Council pledged to help fund a feasibility study of the economic consequences of acquisition of the site.

Councilmen told representatives of Marin Heritage, a preservationist group, that the city will provide up to $1,000 on a matching fund basis to probe acquisition and possible uses of the historic estate on Mission Avenue.

The council asked the group to prepare a contract outlining the scope and method of the study for review on Jan. 2.

Mary C. Dekker, chairman of the group formerly known as the San Rafael Historic Preservation Committee, said the estate's recent inclusion in the National Registry of Historical Places qualified it for federal funding of up to $1,000 for the feasibility study.

Inclusion in the registry also qualifies the mansion and grounds for entry into 200 federal acquisition assistance programs, she said. She suggested that the mansion be turned into a museum or community cultural center.

Other representatives of Marin Heritage urged the council to help acquire the site as midtown open space for use by citizens throughout Marin, saying conversion of the facility into a cultural center would spur business by drawing tourists.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini said he would have to be convinced the property would pay its own way before he would vote to help finance acquisition. "The people who want to buy it must come up with most of the money," he said.

Preservationists have long fought plans by attorney Thomas R. Schaal to develop the property. Though previous development proposals by Schaal have been rejected by both the planning commission and the city council, the attorney has again filed for permits to proceed with development plans.

Schaal's latest proposal calls for a 72-unit apartment building and the renovation and relocation of the Dollar mansion on the site. The planning commission will consider the permit application at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 9.

In a related matter, the council postponed action on a proposal by Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan for an historic preservation ordinance which would create a five-member board charged with listing and preserving historic sites in the city.

The San Rafael City Council also:

CHARTER — Witnessed Boy Scout officials presenting the charter of San Rafael Explorer Post 303, a police cadet group, to Police Chief Joseph Brusatori.

BURGLAR ALARMS — Approved an ordinance regulating installation and variety of burglar and fire alarms in the city to insure quality control.

TERRA LINDA — Said one laborer and one maintenance supervisor will be hired to handle additional public works duty when Terra Linda is annexed to the city on Jan. 1. Public Works Director Norris M. Rawles had asked for four additional men.

BUNGALOW AVENUE — Upheld an appeal by Gary David of planning commission approval of a parking variance for a proposed house at 279 Bungalow Avenue. The council felt the design of a driveway would create traffic hazards and congestion.

FIRING — Affirmed after closed session the firing of police officer James Jackson for fraudulently trying to collect pay for a training session he failed to attend.

ASSESSMENT DISTRICTS — Set 8 p.m., Feb. 5, as the time of public hearings for the formation of the Bahia de Rafael Industrial Park and Mont Marin Open Space assessment plans for utility undergrounding assessment districts at Rafael Racquet Club Estates and in Villa Real.

OPEN SPACE — Said portions or all of the city's $2.5 million in open space bonds may be sold next spring.

RIGHTS COMMISSION — Struck from the agenda a request by the county Human Rights Commission for two city liaison officers after executive director Gerald J. Hood failed to appear for a second time.

BEAUTIFICATION — Heard Gary Bush, state highway district landscape architect, say the state will provide matching funds of about $9,000 for landscaping and erection of a city welcome sign at Second and Irwin streets "by the middle of 1973."

IMPACT REPORTS — Said the city will maintain its policy of requiring environmental impact reports for some development in spite of 120-day moratorium on such reports by the state legislature.

BIDS — Called for bids for a public toilet room addition to the San Rafael Library, and said bids will be opened at 3 p.m. Jan. 8 in city hall.

EXPENSE — Approved additional expense of $3,450 for a concrete stairway at 771 South San Pedro Road in connection with the San Pedro Road widening project.

CHULA VISTA — Approved a request by James Y. Meyers for two wood retaining walls at 85 Chula Vista Drive.

STOP SIGNS — Said stop signs will be placed on Lucas Drive at Montevideo Way southbound, and on Regina Way at Elda Drive.

BANKING — Called for bids by city banks on implementing a new city banking procedure that consolidates banking accounts maintained by the finance department.

LABOR RELATIONS — Approved a labor relations resolution which provides for majority representation of employee bargaining units and bans strikes by miscellaneous employees. Striking by safety personnel is already prohibited by state law.

SMOKING — Prohibited smoking in council chambers during council meetings.

FIRE COMMISSION — Said a seat on the city's fire commission, vacated by the death of Harry A. Barbier, will be filled by Jan. 2.

REDEVELOPMENT — Heard Redevelopment Agency Director and Asst. City Mgr. William J. Bielser declare the city's redevelopment plan was filed with the county assessor, the secretary of state and the state board of equalization last Wednesday. The action freezes assessed valuation in the redevelopment area retroactive to March, 1972, Bielser said.

CITIZENS COMMITTEE — Asked citizens wishing to apply to the city's 60-member citizens committee on the general plan to do so within the next 30 days.

APPOINTMENT — Appointed Robert C. Cary, Monty J. Martin, David M. Salaun and Clyde C. Zimmerman as auxiliary police officers.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Jan. 2.

Fund Lack Seems To Rule Out Park Purchase In Canal Area

The pleas of San Rafael's Canal area residents for a central city park at 310-340 Canal Street appeared to be in vain last night as the San Rafael City Council declared there is no money to buy the site. (Other San Rafael City Council stories, page 1)

The council took no action on residents' demands it acquire the site and instead accepted a parks commission report which says the parcel is uniquely situated for park purposes but that there are no funds.

The council's action came amid charges by one canal resident that inadequate planning had turned the neighborhood into a "high-priced ghetto".

"The planning department is a rubber-stamp for development," declared Ben Brinkworth of 349 Canal Street, suggesting that high-salaried planners should be replaced with a "clerk and an approval stamp."

Brinkworth said he opposed plans for a 96-unit apartment development on the parcel, citing density and traffic congestion. The planning commission has deferred action on the proposal for the six-structure development pending city council review of neighbors' objections.

Brinkworth, who has led the fight for a park on the 2.5-acre parcel, said there is "zero open space" in the Canal area and claimed that thousands of residents have been grossly over looked by the planning department and commission.

He said an alternative 17-acre park site at the corner of Canal Street and Kerner Boulevard was marshland and nothing more than a "pie in the sky" proposal.

The parks commission has recommended that the 17-acre site be considered for acquisition instead of the 2.5-acre parcel.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini, angered at Brinkworth's denunciation of city planners, said current city personnel had nothing to do with decisions made long ago that have left the Canal area in a congested condition.

"A park in the canal area is the council's and the park commission's highest priority," he said. "But that site (310-340 Canal Street) would cost about $350,000 for 2.5 acres alone." Bettini said the eventual merger of the city's sanitation district with the Ross Valley Sanitation District will leave about 25 acres of sanitation district land in the Canal area in open space.

The mayor rejected suggestions by residents and colleague Lawrence E. Mulryan that redevelopment funds be used to acquire the 2.5-acre site. "If we included this type of park in redevelopment, all the board of supervisors would vote against the plan," he said.

Mulryan said the site was appropriate for park purposes and urged redevelopment monies be considered for its acquisition regardless of the board of supervisors.
